Karnig Outlines Vision for Year
CSUSB to Receive $16 Million as Student Enrollment Skyrockets Beyond 13,000

By Xavier A. Chavez
Executive Editor

University President, Albert Karnig gave his State of the University address at the annual convocation ceremony on September 17 in front of an audience of hundreds that included students, faculty, and staff. Meeting the challenges of major growth in enrollments dominated Karnig’s vision for the 1998-99 academic year.

Karnig expects enrollment will outpace last year’s record of 13,280 and possibly increase to 14,000 students. “While we won’t know exactly until after the census date of October 14, we anticipate the largest budgetary increase ever. Ultimately, including salaries, there’s nearly a $12 million permanent addition to the university’s budget, or about a 15% rise. Moreover there are over $4 million in one time funds bringing the overall total increase to over 20%.”

This budgetary increase will help CSUSB meet the needs of growing enrollment including additional faculty and staff. “Given exceptionally good budget conditions, I believe we’ll be able to recruit in many programs now squeezed by student enrollments.”

However, Karnig has delegated many of these decisions. “Given budget decentralization those will be division decisions, those will be school decisions, not presidential decisions.”

Three new buildings are planned for CSUSB: a Social & Behavioral sciences building, a Science Addition, and an Education building. “Enrollments have been and will be essential to justify and secure new facilities.”

Karnig urged the CSUSB community to promote the 9.2 billion school bond measure on the ballot.

Faculty Pickets & Continues
To Work Without Contract

By Carrie Anne Still and Lazslo Vass
Chronicle Staff Writers

The California Faculty Association recruited professors to work an informational picket line on campus Thursday, September 24, to inform students about the union’s contract negotiations—or lack thereof.

As Margaret Perry, CPA member and professor of Theatre Arts, walked the line, working hard to gain student support for the campaign to negotiate a contract, she handed out flyers about the CSU Trustees’ unwillingness to compromise at the bargaining table. The flyer’s message, “CSUSB students need a fair faculty contract,” underlined the event’s purpose. Several on the line said faculty members need student support, or outrage, to get results.

What does the CFA want? According to the flyer, to be treated as professionals, paid a fair salary, rewarded with good benefits, and guaranteed job security.

You may be wondering what the student population thinks of these demands: well, most of those present were supportive.

“I like to have a good wage too,” or “Go for it” were common sentiments. However, some had questions.

“If it increases my tuition I am not for it; if not, then sure,” said one student, who wished to stay anonymous.

Issues are hot for both the CPA and the CSU. Susan Meisenhelder, state-wide president of the CPA, said she would like to negotiate a contract with CSUSB.

Karnig Awards CSUSB Staff for Exceptional Performance

By Xavier A. Chavez
Executive Editor

Before speaking about his vision for the year ahead at his State of the University Address, President Karnig recognized four staff members in front of an audience of hundreds that included students, faculty, and staff, for their performance last year. Mary White and Boujdee Aziry received Excellence in Performance Awards. Debbie Fox of the Political Science Department and Cynthia Shum of Admissions and Records received Outstanding Employee Awards.

The Excellence in Performance award is given to an employee that enhances productivity, promotes efficiency or effectiveness, or for a major contribution beyond that normally expected of their position. This award includes a plaque, complimentary CSUSB theatre and athletic tickets, and a $150 prize funded by The Foundation.

The Outstanding Employee Award is given to an employee who demonstrates expertise in their field, is willing to assist others, shows dedication through attendance and loyalty, and maintains positive relations with all members of the university community. This award includes a plaque, CSUSB theatre and athletic tickets, and $200 funded by the foundation and a designated parking space for one year.

Karnig described Shum as committed to the university’s mission and being student centered. Karnig quoted Shum’s supervisor as saying, “Even when asked at the last minute, she always responds effectively and enthusiastically. It’s widely known that she is willing to assist students far beyond the call of duty.”

Congratulations to the winners of the staff awards and thank you for your dedication to our students and the university!

White orchestrated the complex mailing of 8,000 invitations, coordinated the hosting of dignitaries, dealt with scholarship donations, and many other details of President Karnig’s installation ceremony last year. “Her energy and dedication contributed mightily to a team effort on a program that was seen as a highlight of the university year,” said Karnig.

Aziry is responsible for the planning and implementation of a process that allows students to receive financial aid through direct deposit. This endeavor required coordinating with bank representatives and incorporating existing systems. The first direct deposit was transmitted this past May.

November ballot. “Passage will mean that construction of the Social and Behavioral Sciences building will begin this very fiscal year, right away.”

“We should be pleased that enrollment growth is occurring because it means more students from the Inland Empire, which has by far the state’s lowest attendance rate, are pursuing higher education. That’s what we’re here for, so we ought to be thrilled!”

Right now, 20 percent of funding for faculty goes into the Merit Pay Program. The CSU wants to double it, and many CFA members are fighting this tooth and nail. CFA is certainly in favor of rewarding merit, “but we have some proposals on the table for real due process,” Meisenhelder said. She believes that faculty need to be more a part of the merit pay evaluation process.

Another issue with the CFA is health benefits. They don’t have exact figures, but they think that as much as one fourth of the faculty in the system don’t have health benefits. While concepts, a cause a real problem when you’re trying to make a career out of teaching at CSU.

The Faculty Early Retirement Program is also something that CSU wants to drastically reduce. However, the CFA contends that it is very successful, because it makes it easy for faculty to retire a little early but still do some teaching afterward.

The CFA also wants to raise minimum salary rates. At this point, an assistant professor can make less than $40,000, which, according to Meisenhelder, is not a livable wage if he or she wants to buy a house and raise a family in California. In fact, the CFA has a real problem with the state in general, as far as salary goes. Meisenhelder stated that more taxpayers’ money was going to prisons, and that, in fact, a prison guard makes more in six years with only a high school diploma, than a tenure-track professor does.

“The Merit Pay Program is here to stay,” he said. “They’ll just have to get over it.” He argues that eventually they too will get paid by the program. And as far as doubling it, he said that first they have to settle on how much money is available, and then decide on the percentage that should go to Merit Pay. Robinson believes that once the Merit Pay Program gets settled, all the other issues will fall into place.

He lamented that the faculty being harmed: “Everyone else is going to get a pay raise except faculty.” Robinson hopes that the CSU and CFA will join hands and find the fairest solution. And he believes they can—or faculty gets over the Merit Pay Program.

The two parties certainly have not folded up the bargaining table yet, and it looks like those involved might be getting a little hot under the collar. It is yet to be seen who will join hands, and who will wring necks.

America Reads....With Your Help

• State Funded Program Helps CSUSB Students Earn Money While Tutoring K - 12 Students

By Eugenia Porras
Chronicle Staff Writer

How would you like to help out a young kid and earn some cash on the side? Let me tell you, it's worth while to learn more about the America Reads Challenge, offered to all CSUSB students through the Financial Aid Office. Ted Krug, Director of the Financial Aid, says that the America Reads program began in the 1997-1998 school year and was introduced as a means to increase literacy in our nation. Nationally, 40% of elementary school children are reading below their grade level. With overcrowded classrooms, teachers don't have enough time to spend with each individual student with a reading problem.

That's where you can help. CSUSB students who apply for this state-funded program and pass the requirements of Financial Aid and of the school district, are given the opportunity to go into the communities of Colton, Fontana, Rialto and San Bernardino to work as a tutor for school children in the K-6 age group and earn a very good wage of $8-8.50 an hour. And listen to this...you choose the amount of hours you can work in the 9 month school year (generally no more than 20 hours per week). What a job!!

Look at it this way. You're significantly impacting a young child's life in a positive manner and at the same time earning the personal satisfaction of knowing that you have improved their chances of success in their future with reading skills. And hey, the money is always an added perk. All CSUSB students with a GPA of 2.5 or higher with an interest in helping, apply in Financial Aid today and ask about the America Reads program or access more information and applications on the web. http://finaid.csusb.edu

In Search of Serrano

• CSUSB Faculty Preserves Native American Culture in CD ROM's, Books, and Self

By Sarah Paetz
Chronicle Staff Writer

Every once in a while people discover something they are interested in. Then, unexpectedly it may become a part of their everyday lives. Professor of Educational Psychology Lynne Diaz-Rico has made the Serrano Indians part of her life.

Ninety percent of the world's languages die with each generation. In California, Native American languages are the ones that are dying. Serrano language, or the language of our mountains was disappearing rapidly until Professor Diaz-Rico developed an interest in it three years ago. She has dedicated herself to restoring the Serrano language and preserving the memories of the tribe.

Diaz-Rico has written a series of three books about the Serrano Indians. The first one is Stories of Serrano: Myths and Legends, this is a book of memories she has collected from the elders of the tribe.

"The hardest thing about this book was trying to understand their stories, beliefs, and legends," she said. "None of it is nonsense, it is just hard to figure out."

In writing this book, she became the only historian for the Serrano tribe. The final book, which she is currently writing, is Speaking Serrano. This book attempts to preserve the language. Her main goal for this book is for the children of the tribe to learn the language and their history.

Diaz-Rico has also developed a series of CD ROM's, on the tribe, with help from one of her grad students, Pat Amicone. One is called Culture. Another is called Serrano Journeys, which is a series of games to help the children of the tribe learn more about their culture.

And the third CD ROM, Sacred Bonds, involves the histories of Native Americans with one another.

Professor Diaz-Rico is involved in monthly language meetings with the tribe, where she actually tries to learn the language herself. She believes that if her efforts to help the children speak Serrano do not work out, at least there will be one more speaker, herself.

The second book is Seeking Santos: The History of the Serranos. In writing this book, she became the only historian for the Serrano tribe. The final book, which she is currently writing, is Speaking Serrano.

Commuter Services Offers Creative Transportation Incentives

By Paulie Kimball
Chronicle Staff Writer

Did you know commuter services offers the following services?
• Quarterly carpool decals are offered to individuals that share their ride to campus. Rideshare participants must arrive in a vehicle together. Carpool spaces are located in Lots B, C, D, and E.
• Foundation Food Service has donated 600 medium beverages (to the first 600 to sign up for a carpool decal). Beverage Coupons are provided by Commuter Services.
• Quarterly prize drawing for individuals that use an alternate mode of transportation.
• Omnitrans bus schedules are available in UH130. The bookstore sells bus passes.
• Metrolink schedules are available in UH130.
• Ridesharing (database is limited by the student requests). Other ideas: Call 1-800-COMMUTE.

Commuter Services will be establishing a Bicycle Advisory Committee. Any student interested in becoming a member of the committee should contact MS. Kobziff, as soon as possible. During the summer, 7 additional bike racks around campus were added and we hope to also add bike lanes/paths.

For more information on these and other services, call Deidre Kobziff, Transportation Coordinator (909) 880-4733

The New Chronicle

Your Newspaper In Service to Your Campus Community

Thank you for picking up the first issue of The Coyote Chronicle for the 1998-99 year. Our newspaper is going through several changes guided by our new mission statement. The Coyote Chronicle has a dual mission. The first is to be a valuable practical exercise that is accessible to all students who wish to develop their mass communication skills. The second mission is community service. The Coyote Chronicle is a valuable tool for mass communication that defines and enriches our campus and the community around us.

Our mission statement has led us to take these specific steps to improve our service to our readers:

- We are increasing our visibility on campus through the use of flyers, posters, and other promotions. Potential readers must be aware of our paper and its commitment to its readers.
- We are making extra effort to cover compelling events. For example, we are writing a series of articles that address political issues affecting students in the upcoming election.
- We are increasing our visibility on campus through the use of flyers, posters, and other promotions. Potential readers must be aware of our paper and its commitment to its readers.
- We are making access to coverage. The Coyote Chronicle has sent information request forms through the use of flyers, posters, and other materials.

Your Vote Counts More than Ever Especially with Clinton and Congressional Distractions

A major scandal has plagued our political scene for months. Exactly what the scandal is, is a matter of opinion. (Who cares anyway, right?) The fact is many issues that affect our daily lives are being missed by the media (and by our government representatives for that matter). For example, what positions on funding of the CSU do candidates and ballot initiatives really represent? Could CSU suffer after this election?

Please register to vote. Many political parties frequently run registration tables near the Student Union or in front of the Pflau Library. If you don’t have time while on campus, call 411 and ask for the Registrar of Voters in your county.

We invite you to read The Coyote Chronicle this month for political coverage from the campus point of view. Look for the Your Vote graphic that identifies our political coverage. The first article is on page six. Former Chronicle Editor and German national, Petra Mueller reports from Germany on the Green Party’s and Social Democrats’ recent coalition victory. Articles on US candidates and California ballot initiatives will follow in the next two issues.

Financial Aid

- Burn the money and the money will burn you.

By Paulie Kimball
Chronicle Staff Writer

Congratulations on your financial aid award. After books and tuition what can I spend all that money on? We all have asked ourselves that question. We plan and spend. Before we know it the money is gone and you haven’t even given a thought to the fact that the majority of the funds are loans not grants.

As the money slips through your fingertips, repayment is the farthest thing from your mind. Before you know it, it’s gone and you are already looking forward to next quarter’s aide check.

About half way through the quarter you begin to plan what goodies you will purchase with the next check. Maybe that computer or the camera you’ve always wanted. A vacation sure sounds nice as soon as the check hits the bank it’s spent.

By spring quarter you have the funds spent before you get them and you begin to panic. What is the check is late? What if I don’t get as much as I thought? Great relief, the check is late, but it is what you expected.

While all this is going on, attention is never paid to the fact that 6,000 or more is now owed to Uncle Sam and the amount will grow each quarter.

We urge you to use caution. Don’t get caught in the credit trap. Remember you may not get that great job you’ve been dreaming of, or end up injured, ill or for some reason unable to complete your schooling. The loans will be there for you to repay.

Think before you sign on the dotted line. Remember you are not obligated to accept the loans offered. No inst. FEDERAL DEPT. OF ED.

life only half as exciting as the political life of our own country this summer. This year’s elections evoked passionate arguments, crowds wherever a candidate showed, a multifarious coverage in all the media and an unusually high voter turnout. You could be either pro-change or against it. The question was whether you considered a government coalition featuring the Green party and headed by a man who loves to be sarcastic - after installment of all votes and made it into the Republic’s SED, won 51 percent of all votes, the SPD, 67 percent the left over of their old, all but demobilizing some Infrastructure in East-Germany, the Eastern German Democratic government.

While rightist parties lost ground in Germany, there’s now much power for the left. In the second governing power in Germany, the Bundestag, which represents the governments of the Laender, the SPD has been the leading party for quite some time and blocked many laws the government favored. Now, there will be no strong opposition for some time, the SPD will be able to implement important changes - if it wants to.

Will the fundamentalists of the Greens succeed in raising gas prizes to five DM per liter and in abolishing nuclear power and the German Bundeswehr? Will the SPD get industrial to train youngsters on the job and employ more people, and will the rich really pay more while the poor gain? Or will it all end up in one big mess in which taxes stay up, the debts of Germany rise even higher and fighting politicians don’t get to govern at all? While Schroeder and the Greens are discussing possible ministers and the first changes, the CDU leaders give up their posts one by one. Kohl has left the arena, but he will be the Chancellor of Germany’s Re-Unification forever. Unfortunately for him, he did not accept that, after 16 years of governing, a man can’t tell the voters he will make it all better from the 17th on. A creative mess? At least for the CDU it will be one, as the younger ones will have the opportunity to take over now. They have to accept that Germany has decided to try something, someone new. Schroeder, the charming womanizer, might succeed in diminishing unemployment, in coordinating international relations, in making history. Or he might fail in those but succeed in rejuvenating and strengthening the opposition. The election outcome might have shocked many, but in one aspect, it was a big success: It showed that new, small parties (the Greens came into existence in the 1970s) can make it to governing power, that in difficult times, German voters don’t give up, but gain interest in politics. After all, those are signs of a healthy democracy.

Anime Relief Offices
Falling for Anime’s Fall Line Up

By Corina Borsuk
Special to The Chronicle

The weather is cooling, the sun is setting sooner and students are back in class. All of this can only lead to the conclusion that fall has arrived. And, that can only mean that Anime Relief Offices! are back in business.

For those of you familiar with this column, feel free to skip down to the Anime Updates section. Otherwise, stick around to find out just a little about Anime.

Anime is a Japanese word meaning cartoon or animation. Here in North America, it refers to Japanese animation also known as Japanimation. Despite the newness of the word to English speakers, Japanese animation has been invading American airwaves for several years. “Astro Boy,” “G-Force,” “Speed Racer,” “Robotech,” “Dragonball” and “Sailor Moon” are all Anime titles.

What makes Anime different from most American animation is that Anime isn’t just for kids. There are Anime dramas, comedies, romances, action-adventures and any other genre you know of, plus a few you don’t.

If any of this sounds interesting to you, then stick around for the next few weeks and find out what Anime is all about.

Anime Updates
Animerica Extra: The people that bring you the “Animerica” magazine are launching a new publication in October called “Animerica Extra.” This manga anthology will include English translations of “X/1999,” “Fushigi Yuugi,” “Video Girl Ai” and “Steam Detectives.” Check your local comic book or Anime dealer for details.

Sailor Moon: The Cartoon Network is currently airing the first 65 episodes of the English dubbed version of “Sailor Moon.” The network plans to air the 17 new episodes that finish the second Japanese season, “Sailor Moon R.”

Kiki’s Delivery Service: Disney had finally released the first of its Miyazaki films, under the Buena Vista Home Video name. An English dubbed version of “Kiki’s Delivery Service” is available at most video retailers. The film features the voices of Phil Hartman and Kirsten Dunst.

MixxZine: The manga anthology “MixxZine” announced in July that it would no longer publish Naoko Takeuchi’s “Sailor Moon.” Instead, it will be published as part of the teen magazine “Smile,” beginning with the manga equivalent of “Sailor Moon SuperS.” The title will also continue to be offered in Pocket Manga form. Release dates for Pocket Manga are unknown at this time. “Parasyte,” “Magic Knight Rayearth” and “Harlem Beat” will continue to be published in “MixxZine.”

In two weeks:
A review of “Slayers: The Motion Picture.”

Coming soon:
Reviews of “Kiki’s Delivery Service” and “The Vision of Escaflowne,” plus more news and updates on Anime and manga.

Buffy Fans Hunt for the Slayer

By Jennifer Lynn Thierry
Chronicle Staff Writer

Buffy the Vampire Slayer fans have a new book, new season and a set of videos to sink their teeth into!

The third season of Buffy the Vampire Slayer began on Sept. 29, picking up where the second season left off. It shows us the continuing saga of the Slayer's life. Buffy's mother has found out that her daughter is the chosen one who must spend her life dispatching any gruesome creature the hell mouth they live on throws at her. Her friends are constantly in danger and the love of her life, Angel, is not only an undead vampire, but their love puts them both at risk.

Until this latest novel, The Buffy tie-in books have been released in the first or second seasons. But the newest Buffy the Vampire Slayer: "Child of the Hunt," is set in this current third season. A Renaissance faire has come to Sunnydale. The Slayer and her Slayerettes find it interesting enough to check out. But they find, under the filth, there is a really dark underworld. She must figure out a way to stop the Wild Hunt which is taking the souls of the runaways in Sunnydale, and save her new friend Roland, the sad eyed Court Jester.

The three video box set has six chosen episodes from the first season. They are a great way to catch up on the earlier episodes. They consist of the two-part pilot and other episodes that give insight into each of the characters including the first time Buffy is kissed by Angel and when she discovers his little secret, he's a vampire.

You can catch the new season every Tuesday at 8 o'clock on the WB. Buffy the Vampire Slayer: Child of the Hunt is written by Christopher Golden and Nancy Holder, is published by Pocket Books and can be purchased for $5.99. The box set is priced at $39.99 and comes in a nice box to keep the three videos safe. The book tie-ins and the new release of the videos is a must for any Buffy fan, go and check them out today!

Hypnotist Entertains Audience or Audience Entertains Hypnotist?

By Lafayette Baker
Chronicle Staff Writer

I went to see Chuck Mulligan, the Hypnotist, in the Student Events Center at CSUSB, wondering what I was in for. I could tell that the hypnotist knew a lot of people felt as uneasy as I did. Before the show he spent 15 to 30 minutes explaining what he was going to do during the program. After he finished explaining I was excited to see if he could really hypnotize people. He had 20 to 25 chairs on stage and told anyone in the audience to come up and become part of the show. That broke down any doubts about the show being fake or setup. Because most of the people that went on stage had never seen this hypnotist before, and had no reason to fake being hypnotized. He told people in the audience that they did not have to be on stage to be hypnotized and to follow his instructions. After that the show began.

The hypnotizing process took about 5 minutes; he had some weird music playing and said all kinds of words. After that he had the majority of the people on stage and some people in the audience were totally hypnotized. The stuff he had them doing after they were hypnotized was so funny I lost my voice laughing. For example, Mulligan hypnotized participants into believing they were famous entertainers such as Michael Jackson, and Madonna. Also, Mulligan would tell them they were very hot by yelling out temperatures. The higher the temperatures the more they would react. Some participants actually started to sweat.

You truly had to be there to understand how funny the show was. I felt that it was the best college program I have ever seen. When I think about the show, I still can't believe what I saw!
