CREDENTIAL FOR TEACHING LEARNING HANDICAPPED OFFERED

A new credential, the Special Education Specialist-Credential: Learning Handicapped has been approved and is offered this quarter. Word regarding the approval was received from the Commission for Teacher Preparation and Licensing in Sacramento this week.

The need for this credential is an outgrowth of the California State Master Plan for Special Education which requires all teachers working with learning handicapped pupils to hold a valid specialist credential.

According to the coordinator of the program, Steven Wagner, Associate Professor of Education, the course of study will consist of class work and supervised field work in special education settings.

Those interested in applying for the credential should contact Dr. Wagner. Applicants should hold either a basic teaching credential or be in the process of completing the fifth year.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF CAMPUS TOURS NOTED

A Cal State tradition - the official campus tour - observes its tenth anniversary this week. On January 14, 1968 the first tour report was recorded and filed. Although tours had been given unofficially, the hiring of students as tour guides, selecting uniforms, and formally booking tours established the College Relations Office as the campus visitor center.

Since that date 23,820 visitors, mostly young people, have accompanied the student tour guides as they were shown the unique features of the College.

While most of the tourees are from high schools, the College provides the service for community organizations, senior citizen groups, church units and various clubs, in addition to community college groups and elementary and junior high school students.

The tour often includes a day's activities, such as visiting classes, meeting with faculty, talking with Financial Aid or Admissions personnel, lunching at the Commons, seeing a lab demonstration, as well as the tour. When space permits, arrangements are made for overnight stays at Serrano Village.

Over the years around 30 tour guides have served in the College Relations Office, also doubling as office workers, some for as long as four years.

Young visitors receive pennants of the College as a memento of their visit; others receive packets with information about the College.

Calls come in frequently from far-away regions, such as New York, Illinois, and even out-of-country - Canada and Japan - requesting tours, often planned six months in advance to coincide with vacations.

The youngest tourees have been kindergarteners, Blue Birds and Brownies; oldsters were the 100 Senior Citizen Travel Club members of the YMCA. The largest group on tour were the 200 Foreign Language Day visitors, the 125 Ceritos fifth graders from Long Beach and 150 parents during Orientation.

The tours are under the direction of Barbara Nolte of the College Relations Office, who has arranged approximately 1,000 tours given in all kinds of weather, late at night and even on weekends.

A faculty seminar, the first to be held on campus, is scheduled for Wednesday, January 18 in LC-241.

ALL-COLLEGE BLOOD DRIVE SET FOR MONDAY

The Student Health Center is sponsoring a College blood drive on January 16, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the Lower Commons.

Established on the campus many years ago, this reserve fund ensures that any student, faculty or staff member or their immediate dependents would have blood available for any emergency that might arise.

"To maintain a fund of this nature, we must have donors," states Vivian Mc Eachern, Health Center Nurse, "so even though we hate to 'needle' you, it's the only way."
