In order for students at CSUSB to continue matriculation for fall 1999, all remedial course work in mathematics and English must be completed, and those students must be enrolled in appropriate GE courses on the first day of the Fall 1999 quarter.

Students who entered CSUSB as Freshmen during fall 1998 are required to complete their Basic Skills courses in math and English composition during the first four quarters of attendance. In the 1998-99 Catalog of Programs on page 48 it states the CSU system statement regarding the Mandatory Basic Skills policy. It reads: “Students must complete the Basic Skills courses during the first year of enrollment unless granted and exception. Failure to meet these requirements will result in the ending of matriculation.”

Entry Level Mathematics (ELM) and English Placement Test (EPT) can meet these remedial requirements for Basic Skills courses if they pass the tests.

Data shows 1093 Freshmen entered in the fall 1998, and a total of 994 of these students were tested for the EPT/ELM. The rest of these students were exempted due to passing of the AP tests in math and English, high SAT or ACT scores, or took college math/English courses while they attended high school.

Of the 994 students who took the ELM test 72% that tested for math needed to be enrolled in remedial math. Also, of the 994 students who took the EPT test 57% that took the test needed to be enrolled in remedial English. Beginning of fall 1998, all students who transferred in from the community college must have already completed the GE math and English requirement, along with Speech Communication & Critical Thinking.

A remediation course is required if a student fails either the ELM or EPT exam. A C average must be maintained in the remediation class the student is taking or they are advised to complete more remedial work at a local community college. Any remediation class will not earn any credit.

Overall in the CSU system the number of fall 1998 entering freshmen who required remediation in math and English leveled off at 54% and 47% systemwide, according to a report presented to the Board of Trustees at the March meeting. The CSU officials plan to hopefully reduce freshmen remediation levels in the future with specific programs.

There are basic skills workshops and additional remedial summer courses offered at the university. In the past, ELM workshops have been very helpful. The Learning Center offers remedial workshops in math and English.

Senators To Investigate Allegations Of Racism Against FSU Professor

State senators are preparing to launch a formal investigation of whether Florida State University professor Glayde Whitney, who says blacks are genetically inferior to whites, has shared those views with students in publicly funded classrooms.

In a letter to the Florida Senate President-Toni Jennings, the Senate committee, assisted by constitutional scholars, will report back to the legislature next spring.

The decision, confirmed on Thursday by Sen. Daryl Jones, D-Miami, means the legislature will wade into the delicate issue of academic freedom.

Cummins administrators, even after Whitney wrote a glowing tribute to former KKK grand wizard David Duke this year, have shied away from taking formal action against the tenured psychology professor. But the public interest may outweigh academic rights under some circumstances, Jones said.

"Should such a divisive viewpoint be promulgated with the use of tax dollars?" Jones said. "Does freedom of speech permit you to set forth such philosophies through the use of tax dollars? That's where we're heading."

Cummins said a Senate committee would also investigate whether Florida's public universities should receive grant money from private organizations that are considered racist.

A portion of Whitney's research is financed by the Pioneer Fund. The private trust fund in New York has supported controversial research for 20 years - much of it designed to show that blacks are genetically inferior to whites.

Integrated Marketing and Communications

By Paulie Kimball
Chronicle Staff Writer

The CSUSB communications and marketing departments have joined forces to offer an Interdisciplinary Master of Arts Degree. Advertising, communications, marketing and public relations classes will be combined for the degree. As with all master’s programs here at the university, the student will be required to complete a total of 20 units as prerequisite classes and 48 Units from 24 courses at the advanced level. Pre-requisite classes can be completed at the undergraduate level.

This program will offer the student a more well rounded education as well as great practical experience. Dr. Nabil, department chair of marketing said that, “After completion of this degree, students will have a vast variety of employment opportunities. Just some of the fields that will be open are: marketing, advertising, account executive, public relations and consulting.” He also said that by having such a diverse degree would give the student more skills in the job market.

No Confidence In Chancellor Reed

By a vote of 396 in support of the resolution versus 31 opposed to the resolution, the faculty of CSUN passed the following RESOLUTION OF NO CONFIDENCE IN THE CHANCELLOR.

WHEREAS, Chancellor Reed has failed in public appearances before community leaders and others to present the real and substantial contributions of the faculty of the California State University, instead depicting faculty productivity as low, disparaging the faculty’s work ethic, and demeaning the faculty’s contributions to student learning; and,

WHEREAS, Chancellor Reed did not continue negotiations under the collective bargaining process but urged the Board of Trustees to impose a salary schedule and working conditions on the faculty of the California State University that was substantially worse than what he had accepted in the Tentative Agreement; and,

WHEREAS, Chancellor Reed has refused to negotiate any due process measures whereby presidential decisions concerning merit salary awards may be reviewed and made accountable, thereby undermining shared governance and demeaning the traditions of peer review and professional judgment in the CSU; and,

WHEREAS, the Statewide Academic Senate has rebuked Chancellor Reed for his uncivilized statements and demeanor; and,

WHEREAS, Chancellor Reed has lost the confidence of the academic senates of several of the California State Universities; BE IT RESOLVED, that the faculty of California State University, Northridge no longer have confidence in Chancellor Reed’s leadership of the California State University.

A Republican Voice Is Heard

By Mindy C. Stevenson
Chronicle Staff Writer

The CSU San Bernardino College Republicans was recently chartered as a chapter of The California College Republicans, a state-wide organization. The purpose of this club is to help elect Republicans to office, represent the Republican Party on campus, and to promote and contribute to an informed student body and increase awareness.

Last weekend three delegates from CSUSB College Republicans attended this year's annual California College Republicans (CCR) convention. It was held this year at the Holiday Inn Ventura Beach Resort at the airport in California.

Dick Phillips is a man with a mission. For months now the Cal State San Bernardino campus has been littered with fliers and posters by Phillips accusing ASI (Associated Student Incorporated) of corruption, embezzlement, and not doing its job. He's urging the students to vote to abolish the mandatory ASI fee that Cal State students pay with their tuition to support ASI and ASI run programs.

The fees amount to about $36 a year if you include summer school tuition. Phillips believes we aren't getting what we pay for. Phillips holds the personal opinion that ASI isn't doing their job, and this is the driving force behind his campaign. Phillips is leading the crusade to abolish the ASI fees because "They should ask for money... Most students are ignorant of its existence and very few people benefit from it." ASI president T.J. Wood claimed that "Dick Phillips doesn't know what he's talking about" and that "[The students care and will be negatively affected if the fees are abolished]." ASI mandatory fees provide funding for such services as Emergency Student Loans, Children's Center, Legal Clinic, Program funding for the Cross Cultural Center and Women's Resource Center, and the student voice at Administrative Counsel meetings.

Phillips said that contrary to popular belief, his primary goal is not to make ASI look bad, but to put his initiative on the ballot so that the students can decide whether they want to pay for the services that ASI provides. The problem with this is that under Executive Order 661, which outlines which fees at a university have to be mandatory and which fees can be voluntary, the Student Body Association fee falls under the "mandatory fee" category. In State Education Code 89300, it states that one can put a referendum on the ballot to abolish the fees with ten percent of the student body's signature, and it would pass with two thirds of the student body's approval. The only other option to abolishing fees would be to lower fees. Phillips prefers to abolish.

One of the main concerns addressed through ASI literature is the issue of funding for the Children's Center on campus, which provides day care services to students' children. Phillips pointed out that abolishing ASI fees wouldn't do away with services such as child care; it would only decrease its budget.

Kimberly Harris, director of the Center said, "Hopefully we wouldn't have to close if ASI funding gets cut, but we would have to cut about a quarter of our services." Out of a total budget of $200,000 for the Children's Center, ASI funding accounts for $24,000.

Phillips claimed the only change that would have to occur for the funding to be made up is that more students would have to pay for their childcare instead of it being free.

According to Harris, roughly 30% of the student body's signature, and it would pass with two thirds of the student body's approval. The only other option to abolishing fees would be to lower fees. Phillips prefers to abolish.
The Kings and Queens of High School

A Look at the Dangers of High School Hierarchy

By Kiki Malanchurull
Chronicle Staff Writer

For anyone who has gone to high school, the word "popularity" has a distinct meaning. Either you were, or you weren't. And it can cause pain and hurt on both sides. So why is it there? Who put it there? What makes a person popular? Recently, as I'm nearing the end of my first year in college, I'm starting to look back at my time in high school, and I started to reflect on the effects that popularity had on all of us and the effects that it has on teenagers all over the word.

In the wake of the Littleton tragedy, many people are taking a closer look on just how important the role of popularity plays in such conflicts. Is the underlying cause for such rage really the fact that these kids were outcasts? I say yes. Social classes in high school are pretty distinct. There are the jocks, the cheerleaders, the smart kids, the rebels, the nerds, and the outcasts, just to name a few. Every one of these groups is persecuted in some way or another, whether they realize it now or not. Tremendous pressure is put on all these groups to be or act in a certain way, and I believe that this can be destructive to developing anyone's personality.

Before this turns into a psychologically mucky article about how everyone should be loved and everyone should hold hands and sing "Shiny Happy People," let me clarify my purpose for writing this article. It's frustrating to me to see people put into a category and then persecuted for it. The popular kids, the jocks, and cheerleaders feel a need to always be perfect. The smart kids likewise feel pressure to always turn in their work and always get A's on everything. There's just doesn't seem to be room to slip. I believe that putting kids and young adults into groups like these is stifling individuality which can be tragic when it comes time for you to decide what you want to do with your life. You have to have a clear sense of your true personality in order to make such important decisions, and I think that when you are so busy trying to be someone that maybe you're not just to be accepted, it can lead to confusion.

Another huge problem that comes with social classes is the treatment of each class. I'm sorry to say that in my school, although the popular kids did suffer some sort of persecution for having to be perfect, the most persecution was suffered by the others. This seems to be a recurring fact in high schools throughout America. What I wonder is, how come being popular is considered better? Why wouldn't anyone even consider tripping someone popular, but no one really thinks twice about pushing the nerd with the big glasses? The fellow students of the two Columbine High Schools who went on a shooting rampage, apparently targeting jocks and the more popular students as they went, called the boys "outcasts". A chilling quote from a popular student at Columbine summed it up. "They weren't my friends. They were just outcasts."

It is inevitable that people will form groups. This is simply human nature. Birds of a feather flock together, right? Not only is this inevitable, but it's necessary because, as I stated before, not everyone can "just get along." What I see though in place of groups of friends and colleagues is a circuit of resentment and competition between the groups, which can lead to violence. Those boys in Littleton had some very deep-seated problems that caused them to express their rage in such a violent and devastating manner. There is no excuse for their actions. There is however, an excuse for the rage that apparently caused their actions. You can't sit back and watch a kid be undermined and picked on all his or her life and expect them to be okay. It just doesn't work that way.

With the recent rise of school violence, particularly in high schools and statistically more likely to come from an "outcast," something has to be done. It's worth every effort to dispel the feelings of pressure and inferiority created among all the social classes in high school. The social classes have been around for so long that many people don't know if there's anything that we can do to stop it at this level. Popularity and inferiority are now becoming an inevitable part of the inevitable groups. I don't know if we can stop it either, but what I do know is that high school should be a time to grow and live, not a time to die.

percent of the students whose children are in the center don't pay, and the center is refunded partially by state grants and partially by contributions from ASI. Phillips said "It's not our responsibility to pay for [things like] other people's child care."

Wood said ASI does its best to provide helpful services to students and provide fun activities to help students get involved on campus. According to Wood, San Bernardino has the lowest ASI budget in the Cal State system, and Wood thinks that this is one of the leading reasons why CSUSB is mainly a commuter campus and has few student services. Wood believes that abolishing the fees, would oblige all hope of increasing student activities, expanding the radio station, and giving a bigger voice for the CSUSB students all over California.

"We suffer as it is. For Dick Phillips to take away the little money we have is tragic for our campus," said Wood.

Phillips laughed when asked about his response to the ASI counterattacks. He called them "Emotional pleas to protect stipends and unnecessary fees." Wood countered by citing Phillips literature, which were mainly personal attacks on Wood.

In response to why he chose the more personal route to attacking ASI, Phillips said with a laugh, "A lot of the stuff I do is to piss them off."

The real issue however is not the personal attacks, but the initiative. Phillips plans to start collecting signatures within the week to put his initiative on the ballot this quarter. So it's up to the students to decide for themselves. Do they want to abolish ASI fees and possibly lose a lot of services that they might take for granted on campus? Time will tell.

What Happened to Traditional Family Values?

By Mindy C. Stevenson
Chronicle Staff Writer

Teased in elementary school, manipulated in middle school and finally outcasts in high school, these people are forced to deal with emotional stress that most popular and non-suppressed people could not comprehend.

No one chooses to be an outcast, it just happens; but parents should have the strength to keep their children feeling loved enough at home to stop their children from reacting violently towards their peers. I'm sure that the situation: hatred at school beyond means, then not loved or admired at home. How would you feel? I think that, if we didn't swiftly return to traditional family values and properly raise our children with unconditional love, nurturing and support, we're going to see a lot more Littleton, Colorado episodes.

Two-parent homes are essential for children to be raised and become "normal," productive members of society. Today, too many people are divorcing, too many single mothers are having children, and too many moms are part of the work force. I understand the mentality of women today, being that I'm a woman and I'm living through this age. Many women have the desire to work. But when I become a mother my children will become my occupation. Many women do not want to marry, but most women want to have children and having children should not be mixed with working and not having a father at home.

A famous phrase states, "A woman's place is in the home." Women have the innate ability to be nurturers to their children. It is built within us. How can a woman be a nurturer to her child if her child is being raised by a day care center with several other children to tend to?

If a woman chooses to have a child, it is her responsibility to raise and nurture that child. Most women disagree with me. They argue that women should have the choice to be a part of the work force. I agree, but you must ask yourself, does your child deserve to be raised by day care simply because you want to work? Many women speak of anti-abortion and a child's right to live, then they turn around and work, which results in neglecting their children. Don't children have a right to be raised properly as well?

The boys in Colorado who did the killing did have two-parent homes. That is one step in the right direction. Neither of them had a stay-at-home mom. One had a stay-at-home father, but he worked at home and most likely did not have sufficient time to nurture and love his son as much as he needed to be loved.

Both of these families were also somewhat, based on what little we know, at least a little dysfunctional. Yet in the media, the blame is not there. The media is continually blaming the gun store owner, violence in the media, music, Hollywood and even Gothics, who have nothing to do with the Trench Coat Mafia. Violence to some seems the only way to get revenge.

These boys were misled; they believed that the students who teased them at school were to blame for their unhappiness and anger. The truth is, their parents are to blame because teasing doesn't lead most outcasts to violence, only those who aren't loved at home. So who is really responsible for the killings in Colorado? The parents of the misled, unhappy boys who did the killing.

come the oppositional struggles of years?

due in part to these differences.

conflicts between the genders are described in Men and Women in Communication, "You Just Don't Understand: Men and Women in Search of the Differences in Communication that have plagued them for thousands of years."

Social scientists have examined the differences in communication styles of men and women in search of this answer. Many relational conflicts between the genders are due in part to these differences. Books like John Gray's, "Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus" and Deborah Tannen's, "You Just Don't Understand: Men and Women in Communication," describe definite, gender-linked patterns of communication. These studies indicate that the gendered relationships indicate that emotional disclosure is not the only measure of close relationships. Although women do value personal talk more, men grow close to one another by doing things together. Shared activities among men foster closeness. This difference can explain some misunderstandings that arise between the sexes. A man's bid for intimacy may include fixing things around the house. But these favors may be overlooked by the woman who values emotional disclosure as a measure of affection.

In his book, "Divorce Talk: Women and Men Make Sense of Personal Relationships," C.K. Reisman noted, "Whereas many women think of sex as a way to express an intimacy that has already been developed, men are more likely to see it as a way to create that intimacy."

Gender communication struggles are also prevalent in the workplace. Deborah Tannen addresses this subject in her book, "Talking From 9 To 5: How Women's and Men's Conversational Styles Affect Who Gets Heard, Who Gets Credit, and What Gets Done at Work."

According to Tannen, women in positions of authority are particularly challenged, because the way that women are expected to talk, is often at odds with traditional images of authority. Women are expected to present beliefs as opinions and to be polite in their requests. But a woman who talks in this way is seen as lacking in authority.

Even in the use of pronouns, women and men differ. Tannen's research suggests that women more typically use "we" pronouns to describe accomplishments, even though they were completed without assistance. This way of talking seems appropriate to avoid sounding arrogant but camouflages women's achievements. Men, by contrast, use "I" pronouns, suggesting sole responsibility for contributions and projects in the office.

Countless books have been published emphasizing the differences between the sexes. Literally millions of readers are exploring the struggle that has clouded the relations of men and women for thousands of years. Our increased awareness of the issue has prompted significant social changes in the last thirty years. But the breakdown of traditional sex roles and stereotypes has caused some uncertainty as we attempt to re-establish our own maleness and femaleness. Yet, as John Welwood wrote, "The current upheaval going on within men and women also provides an opportunity to uncover a more essential maleness and femaleness, concealed beneath our old conventional roles."

Indeed we have come to realize that masculine qualities do not belong to men alone, any more than feminine qualities belong to women alone. Welwood wrote that we all have access to a full spectrum of masculine and feminine energies, beneath any stereotypes of manliness and womanliness.

Combining these energies allows a new kind of creative alliance as we recognize each other as whole human beings. The result of this understanding allows us to change our view of masculine and feminine, from oppositional to complementary.

Woman2: Do you think so? I wasn't sure when she gave me the mirror. I mean, you don't think it's too fluffy looking?
Woman1: Oh my gosh, no! It's perfect. I'd love to get my hair cut like that, but I think my face is too wide. I'm pretty much stuck with this stuff I think.
Woman2: Are you serious? I think your face is adorable! And you could easily get one of those layer cuts; that would look so cute I think. I was actually going to do that except that I was afraid it would accent my long neck.
Woman1: Oh, that's funny! I would love to have your neck! Everything to take attention away from this two-by-four I have for a shoulder line.
Woman2: Are you kidding? I know girls that would love to have your shoulders. Everything drapes so well on you. I mean, look at my arms; see how short they are? If I had your shoulders, I could get clothes to fit me so much easier.

¡Viva México! ¡Yo soy Chicano! I am an American! I am Mexican! ¡Viva Los Estados Unidos! I helped build this country. I fought for this country. But who am I? What am I?

Mestizaje

Mestizaje is anyone of Mexican descent who was born in the United States. There are many families of Mexican descent that have lived north of the Rio Grande for hundreds of years. In fact, 1998 marked the 150-year anniversary of the end of the Mexican-American War (1846-1848), which added most of the states between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean to the territory proper of the United States of America. These states included: Arizona, California, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, Utah, as well as portions of Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Wyoming.

The term “Chicano” began to be used most frequently around the turn of the century. At that time a grassroots movement was emerging among the Mexican lay people, calling for the restructuring of the class, economic, government, and social systems in México. This movement came to be known as the Mexican Revolution. The most visible and vocal leaders of the movement were: Francisco I. Madero, Francisco “Pancho” Villa (born Doroteo Arango), and Emiliano Zapata.

As the revolution gained momentum, the people began pronouncing the words “México” and “Mexicano(s)” with the Nahua/ Aztec language enunciation of the syllables. Instead of saying “Me-hee-ko” and “Me-hee-ka-no,” they were pronounced “Me-shew-ko” and “Me-shew-ka-no.” This was done in defiance of the still Spanish ruling class, as well as a resurgence of the indigenous and Mestizo see...

Are you already experiencing the continuous sneezing, watery eyes and the stuffy nose which attacks people every spring season? Certainly, you are tired of being victimized by pollen, dust, cat hair or the Santa Ana wind, right? Understanding what an allergy is may help you to find ways to cope...

An allergy is your body’s response to one or more substances recognized by your immune system as foreign substances, and called allergens in medical terminology. Every time a person is exposed to these allergens, their body will react causing physical symptoms.

Most people can tolerate exposure to these substances without difficulty, but allergy sufferers are highly sensitive to these allergens. The level of sensitivity a person has for a particular substance is called the “allergic threshold.”

The allergic threshold can be high or low and depends on how much exposure the person has to the substance causing the reaction. For instance, if the person has a small exposure to allergens and experiences high symptoms, he or she is considered to have a low allergic threshold. In other words, these people cannot tolerate exposure to this substance. However, when a person is a lot of exposure and experiences a few symptoms, their allergic threshold is high, meaning that he or she can tolerate this particular substance more than other people. Knowing what particular allergens you are sensitive to is important and allows you to control your allergy symptoms by reducing your exposure.

Some practical tips may help you too. For example: Reducing humidity to less than 50% and reducing the temperature inhibits the growth of dust mites and molds which are allergy causing agents. Also, you can remove your bedroom carpet or encase your mattress in special fabric. Use high efficiency air cleaners. Give your pet a bath. Wash the walls of your house and let air circulation flows. Correct outdoor drainage problems. Avoid camping or walking in the woods.

Remember, the objective is to reduce your exposure to control your physical symptoms. Avoid discomfort and enjoy this spring season.

Benefits of Soy

By Danielle Stewart

Design Editor

Soybeans are one of the oldest cultivated plants known to man. They have been a staple in the diet of Asian countries for over 4,000 years. Soybeans are a hard dry bean that belong to the legume family, the same family as peas and lentils. Soybeans are richer in protein than other legumes and most other plant foods. Soybeans are high in fiber also. They contain several B vitamins and are rich in iron. Calcium is another characteristic of soy. Soy is a complete protein, which means it contains all essential amino acids. Soy products have always been known for their nutritional qualities but are now becoming recognized for their scientific qualities.

The National Cancer Institute sponsored an international symposium on the beneficial effects of phytoestrogens in food for preventing cancer. The main focus was soybeans because they contain isoflavones, which are a type of phytoestrogen. Isoflavones found in soy may reduce the risk of osteoporosis, cancer and heart disease. One of the primary isoflavones is genistein. According to the American Soybean Association (ASA), more than 100 studies have demonstrated genistein's anticarcinogenic effects. It works as an antiestrogen, a chemical which reduces hormone related cancers such as breast cancer. It may also inhibit tumor growth. Isoflavones may also help to prevent other types of cancer as well, including, prostate, lung, and colon cancer. Other studies show that isoflavones make bones more dense, preventing osteoporosis. They have also shown to be helpful in relieving symptoms of menopause like hot flashes.

Studies show that consuming as little as one-half cup of soy a day can reduce the risk of cancer and other diseases, namely heart disease. Soybeans are a cholesterol free so they won’t cause the walls of the arteries to thicken and clog, but now there is evidence that they have a cholesterol lowering effect. Research now concludes that there is a link between soy consumption and reduction in coronary heart disease. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) proposes to put a health claim on all soy products letting consumers know about the benefit of consuming a mere 25 grams a day in accordance with a diet low in saturated fats.

The soybean has been the focus of extensive research by the FDA, the NSA, and doctors and scientists around the world. The conclusions are, soy is a benefit to human health when at least 25 grams are consumed a day. Such benefits include prevention of cancer, increased bone density, reduction in tumor growth, and a decrease in cholesterol level and relief from menopausal symptoms. There are many soy products available that can be added to the every-day diet like: soy milk, cheese, butter, flour, protein powder, sprouts, soy meat, tofu, tempeh, miso, oil, nuts, and whole beans. These foods can be consumed with a regular diet or used as an animal protein replacement, either way the benefits are abundant.

“All It Takes Is One Major Traffic Accident To Create A Shortage.”

By Mike R. McRaven

Chronicle Staff Writer

The Blood bank of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties will be holding a blood drive this Wednesday, May 26th from 10:30 am to 3:30 pm, at CSUSB. Blood donors are always urgently needed, as it takes 350 donations every day throughout San Bernardino and Riverside counties just to meet existing blood demands. Also, as blood is perishable and can only be stored for 42 days once drawn, large amounts of blood cannot be stockpiled.

"We have a saying in this business," said Tammy Rotellini, Public Relations Director for the Blood Bank, "Never say you're doing well. All it takes is one major surgery or traffic accident where a patient requires a lot of blood, to create a shortage."

Anyone can give blood; provided they are at least 17 years old, weigh at least 110 lbs, are in good health, and lead a healthy lifestyle. The entire donation process, which includes a 15-20 minute recovery period in the lounge (with free O.J. and cookies), takes about an hour.

"Many, many of our donors tell us they leave with a good feeling, knowing they've helped save a life... We recently had a donor who's given over 40 gallons of blood in his lifetime. That's 320 times he's rolled up his sleeve to help someone else," Rotellini said.

If you would like to help save a life before May 26th, there are five regional donation centers (San Bernardino, Riverside, Ontario, Upland and the High Desert) open 7 days a week, as well as numerous mobile blood drives held throughout the region weekly. For more information on donation, call the Blood Bank of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties at 1-800-879-4484.

Reads From Her Novel, I Been in Sorrow’s Kitchen and Licked Out All the Pots

By David Cade
Chronicle Staff Writer

For anyone who maintains that this is a commuter college and nothing much ever happens here, they should have been at the Susan Straight reading in the lower commons recently.

Straight, overflowing with energy, wit and charm, read excerpts from her second novel, I Been in Sorrow’s Kitchen and Licked Out All the Pots. Often Pausing for reflection or a funny tid-bit, Straight entertained over thirty teachers, students and aspiring writers—not to mention the notable novelist James Brown.

By way of introduction, the award winning poet and scholar B.H. Fairchild began the evening by saying, “Susan Straight is a somewhat talented, having grown up in Riverside in racially mixed neighborhood, and a talent she is. She is the recipient of a Juggenheim Fellowship, and her first novel Aquaboogie, a novel of stories, received the prestigious Milkweed National Fiction Prize.

“Of Aquaboogie, none other than the eminent novelist Joyce Carol Oates said, ‘Susan Straight is a remarkable writer...’ there is no new emerging voice this past decade more exciting, more surprising and more richly human than her.”

“Her most recent novel, The Gettin’ Place,” Fairchild continued, “is a black studies editors recommended book, which mentions her prose as absolutely faithful to the black experience.”

During the question and answer session following her reading, Straight recounted how an older black woman from the south inspired the novel and the character of Marietta Cook.

Affectionately called Big Mama, this larger than life woman lived in the Riverside neighborhood where Straight grew up. Straight would watch Big Mama fishing in Fairmont Park and ask herself, “how did this woman get here?” From that park, Straight basically wrote the story of Marietta Cook backwards, in chronological order, taking her all the way back to South Carolina, which she jokingly said was, “extremely inefficient,” because she ended up rewriting the novel three times.

As for the title of the novel, many people thought she had taken it from the work of Zora Neale Hurston. Although Straight read her work avidly as a young girl, she was quick to point out this was not where the title came from.

“I heard older ladies from the south, when I was growing up in my neighborhood, say this and it just meant I’ve been as far to the bottom as I can go and now I’m on my way up,” said Straight.

When asked about how much time she spends writing everyday, Straight reflected on the difficulties of time management in her busy life.

“I have three children...a nine year old, a seven year old, and a three year old. And I have a job. I teach at UC Riverside, full-time...so I wish I had the four hours a day that Tennessee Williams talked about.

“Tony Morrison, who was a single mom, said she used to wake up, greet the sunrise and drink a cup of coffee every morning...I can’t even do that. The baby wakes up like way before the sun comes up. So I write after they go to bed at night.

“In the good ol’ days they used to go to bed at eight. But now they’re old and they stay up until like nine forty-five.

“And sometimes I go and sit at my desk and I say, ‘I’m just gonna take a little nap-like you guys do in class sometimes—and then I’ll start writing. But then I’ll wake up at like 2 o’clock in the morning and my watch is imprinted on my forehead.”

When asked about her method of composition, her reply made me rethink the phrase: organization is the key to success.

“I start writing all my books with these little pieces of description, line by line, a pepper tree looks at a certain time in the evening. And I’ll write that on a piece of paper and put it away for ten years, until I figure out where it goes in the book.

“But there are pieces of this book I’ve written on napkins, like the fishing part in Fairmont Park...I probably wrote that when I was 19. And I usually have this box for each book, and I’ll have pieces of paper, all kinds of pieces of paper for each one.”

From there she begins assembling the fragments into a story. It would seem she subscribes to the jigsaw method of fiction writing: a bit of good news for those of us with highly creative spirits, who have yet to master the tedious discipline of organization. Perhaps there is no need after all! Yippee!

As for the riches one might expect Straight to have, after all her success and national acclaim, let me dispel any myths. Straight said if you take the money she makes for a manuscript and then divide by the number of hours it takes her to write it, she makes about 14 cents an hour.

“So if you entertain wild fantasies of writing the next great American novel and getting rich, or simply making enough to live off the spoils of your writing, think again. Baring the Nobel Prize, which caries with it a very tidy sum of loot, you’ll most likely need a day job to afford the luxury of success in the world of modern literature.”

Don’t Pass ‘Go’

Bethany Anderson
Special to the Chronicle

After being sick and tired of the force-fed advertisements and media hype, I managed to view the film “Go”. This fresh new film from the director of “Swingers”, Doug Liman, packs a punch. I sat in my cozy theatre seat and waited for the ten minutes of trailers to end. After only a few minutes of the film’s opening sequence, I was taken in. Why does “Go” make you want to stay? Just take a look at the cast: Katie Holmes of “Dawson’s Creek”, Scott Wolf of “Party of Five”, Taye Diggs of “How Stella Got Her Groove Back”, and Jay Mohr of “Jerry Maguire” spice up the movie, just to name a few.

From the opening amateur drug deal by new comer actress Sarah Polley to the Christmas break “Rave” flyer party at the abandoned building, you wonder what could possibly be next. Just when you think you can put a finger on where “Go” is going, the unpredictable directing of Liman goes the distance. The film shifted from the beautiful and sinful location of Los Angeles to Las Vegas. In Vegas, a male bonding trip turns into a sexual revolution, a flame engulfed hotel room, and an across state-lines car chase. By the time the gun toting homosexual love triangle occurs, the clever hit ‘n’ run cover up keeps your brain bouncing without getting flustered. Liman proves with “Go” that special effects don’t make the film. Hip dialogue, good actors (minus the million dollar salaries), and an energy thriving sequence of events.
Catch A Murder Mystery

Amber S. Miner
Arts and Entertainment Editor

The student actors here at CSUSB will be performing a dinner show that runs May 7 and 8. The Bridesmaid Wore Black is a murder mystery that has been made extraordinary because it asks for audience participation. The show, which starts at 7pm, allows the audience to play the role of the dinner guests at a wedding reception. It is almost like a structured improvisation in that the cast members must remain in character, play out the mystery, and interact with the audience.

Kathy Ervin directs the Bridesmaid Wore Black and the cast is made up entirely of CSUSB students. Catch this murder mystery for only $10 (includes dinner) and throw the cast off-track with a few comments of your own.

University Dance Company Delivers Again

By Patrick R. Pittman
Chronicle Staff Writer

The University Dance Company presented its spring concert this past weekend titled "Move It Show It Dance It." The event sponsored by ASI was an arrangement of dance pieces, choreographed by the UDC advisor Janys Antonio and the members of the company.

This was the second concert this school year for UDC. The first concert in fall "All That Jazz," received rave reviews, and "Move It Show It Dance It" was no slouch either. This concert had a much more dramatic flair to it, particularly the piece titled "From and Lemore," a ballet number that showed an elderly couple reminiscing about their past. It had a past and present feel to it and gave viewers a warm hearted feeling.

Another dramatic piece was titled "This Woman's Work," and was choreographed by Kharyshi Wiggins. It featured music by Maxwell, and a group of African American women with a lot of talent for dance. This piece kept you on the edge of your seat and required great focus in order to take it all in. It was an incredible dance number and fun to watch.

The opening act was done to "Fame" by Irene Cara, and was choreographed by Wiggins. It featured what looked like all the members of the company at some point and was a high-energy routine. This number gave the audience a feel of what the entire evening was to be about.

My only complaint about the concert was its length; it was too short. I would have liked to see more, but I'm sure the dancers were tired. Overall it was an evening of good dancing and great choreography and best of all some of the proceeds went to a group known as (DRA) Dancers Responding to AIDS. Keep up the good work UDC, and we hope to see more great things from you next year.

Coyotes Defeat Sonoma State

By Richard Contreras
Sports Editor

Catrina DaLuz went 2-4 as the Coyotes beat Sonoma State Saturday afternoon 5-2 in the second game of a doubleheader.

Junior pitcher Holly Bradford pitched a three-hit complete game to seal the victory for the Coyotes.

CSUSB also slipped by the Cossacks 3-1 in game one. They also defeated San Francisco State 2-1 earlier in the day.

The Coyotes (13-14, 23-31, overall) were forced to play three games Saturday because their doubleheader with San Francisco State was rained out on Friday.

Cal State was playing for pride after learning that their playoff hopes were dashed earlier in the week.

CSUSB Misses Out on Playoffs

By Richard Contreras
Sports Editor

Cal State was able to split their season-ending series with Sonoma State, but that wasn't enough as they lost out on a bid for the final playoff spot.

The Coyotes (27-25, overall) finished at 20-20 in the CCAA and missed out on clinching a berth in the conference championships by a game-and-a-half.

CSUSB went into the series needing to win a minimum of three games to have a chance of clinching a post-season berth.

In the series, Coyote pitcher John Judd struck out at least one Sonoma State batter in each inning to finish with 14 in a complete-game 10-1 win over the Cosacks in game two on Saturday.

Junior second baseman Ray Flores hit a grand slam, added three other hits and finished with five RBI for Cal State.

By taking two from the Coyotes Sonoma State, along with UC Davis clinched the final two playoff spots.

Desktop Publishers at War!

By Paulie Kimball
Chronicle Staff Writer

For the past 10 years, QuarkXPress and Adobe PageMaker have been the standard of the Desktop Publishing industry. Each new version that is released is newer, bigger and better, one leapfrogging over the other for technical superiority.

In late 1998 Adobe had to fend off a buy out attempt by QuarkXPress. Adobe won the fight based on the power of its new InDesign program, which was designed to combine features from PageMaker, Illustrator and QuarkXPress.

QuarkXPress has had the dominant features, offering text on paths and Bezier curves. It is more technical than PageMaker, but PageMaker is easier to use. Each manufacturer lures the other’s customers by offering their programs (over $600) at the price of an upgrade (less than $200).

Both programs allow multiple pages and multiple master pages. PageMaker is able to translate Quark documents with precision, but Quark has difficulty reading the PageMaker files. Quark’s new Bezier drawing tools and ability to allow text to convert to paths, gave Quark the superiority. With Adobe’s new InDesign, paths and curves are only the beginning of what the program is capable of doing. Blends, typographic controls, filters, screens and the ability to convert files to HTML are only some of the features offered in the InDesign program. Quark is being left in the dust and may not survive the new war unless some major upgrades are made to the program. The strongest survivor will win.

Because Adobe makes both Photoshop and Illustrator, the two most popular photo editing and drawing programs in the industry, it is able to draw features from them and input it to its page layout programs. Quark is the outsider and is on its own. For the user, this is a race that will never stop until either one buys the other out or forces the other out of business. It’s definitely a race to watch.

Unique Exam Tactic

The lady was a faked gingham dress and her husband, dressed in a homespun threadbare suit, stepped off the train in Boston, and walked timidly without an appointment into the outer office of the President of Harvard University.

The secretary could tell in a moment that such backwoods, country hicks had no business at Harvard and probably didn’t even deserve to be in Cambridge. She frowned. “We want to see the president,” the man said softly.

He’ll be busy all day,” the secretary snapped.

We’ll wait,” the lady replied.

For hours, the secretary ignored them, hoping that the couple would finally become discouraged and go away. They didn’t. And the secretary grew frustrated and finally decided to disturb the president, even though it was a chore she always regretted to do. “Maybe if they just see you for a few minutes, they’ll leave,” she told him.

And he signed in exasperation and nodded.

Someone of his importance obviously didn’t have the time to spend with them, and he detested gingham dresses and homespun suits cluttering up his outer office. The president, stern-faced with dignity, strutted toward the couple.

The lady told him, “We had a son that attended Harvard for one year. He loved Harvard. He was happy here. But about a year ago, he was accidentally killed. And my husband and I would like to erect a memorial to him, somewhere on campus.”

The president wasn’t touched; he was shocked.

“Madam,” he said gruffly, “we can’t put up a statue for every person who attended Harvard and died. If we did, this place would look like a cemetery.”

“Oh, no,” the lady explained quickly, “We don’t want to erect a statue. We thought we would like to give a building to Harvard.”

The president rolled his eyes. He glanced at the gingham dress, homespun suit, then exclaimed, “A building! Do you have any idea how much a building costs? We have over seven and a half million dollars in the physical plant at Harvard.”

For a moment the lady was silent. The president was pleased; he could get rid of them now.

And the lady turned to her husband and said quietly, “Is that all it costs to start a University? Why, don’t we just start our own?”

The president’s face was a confusion and bewildement.

And Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford walked away traveling to Palo Alto, California, where they established the University that bears their name, a memorial to a son that Harvard no longer cared about.

Politics As Usual?

So it appears that a valid election has finally taken place with Mary Ellen Abilez winning the office of President and Luis Portillo gaining the Controller spot. A runoff was to be held for the office of Vice-President. The second election took place with use of traditional paper-ballots. Voters were also required to display their Coyote Cards and verify their social security numbers after the original polling done on April 12 was thrown out because of alleged tampering with votes in the TRACS system.

Dear Editor,

I was editor of this newspaper in 1996. I just wanted to write a quick note and let you know I think this publication has come a long way in the last few years. Since graduating in ‘97, I’ve worked for the Press Enterprise and I now cover courts and business beats for the Los Angeles Daily Journal and Riverside Business Journal.

I picked up some copies of your latest issues when I was on campus last week covering a business conference. It looks like you’ve drawn some talented people for your staff of writers, and the layout looks great. I just want to say that it’s wonderful to see something you worked so hard on keep growing to become a great product.

With the limited resources this paper has, you guys are doing a good job. At least (hopefully) you don’t have to stay up all night on weekends and miss class to get it finished and over to Redlands Daily Facts by the deadline, like my tiny staff did! Keep up the good work!

Sincerely,
Jason Armstrong

Porn And The Internet

By Dan A. Farmer
Executive Editor

Being that mass media material is in my field of specialty, I feel that I should spend some time on the topic: how much pornography is too much and should we censor it. However, I am limited to my words. Let me start with this.

Congress shall make no law... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press... You can find these words in the First Amendment, the very foundation of our government.

This is why the government should never be allowed to censor any material found in circulation on the internet. This is the first medium that has allowed us to freely speak and publish our ideas for the entire world to see! It opens up the world to ideas and allows us to freely experience so many different cultures. Anything we want to find out about, we can find it on the internet.

Now, I’m not a big supporter of pornography. This is beside the point. But to start censoring the internet here can only lead to more censorship.

Who will decide what is decent and not decent? Who will be the one in charge of what the world should be able to see? By censoring pornography, you only set the premise to censor other things.

Imagine what the King of England would have had censored if, during the colonial days, material was being circulated that the King was an evil man and that the people should join together and rebel to fight for their freedom.

Let parents be the gatekeepers for their children. Our founding fathers spent much of their time and blood defending the rights of others. They had in mind a country where people of many different backgrounds could live together in peace and harmony, while sharing many different ideas. To take away the freedom of free expression, even pornography, is to open up the possibility of major faction. All people’s rights are to be defended and protected so long as they do not directly harm another. So yes, even if you don’t agree with someone’s views, you have no right to take those views away.

By David Cade
Chronicle Staff Writer

Porn, porn, porn and more porn! Everywhere you go on the Internet it’s right there, whether you like it or not. And I’m sick and tired of it.

I’m tired of getting home and having e-mail from porn sites. I’m tired of doing a search for something as innocent as real estate and having all these porn sites pop up on the list of hits. I’m sick of it invading the privacy of my home without my consent.

I am all for the first amendment, but the Internet is a public medium of communication, as public and easily accessible as television. So why does every degenerate pimp of porn have free reign to saturate the web?

It’s not like the good ol’ days when porn was segregated into it’s own niche in the world. If you wanted to indulge in pornographic debauchery, you went to that private room in the back of a video store marked: Adult. You might have driven to a liquor store for a magazine, or a specialty shop on the outskirts of town. It was segregated. There were limits of decency.

Now don’t take me for a big prude, or an advocate of neo-Puritanism. Porn has it’s place if that’s your thing. If you want to look at naked people to spice up your marriage, or give you some inspiration when you want the willie or sauce up sally, more power to you. I just want porn... find its place on the internet, w.h.sh shouldn’t be everywhere.

Aries: (3/21-4/19)
An internal debate on your personal life eclipses everything else. Patience is real, but it may be time to take a wise decision about an important relationship. Whether the decision makes you happy or sad, at last you'll be able to move on from this point. Keep your hopes high, luck is coming your way!

Taurus: (4/20-5/20)
Right when you thought life couldn't get any weirder, it just might. For starters, you may be mistaken for someone famous. Let others interpret your actions however they wish without confronting them. A touch of mystery now can only add a little spice once you get around to explaining it all. Besides, someone in the workplace has a suspicious eye on you.

Gemini: (5/21-6/20)
For the next few days, you're the show-it-all. Friends pestle your for jujubes, while people forget your smart remarks when they find out that you are right. Business could accelerate at top speed in the coming weeks. Flex your muscles and display plumage in public. This week is a good time to attract a mate.

Don't let fate pass you by.

Cancer: (6/21-7/20)
With work and school, your leisure pace begins to get stale. This week may be the perfect time to deal with an ongoing problem. Simply ignoring the issue or "hoping" it will go away will not work. Unfortunately, the source might not be apparent before you get carried away with your emotions, start with a sense of order and look for the ripples.

Leo: (7/21-8/19)
Your power to charm lies in the language that you use. People tend to flock to you, more than usual. Since the passing of the Libra Moon last week, you should be at the head of the line for love or friendship, whichever you desire. In business matters, the hardware of technology is like putty in your hands. Be confident and take action.

Virgo: (8/20-9/19)
If you're feeling restless all of a sudden, take a deep breath and relax. There's no need to tear up the landscape in search of something that you already have. Take up a new hobby or exercise to fill up your time. The next few days are more about adapting than acquiring. It's good to be modest, but having pride in what you do is the best reward.

Libra: (9/20-10/20)
With new opportunities flooding your way, you don't know where to start! As Jimi Hendrix sang, "With the power of love, anything is possible," your positive emotions let you transcend the limits of existing obligations, money or the lack of it, and even time. Spend time with friends this week. You can't help being who you are.

Scorpio: (10/21-11/21)
If you are a therapist or a healer, the world could come beating on your door. However, if you're not in the business of fixing others, you may feel compelled to seek a few repairs on your own. This may include internal conflicts on love. Don't let anything pass you by without giving it a critical eye. Something important may be just beyond reach.

Sagittarius: (11/22-12/20)
Synergy may be a heady force. Colleagues or friends generate some serious power when they come together. This should be harmless as long as you're on good terms with them. Resistance is also in the air. Persistence has its roots in spontaneity this week, so act unquestioningly on your gut feelings. Things can't go wrong.

Capricorn: (12/21-1/19)
You'll face a handful of new challenges this week. For better or worse, other people's opinions are a factor in what you need to accomplish. As much as you want to sit back and have matters come to you, at a certain point, you just have to grit your teeth and go for it. You may be surprised by the results.

Aquarius: (1/20-2/19)
During school, attend a useful meeting or pay more attention when people are talking. Be careful of what you say or do in public, since exaggerated rumors may draw unnecessary attention. In romance, love may not be the case, but lust is knocking on your door. Have lunch with an intellectual friend. Your mind is just waiting for the right material to help it expand. The untired suddenly looks very attractive.

Pisces: (2/20-3/20)
You may be unaware of any change taking place this week, but it could be happening right under your nose. As trusting as you may be, don't leave your vulnerable side exposed to elements that might unexpectedly turn harsh. An envious worker may slip in some petty gossip just to irritate you, so be cautious.

TAX ADVANCED SOLUTIONS FROM TIAA-CREF

IF YOU THOUGHT COLLEGE WAS EXPENSIVE,
TRY PUTTING YOURSELF THROUGH RETIREMENT.

Think about supporting yourself for twenty-five, thirty years or longer in retirement. It might be the greatest financial test you'll ever face. Fortunately, you have two valuable assets in your favor: time and tax deferral. The key is to begin saving now. Delaying your decision for even a year or two can have a big impact on the amount of income you'll have when you retire. What's the simplest way to get started? Save in pretax dollars and make the most of tax deferral. There's simply no more painless or powerful way to build a comfortable and secure tomorrow.

SRAs and IRAs makes it easy. SRAs - tax-deferred annuities from TIAA-CREF and our range of IRAs offer smart and easy ways to build the extra income your pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. They're backed by the same exclusive investment choices, low expenses, and personal service that have made TIAA-CREF the retirement plan of choice among America's education and research communities. Call 1 800 842-2776 and find out for yourself how easy it is to put yourself through retirement when you have time and TIAA-CREF on your side. www.tiaa-cref.org
