Furslide’s Adventure Makes
Meanwhile... Worth a Second

By Kristin Phillips
Chronicle Staff Writer

The trio that makes up New York’s Furslide, was hoping to experiment with some versatile sounds on their debut album, Adventure. The album, produced by Nellee Hooper, is a mix of soft mellow tunes and vocals with sudden explosions of hard rock. Almost all 13 tracks, which includes a bonus track called “The Cleaning Lady,” are a mixture of these two sounds, along with engaging lyrics performed by Jennifer Turner, the band’s vocalist, who has had to deal with his latest tragedies of losing his mother and young son. Aaron released his debut solo album entitled, The Truth, which contained the platinum single “I Miss You.”

Furslide. Adventure is an album that would appeal to most alternative fans and a great start for music industry newcomers, Furslide.

Aaron Hall
CD Review
By Eugenia Porras
Chronicle Staff Writer

So have you heard — Aaron Hall’s second album, Inside of You, is now available in stores. His latest album has such titled songs as: All the Places (I Want to Kiss You), I Want Your Body, and I’ll Do Anything. With titles like these, you know he is definitely keeping up with his reputation as a lover of romance.

The release of Inside of You marks an inward journey for Aaron who has had to deal with his latest tragedies of losing his mother and young son. Aaron wrote twelve of the fourteen tracks on this album stating, “It was the only way I could do away with the hurt.”

For those of you who might not have known, Aaron was the lead singer in the 1987 group called, Guy; with such hits as “Groove Me” and “My Prerogative.” In 1993, Aaron released his new CD’s. My favorite song on this album is “None Like You” with lyrics such as “Been around the world, seen all kind of faces, but there’s none like yours. You’re a diamond in the sky, I love the way you shine.”

Some of the lyrics on the other tracks are meant for your ears only, so I’ll let you enjoy them on your own time. Most of these songs will definitely get a lot of people in the “mood and that’s always a great selling point for any artist!

Tell everyone about that great CD you just listened to. Write a review for The Chronicle and email it to us at sbchron@mail.csusb.edu
Knott's Scary Farm: So Scary I Was Scared Out of a Good Time!

By Jessy Serrao-Leiva
Chronicle Staff Writer

The two of us went to Knott's Scary Farm last weekend. I hated it, he hated it. The funny thing is, our reasons were completely opposite.

For me, it was just not entertaining. My idea of fun is not to be chased around and scared by monsters. The roller coasters were great, the show "The Hanging" was great, but the haunted houses and dark alleys were terrifying to a wimp like me.

On the other hand, he thought it was boring, not nearly scary enough, he said. Apparently a few years ago it was much scarier, and I am counting my blessings that I was not there. He said that this year there were not as many monsters walking around, nobody harassing you while you stood in line, and heck, the monsters were not even allowed to grab you anymore.

So my advice is: to those of you who are scaredy-cats like myself, stay away, at least from the haunted houses, and to those of you who liked Knott's Scary Farm back in the day, brace yourself for a disappointment, and don't drag along your easily-traumatized friends.

Out of the Ashes Rises the Vampire, Armand...

By Jennifer Thierry
Managing Editor

The four hundred year old vampire, Armand, who in a religious act gave himself to the burning light of the sun has risen from the ashes and is back. Anne Rice's new book, "The Vampire Armand," is an excellent novel that will keep you reading the whole way through.

As in her last book, "Pandora," Rice has had the fledgling vampire David Talbot coax the unwilling vampires to tell their tales of immortality. Armand, being a little weary of all the questions, finally accepts and is soon swept up into the torrent of his exquisite tale. From his mortal youth and apprenticeship under Marius, his eventual sire, through his turbulent years in Europe, and his management of the Theatre des Vampires in Paris, where mortals watched his life like "plays", little did they know how lifelike they really were. An insight into what really happened the night the porcelain doll like vampire, Claudia, died. His emotional tale reveals how he survived the sun's deadly rays and why he went into the light to begin with. The end will shock and amaze any fan of the "Vampire Chronicles." With such a surprise no one would have predicted it.

I recommend it whole heartily, it is by far one of the best of the "Vampire Chronicles", "The Vampire Armand" by Anne Rice is published by Knopf, and is in hard cover for a price of $26.95. Anyone who has read the six other installments must read this book because you get so much more insight into the lives of many of the vampires other than Armand. It will keep you hooked from page one to page three hundred and eighty eight.

Dia De Los Muertos Is “The Day of the Dead”

By Patrick R. Pittman
Chronicle Staff Writer

In Mexico once a year death is celebrated in the midst of life. Every fall, the living invite their dead to join them in a festival of communion - to return home again and for a few hours to sit and warm their cold bones before returning to the land of the dead. The Day of the Dead is being celebrated.

Dia De Los Muertos is the most important celebration in Mexico's yearly cycle of holidays. Nominally, this is the Christian feast of "All Saints" or "All Souls Day", but it is celebrated in Mexico like nowhere else in the Catholic world.

“Practical Magic” is essentially a private or family feast. It has public aspect of the community level, but the core of the celebration takes place within the family home. It is a time of family reunion not only for the living, but also the dead.

As a time of reunion, there is nothing somber or macabre about the event. The returning souls do not bring with them the odor of death, but come as spirits who have returned from another world.

The days between October 31 and November 2 are central to the day of the dead. These are the days when the household presents offerings of foods and drinks to the dead. The cleaning and dressing of graves in the cemeteries is typically carried out within the day of the dead. Decoration of tombs takes many forms.

Around the world, there are many variations to this holiday. The majority stem from the differences and similarities of the Catholic religion and Hispanic religious rituals. It is often difficult to determine the origins of particular aspects of celebrations of the day of the dead. However, it is quite clear that today the observation of this feast is a deeply rooted event that continues to be of great significance for many people.

Roving Reporter Asks: What Was Your Scariest Halloween Moment?

By Sarah Paetz • Chronicle Staff Writer

I was by myself on Halloween night and I received a phone call, "on Sunday afternoon at 6:00 I am going to come to your house and kill you and your family." Then he hung up the phone.

-Daniel Sarmiento, staff member

"On Halloween I was in my room alone and I felt someone slap me. But there was no one in the room. All night I felt a ghost was flying around in my room."

-Barbara Abraha, CSUSB student

"When I was little I was at a school dance and there was this Incredible Hulk Character there. He was chasing me all around and it scared me so much."

-Carles Abraham, CSUSB student

"I was trick-o-treating with some friends when some boys jumped out of the tree and scared us to death, then stole all my candy."

-Iwoha Luckiewicz, CSUSB student

"I went to a haunted house. I was wearing a sweater tied around my waist. My sweater hooked on a coffin with a scary monster inside of it."

La Ley is Back!!!

By Miguel Gonzalez
Managing Editor

Our pick of the week comes out of the Rock en español World and it's happening this weekend, Rock En Español Magazine La Banda Elastica sixth year anniversary and award show to the best of rock en español. On the bill headlining band La ley (from Chile), Plastilina mosh (from Mexico), Illya Kuriaki (from Argentina) and Pastilla (from the United States).

"We have managed to bring our readers the best rock bands in the industry, this is our way of saying thank you for six years of existence" says Maria Madrigal, Executive editor of the magazine. Indeed the magazine has done an excellent job at picking bands, La Ley and Plastilina Mosh are promoting their new albums and are favorites amongst fans in Southern California. Illya Kuriaki has made good impressions on previous visits and is looking to consolidate in this presentation.

Pomona's natives Pastilla will have their job cut out for them by alternating with internationally recognized bands. "We feel we are ready to alternate with international bands, this will be great exposure for us, we are very excited to play" says Victor Monroy, lead singer of Pastilla. In addition to the concert there will be a chance for fans to meet the performing artists before the show from 5:00 to 6:00 in the lobby of the amphitheater. So if you are a rock en español fan and you do not have tickets yet, what are you waiting for? This concert promises to be one to remember, I anticipate La Ley to give the best show of the evening but keep an eye on Pastilla, this band is truly about to explode. Overall, the concert should be a total success and if you miss this event look out for the review of this event on our next issue, until then rock on!

Antz Charms Audience with Familiar Voices

By Jennifer Thierry
Managing Editor

Antz is an excellent movie filled with some of today's top stars. Woody Allen, Sylvester Stallone and Sharon Stone are just a few who lend their voices to the film. The little worker ant, Z (Woody Allen), is fed up with his monotonous life. A chance meeting with the princess Bala (Sharon Stone) starts off a series of events that change all of the ants lives forever. His army ant buddy (Sylvester Stallone) trades places with him so that he can see the princess again, but instead of a nice visit with princess Z is sent to war against the termite invasion. The termites are monstrous, with huge teeth and claws and spray poisonous spit which burns the ants alive. How will he ever survive?
The computer generated ants are so life like you can see the faces of the voices beneath. The detail work was a marvel, down to the tiniest detail. Seeing the tiny world of the ants is an eye opener, to them the a tiny puddle is actually a lake, a bird bath is a monolith, and a picnic blanket including a picnic lunch, is what they call the land of red and white. They live like us, while never knowing the size of the world around them.

This was an excellent movie with a marvelous cast. I heartily recommend it to anyone looking for a few laughs. Just keep in mind next time you raise your foot to squash an ant, it could be Sharon Stone!

How the Clinton Scandal Affects California Voters

By Robin Johnson
Special to the Chronicle

The President Clinton controversy in Washington D.C. is distracting California voters. It appears press and voter interests are focused on sex and impeachment rather than important CA campaign topics like the death penalty, 3-strikes, education, or even child care programs. Campus organizer for the CA Democratic Party, Edna Flores, suggests "since this is a non-presidential election year, most people have forgotten about the governorship and how important the election is. Instead, most voters are concentrating on Clinton controversies." However, Ms. Flores did report that CSUSB students seldom commented on the Washington scandal while she collected democratic voter registration on campus recently. Flores stressed "the California Governor has tremendous power over California. Many students are not aware the governor determines major decisions like class size, financial aid awards, work study programs, and even professor's pay."

After hearing Flores' comments, CSUSB sophomore Tawny Aguiar confirmed, "I didn't realize the governor did those things! If I didn't know, then I'm sure many of my friends don't know either!" Joe Ludwig, the Chair of Young Republicans for Riverside County, reported party headquarter surveys have determined defending the Clinton scandal, both parties are about even in the polls so far. The opposition, headed by big Nevada casinos, claims that Prop 5 isn't about allowing tribes to operate casinos on their own land. It is about a dramatic expansion of unregulated, untaxed casino gambling throughout California. The tribes also believe Prop 5 is a way to huge Indian casinos to open throughout California.

This is not true. Native American-owned casinos can only open on reservations. They do pay taxes: they pay state and federal taxes. And those taxes go to the government. I believe that this is a grave attempt by non-gaming supporters to keep existing or rising Native American casinos down. It's absurd that the government tries to limit the gaming the Indians already have. This would be the second time in history that the government has gone back on its promise concerning Native Americans. This is why existing Indian casinos are spending so much money to support Prop 5. They want to ensure their survival and promote fairness.

If you think that Indian casinos are bad for the community, think again. San Manuel has donated thousands of dollars to schools in the community such as, Belvedere Elementary, Cajon High, Colton High, Eisenhower High, and yes, even Cal State San Bernardino among others. Indian tribes in general, such as the San Manuel, provide many jobs and money for the community.

Another role that C.E.T.A., and its members play in the lives of animals is the protection of wild creatures. The latest battle being waged is Proposition 4. Proposition 4 will ban the use of steel-jawed legholds, snares, and Conibear traps that are used for recreational trapping and/or the commercial fur trade. Proposition 4 also looks to ban the use of Compound 1080 and sodium cyanide, both very lethal poisons used by ranchers to protect their cattle. The major argument for the proposition is that both the traps and the poisons are non-discriminate and very brutal killers. The leghold traps will catch anything that crosses their path, target animal or not. Then the victims are subjected to a long slow death. The poisons don't protect so much as they kill. Usually, the one will be killed during the attack. Then the offending animal will wander off and die, after which point it will be eaten by a host of other creatures, who in turn will die as well.

Hence the poisons cause a far-reaching circle of death throughout the ecosystem. Cage traps are being offered as a more humane and less destructive alternative. Whether it's teaching in class, working through the C.E.T.A. or sitting on the board of the Humane Society, Dr. Finsen is trying to educate people. Any student taking one of her courses will likely meet one of her pigs or a turkey. She asks students the same types of questions that she has asked herself. She encourages them to think philosophically at the questions of animal rights.

So, as you can see, Dr. Finsen is a very busy and dedicated woman. I saw it firsthand. I went to her house to see these pigs. I watched her feed them. I watched her feed them again. It takes a lot of time and money to help these animals, both of which Dr. Finsen seems to be content to give. She estimates that it runs about $1000 dollars a month to feed the animals that she has on her property. About 80 percent of that money comes out of her own pocket. I wish that I was as dedicated towards a cause as she is.

VOTE NOV. 3

What is Prop 5? Prop 5 protects Native Americans' rights to have land of their own. It also helps maintain self-reliance among California Indians, keeping them off welfare.

The opposition, headed by big Nevada casinos, claims that Prop 5 isn't about allowing tribes to operate casinos on their own land. It is about a dramatic expansion of unregulated, untaxed casino gambling throughout California. The tribes also believe Prop 5 is a way to huge Indian casinos to open throughout California.

This is not true. Native American-owned casinos can only open on reservations. They do pay taxes: they pay state and federal taxes. And those taxes go to the government. I believe that this is a grave attempt by non-gaming supporters to keep existing or rising Native American casinos down. It's absurd that the government tries to limit the gaming the Indians already have. This would be the second time in history that the government has gone back on its word concerning Native Americans. This is why existing Indian casinos are spending so much money to support Prop 5. They want to ensure their survival and promote fairness.

If you think that Indian casinos are bad for the community, think again. San Manuel has donated thousands of dollars to schools in the community such as, Belvedere Elementary, Cajon High, Colton High, Eisenhower High, and yes, even Cal State San Bernardino among others. Indian tribes in general, such as the San Manuel, provide many jobs and money for the community.

I have worked at San Manuel Indian Bingo and Casino in Highland for almost four years, the longest time that I have ever worked anywhere. I enjoy working there, its fun, exciting and there are a lot of decent people who frequent the casino.

But now, if Prop 5 doesn't pass, I will lose my job along with many other hard working people. It will not only effect San Manuel but 85 other tribes. I am not just concerned about losing my job, but about those with families to support. Many San Manuel employees have worked the seven since opened, a good and fair working environment has fostered great loyalty.

San Manuel came to a community in need, let the community return its favor. Vote Yes on 5. It is the least we can do on November 3, and your vote does count. Yes on 5!
Nine Countries Represented at ISA Soccer Tournament

By Takayoshi Honda
Chronicle Staff Writer

Do you remember how you were excited about the World Cup three months ago? Well, students who are desperately eager to play soccer could not wait another four years to feel the thrill the World Cup competition.

On Oct. 17, the International Student Association (I.S.A.) hosted a soccer tournament in which international and American students patriotically competed.

Students from nine different countries participated in the tournament.

"This event is planned for students to interact with students from other countries through sports," said the vice-president of I.S.A., Masaki Kusumori.

"This is also a good opportunity for "ice breaking," since we have hundreds new international students this quarter, and there are not many opportunities for all students, from freshman to seniors, to do something together."

As Masaki says, many international students feel that they have increasingly less chances to interact with students in different school years. The same is true for students of the same nationality.

Toshimitsu Fujii, a member of Japanese soccer team, says, "Since most international students, especially freshmam, would experience some difficulties in learning at a university because of less knowledge about the school and problems with English, we should exchange more information and help each other out."

After the games, soccer fans held a party to get to know each other better. Some were talking about holding a game routinely.

Here is the good news for those who are crazy about not only soccer but other sports. Now, I.S.A. is planning to sponsor some sport each quarter. So, if you want to play sports with friends from ISA.

Other countries, you would better check the information coming from I.S.A.

GRAY DAVIS supports:

Quality, accessible and affordable universities that are well staffed, well funded and well governed.

That’s why CSU San Bernardino faculty & staff are voting for GRAY DAVIS for Governor

GRAY DAVIS’ HIGHER EDUCATION PRIORITIES

by Gray Davis
Lt. Governor and Democratic Candidate for Governor

I believe that today’s global, high-tech economy demands that Californians have maximum access to top-notch higher education opportunities. Compared to the ultimate cost to the taxpayer of a less-productive, less competitive labor force, public higher education is dirt cheap. Proper funding of the needs of California’s Community Colleges, the University of California and The California State University will be one of my top priorities.

As Governor, I will work with all parts of the community to help obtain funding for university research that will lead to the development of new industries, create new jobs and fill existing jobs effectively.

I recognize that an educated workforce now requires more college and university preparation than ever before in history. I am committed to working with all segments of education to ensure that students who seek higher education will be properly prepared to succeed in the most competitive of environments.

I am experienced through my past service on the California State University Board of Trustees and the University of California Board of Regents. I know that California’s community colleges and universities have always been the best in the world, but I also know that they must be strengthened and treated like an endangered resource or they will not be able to handle the increased demands now placed upon them. I am committed to expanding California’s colleges and universities by ensuring that new campuses and facilities are constructed wherever and whenever the need justifies.

I will work to ensure that the California economy and the state’s social infrastructure will be well served by a higher education system that provides wide access and affordability. Funding of all California public colleges and universities must be stable over time. Access to a high quality education should not be denied by the imposition of unreasonably high student fees.

As Governor, I will provide the education leadership necessary throughout California’s schools to guarantee that students seeking admission to California’s universities are well prepared to read, write and understand mathematics at a level necessary to compete successfully at the higher education level.

Please join with us on November 3 to elect Gray Davis
Governor of California
