ASI Sponsors Band for Lunch Entertainment

ASI put together an informal concert featuring "The Rumble Kings" for the students here at Cal State. In the Student Union Courtyard on Thursday, November 18th, strains of upbeat swing music could be heard by all who walked by. This entertainment was just another way that ASI gives to the students on campus.

Is Marijuana Still Just a "Lightweight" drug?
Not Exactly According to Marijuana Anonymous

By Bill Marshall
News Editor

Addiction has many guises. Some addictions-to cocaine, alcohol, heroin-are more high profile, more "glamorous." But the seriousness and impact of an addiction can't be rated by the hype surrounding it or the caliber of celebrities who succumb to it. "Marijuana addiction" may sound like a contradiction in terms to many who grew up in the post-sixties world, where marijuana has been largely viewed as an innocuous substance in relation to the headline-grabbing crack cocaine and, more recently, heroin use epidemics that have swept America. But the simple fact is that while marijuana abuse doesn't appear to cause the acute health and behavioral disintegration that addiction to cocaine, heroin or alcohol does, the chronic abuse of pot can be as debilitating and life complicating as can the abuse of any substance or activity.

Before 1989, pot smokers found no place that understood the problems that were specific to beating their habit. Traditional twelve-step groups were no haven because the hard-core drug users or alcoholics could not relate to the problems of recovering "stoners" because of marijuana's reputation as a "lightweight" drug.

In 1989, small, independent groups of recovering marijuana abusers met in Morro Bay, California to establish a unified twelve-step program to help themselves and other stoners to break their cycle of addiction. During that conference, Marijuana Anonymous was born.

Today, Marijuana Anonymous has grown from a couple of hundred members to somewhere in the neighborhood of six thousand. Regular Marijuana Anonymous meetings are held in forty-six US states and seven countries.

Marijuana Anonymous will be welcoming the "Millennium of Hope" at their sixth annual convention at the Santa Clara Biltmore Hotel in Santa Clara, California. The January 14 through 16 event will feature twelve-step meetings, panel discussions, recovery workshops, and courses on Yoga and Meditation, as well as youth-oriented recovery programs.

Addiction to pot and the stoner lifestyle may not garner the public attention that more glamorous substances do, but can still have a devastating effect on those who let their penchant for the high-life roll out of control. Marijuana Anonymous may be able to help potheads who are ready to wipe the red out of their eyes and step back into reality and take control of their lives.

For more information on Marijuana Anonymous call 1-800-766-6779. For information regarding the "Millennium of Hope" convention in Santa Clara, California from January 14-16, call Kevin G. at (408) 249-9865 or Will N. at (831) 684-2461, or email at gotowill@aal.com.
Eating Healthy on the Go

The holidays are here and affecting Serrano Village just like everywhere else in the world.

Serrano Village is home to many exchange students as well as many who don’t live close enough to home to make it back for Thanksgiving weekend. Because of this, the housing office is bringing Thanksgiving dinner to Serrano Village. On Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, November 25th, at 5:00 p.m. in the Village Square Serrano Village will be hosting a thanksgiving feast for those who are staying in the village over the holiday weekend.

This feast isn’t the only way that the residents can enjoy the holidays. Serrano Village is also selling Christmas-grams. For only fifty cents you can send you resident friends and loved ones a candy-gram, which comes with two candy canes and various chocolate candies as well as your personal note. The deadline to buy Christmas-grams is December 2.

In preparing for the New Year, Serrano Village is looking for a talented artist to design the 1999-2000 Serrano Village T-shirt. Entries must include a design for the back and front of the shirt and must be turned into the Village Square no later than midnight December 3. The voting will begin on December 5 in the Village Square. The artist of the winning design will be awarded $50.00 as well as receive a free T-shirt with his/her design. For questions contact Diva at ext.

I wish all of you a Happy Thanksgiving! Eat Hearty!

Wally's World: Who Do Student Athletes Think They Are!

By Chris Walenta
Sports Editor

Remember a time when young men and women were students who happened to play sports while they attended school? That time has passed. Unfortunately these young people are not students first and then athletes. They are athletes who sometimes have free time for class. Not only do big-time schools have this problem, but it is evident all the way down to the junior colleges.

The usual pattern for most college recruiters is for those individuals to attend games of potential student athletes that would improve the program at that particular college. A college recruiter for the athletic department is usually the head coach of that sport.

When a coach comes to a high school they are hoping to find a young man or woman who plans on attending for four years at their college. It costs a lot of money and takes a great deal of time to determine which athletes to offer scholarships to. These coaches are smart individuals who don't like their time or money wasted.

Student-Athletes used to fulfill their unwritten obligation of attending for four years, however, now they seem content with following the money after a year or two. They never have a second thought about it. This has been a recent trend that has grown in the past five years.

It has now become a roll of the dice for most college coaches. They want to get the best student athlete but now a thought has to be in the back of their mind as to whether or not the student will bail on their program after only a year or two. It used to be a given that these young people were not students first and then athletes. They are athletes who sometimes have free time for class. Not only do big-time schools have this problem, but it is evident all the way down to the junior colleges.

It has now become a roll of the dice for most college coaches. They want to get the best student athlete but now a thought has to be in the back of their mind as to whether or not the student will bail on their program after only a year or two. It used to be a given that some college athletes would leave after three years of enrollment, now most players are lured into one of the major sports out there after only a year or two and they are lured in by the money.

Coaches don't have to worry about whether or not their players will leave for the professional level; they have to worry about whether or not they will be forced to leave because of their actions. Many athletes today have taken on the form of hoodlums. Many people perceive athletes as rich crybabies who are always getting into trouble. This does not start just when they become professionals; it begins at the college ranks and sometimes earlier than that.

In recent years student-athletes have been more publicized for their off the field activities rather than their accomplishments on the field. It is hard for coaches to be able to recognize this trait if it has not been documented prior to that student-athlete attending that particular college.

This is a problem that needs to be addressed so that the college is covered. The people that run the colleges have limited budgets that they allocate towards athletic scholarships. When students decide to break the trust of their coaches by leaving after only a year they are only setting trends for the rest of their life. There should be some sort of consequences for these people who are breaking their word.

I believe that if a student accepts a scholarship to a school that they should be committed to stay for at least three years if not the full four years. If they decide to break that agreement they should be billed the full amount of money that they received and the amount of money the school was charged for the time they attended the school. Perhaps, then, they would be willing to stick to what initially agreed to and it would set them on the right path throughout their life.

Coyotes Squeak by in Season Opener

By Karen Brown
Chronicle Staff Writer

Cal State, San Bernardino hosted Christian Heritage on Friday night in their home opener. The Hawks were a tough season opening opposition and gave Cal State a run for their money. The Coyotes stood up to the test and ended up winning 78-76 in overtime.

Cal State came to play with a good defense and a running gun offense. Christian Heritage used tight pressure defense to create early offense. The Hawks tight defense on the Coyotes forced Cal State to use their skills in order to stay in the game.

Coyote players used strong and crisp passes to keep the Hawks on the run. They ditched out their passes with authority. Lohnie Tape led the charge with 14 points, along with six rebounds (eight assists) while also pacing the team with 13 points and 11 rebounds.

The Coyotes lived and died by the 3-point shot. In attempting 25 3-pointers, they converted seven of them and gave notice that their style of play this season will be an exciting one.

With the score 65-59, in favor of the Hawks with 46.4 seconds left, there chants from Hawk fans stating that the game was over. Then the Coyote defense tightened and forced some turnovers. With .9 seconds left, Robert Banks tossed up a 3-pointer that put a dagger through the heart of Hawks players.

A few tense moments in overtime delayed the final outcome but stellar free-throw shooting proved to be the difference between victory and defeat. The score was locked up at halftime (34-34) and the score at the end of regulation time was 67-67.

The Coyotes play next in the Westmont Tournament over the Thanksgiving break. Then on December 3, the Coyotes host CSU Stanislaus in their conference opener. Slated starting time is 8 p.m. Tickets are available by calling (909) 880-5049 or by going to the Cassoulis Arena boxoffice.
