Statement made at Board Meeting February 7, 1995
By Elia Diaz

Another School Board meeting, another 27 students being expelled from our schools! And are we aware that they cannot be accepted back in school until they go through a court-appellate course? The counseling can be provided up front before the behavioral situation of our students has completely deteriorated to the state of being expelled? This is called "preventive counseling." We do not need to send our students out to be counseled because we have in our schools the finest, fully credentialed counselors. I do not need to send our students out to be counseled because we have the programs that are available in the schools to place these students where they can get the classes that will meet their needs. I cannot believe that it is paying to when teachers and administrators suspend students for 13, 15, or 19 days. We do know that we need help, and they should get it. In many cases, the students want to be suspended to get out on the streets in our community.

Today we are expelling a 14 year old girl who has ability because she was doing a fine job in elementary school. What kind of administrators suspend students for 13, 15, or 19 days? We do not believe that some of them could be relieved of paper work by being classified as and classified as clergypersons. I believe that some of them could be relieved of paper work by being classified as clergypersons.

Mediators Are Coming To Inland Empire

When your neighbors will not lower the volume of their stereo, when the landlord refuses to return your security deposit, when the local department store won't honor their warranty on your broken toaster, when you can't get your car through a crowded city street, the relationship is intact, then you may benefit from the process of MEDIATION.

MEDIATION is the process whereby a neutral third party (MEDIATOR) interacts with the disputing parties. Often the existing conflicts are not resolvable. It is the presence of the MEDIATOR that makes it possible to explore the needs of each party.

Within this framework a resolution can be brought about ending in a win-win situation. Many MEDIATORS have been trained in communications, negotiations and reaching agreements to resolve disputes or personal differences.

More than 48,000 Civil and Small Claims cases were filed in San Bernardino County in this past fiscal year. The overwhelming court was one reason for using MEDIATION; however, many cases are simply better suited to other means of resolution.

The Center for Dispute Resolution will provide trained MEDIATORS to those who choose the service. It is a free service to all residents of San Bernardino County. The center opened on the 2nd of January. You may call for an appointment to speak to a mediator between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. The Center for Dispute Resolution is located at the County Courthouse, 351 North Arrowhead, 2nd Floor. For more information, please call (909) 387-3160.

Homeopathy: A New Frontier in Medicine

Louis Farahkhan is the person the majority of readers of Black newspapers rate as the most effective African-American leader. A "Your True Voice" national poll among Black readers also reveals that "The most pressing problem where they live" is not racism but the lack of economic development. Over 70 percent of the respondents feel that "something" or "something else" is the cause of economic development. The most pressing problem not listed by the respondents was "inadequate employment of professionals in their neighborhoods." The word professional is not just attorneys, doctors, etc. People in the communities that are the victims of crime are the professionals in their neighborhoods, and drugs are rated as causing crime for forcing residents of inner-city areas to be afraid of being mugged or robbed.

Over 1300 readers of The Black Press returned filled in copies of polls that were sent to their local publications to the National Newspaper Publishers Association to record their true voice so as to unite and people the affect their lives in America. The poll was undertaken because African-American's opinions, values, desires and problems are often misrepresented in general media market, such as national networks, national magazines and local and national broadcasts. Farahkhan, for instance, is often portrayed in a negative vein by general media reports. The poll data was analyzed by the National Newspaper Publishers Association and was recently presented at the organization's Winter Media Conference in Tampa. The poll contained 15 multiple choice questions.

Personal and community safety was mentioned in numerous ways in the poll. Numbers for custom murders is nationally in inner-city areas. Police attribute the trend to the illegal drugs, growth of urban gangs and the younger use of weapons; a general lowering of social structures against aggressive behavior; the proliferation of weapons and the greater firepower of guns on the streets. More intense bystanders are being killed, officials in several cities say, mass are residents of neighborhoods where gang members and drug dealers do their work.

The poll showed a strong trend toward local organizations for civil rights remedies and other suffrage problems. Forty-six percent of respondents are dues-paying members of Civil Rights organizations. The most traditional Civil Rights organizations, the NAACP, Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) and National Urban League, are mentioned by respondents in addition to the church. It is interesting to note a trend toward other orgaizations. In fact, 34 percent of respondents mention other organizations/institutions as opposed to church, job and school as being "Most important in their life and pursuit."

Premised predominantly in the poll are: the National of Islam, Nation of Wales, civil and fratremites, suggesting a trend toward local leadership.

Non-mainstream leaders, Louis Farahkhan and Yahweh Bari Yahweh, captured over one-fifth of the votes of respondents. Jesse Jackson received 42 percent of the votes of respondents. The poll is designed by the National Newspaper Publishers Association and was recently presented at the organization's Winter Media Conference in Tampa. The poll contained 155 multiple choice questions.

The poll results were: the National of Islam, Nation of Wales, civil and fratremites, suggesting a trend toward local leadership.

Planning for a disaster is an idea that has finally arrived. The events of 1989 such as Hurricane Hugo and the San Francisco Earthquake, and more recently Hurricane Andrew and the 1993 Storm of the Century illustrate the importance of being prepared.

One of the most important aspects of the Survival Bag® Company’s mandate is to provide disaster services and to help the community prepare for disasters.

The Survival Bag® is designed to help two adults survive for 72 hours in the event of an evacuation due to disasters or other emergencies. The Survival Bag® is a backpack which can be stored in the:

- home
- office
- automobile
- recreational vehicle

The Survival Bag® is half full, allowing you to customize it with easily acquired personal necessities, such as prescription medication. The concept of using a backpack was decided upon because of its versatility. Most importantly, The Survival Bag® contains everything you need in one place and can be picked up quickly and taken with you.

Because we are constantly upgrading our products, there may be some variation in the medical supplies as shown in the photo above. Its contents reflect basic emergency provisions for survival only. They are practical items which, when purchased separately, are costly. The contents are heat resistant and durable under all environmental conditions:

Supplies for 2 persons for 72 Hours!

- 12 Emergency Drinking Water Foil Sachets (4.225 fl. oz.) - 5 year shelf-life
- 2 Emergency Food Bars (1.8 lb., 6 bars) - 5 year shelf-life

PHOENIX - A lot of hard work, a little luck, and 20 years - have genninated into a phenomenon that has vaulted him into the elite class of NBA superstars in just one half season. His outstanding ascension is now a fact. It may be the story of the 2000-01 season. It has been built on the court, and in the media, and in his life. It is the autobiography of a 20-year-old rookie who has just been named one of the saviors of the NBA, league have tagged you as the All-Star, You are one of the best players in the world. It is a special achievement for me. Do you think other players that have voterized the most votes. You say that’s the greatest thrill in basketball. It’s definitely a learning experience for me. It’s sort of a dream come true. Everyone I’ve played against, every teammate, have been very good people. I don’t understand that approach. I don’t want to limit my thinking. It’s like the city that had that “Showtime” feel. Some people are choosing the negative. I just want to be better in every facet on both offense and defense. Do you think other players the league have just a little harder because of your inclusion as an NBA marquee player. Everyone comes out and play their best, to lose you want this compeition. Everyone has played against played hard want to win this game. I don’t want to limit my thinking. I want to be better in every facet on both offense and defense. London Philharmonic Reaches Out To Black Students

BY PAMELA DOGGS
AP WRITER

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Turning up with an African drummer and storyteller, members of The London Philharmonic orchestra taught music students Wednesday about composing and playing the African way.

The mostly White orchestra, on a two-week visit to South Africa, is holding workshops with local students and teachers on classical techniques and composition.

"We're teaching out to students who we wouldn't normally talk to in their contact with," said George Peniston, a London Philharmonic cellist who improvised music to a traditional Zula tale told by storyteller Gugu Mzimela.

Tribe beats and chanting filled a marble room at the University of the Witwatersrand, where the orchestra held its first outreach session.

"It's广 it's just absolutely fantastic," said the 20-year-old violinist, who improvised music to a story. "I can combine the classics with things I have learned from my culture," she said.

"The music that we are making here is based on a Zulu song," said Modi sene, a pianist whose credits range from the 1930s to the south side of Chicago streets today," said the KwaThema Black township, east of Johannesburg, said the 20-year-old violinist, "I can combine the classics with things I have learned from my culture," she said.

London Philharmonic Reaches Out To Black Students

Led by Eugene Skeef, a South African percussionist living in England who came with the orchestra for the workshop... the session included composing music to accompany the spoken words.

"I think we've got a tradition that is the voice of the first instrument," Skeef said. "If you can sing it, you can play it."

Dancing in bare feet with his long nails clanging, Skeef told the 40 Black students and 10 Whites that "storytome becomes before rhythm."

"My aim is to give students an opportunity to be in the presence of great musicians and to be in an environment where they can go deep into their creative talents," he said.

Students were told to clap their hands, find their voices, grab an instrument and march into their "deep creative juices" during the workshop that featured Skeef, Mzimela and six members of the Philharmonic playing the cello, trombone, saxophone, violin, piano and drums.

"We're creating something like an accent here, something very beautiful," Mzimela told the students.

Thade Modisane, 25, from the KwaThema Black township east of Johannesburg, said the workshop gave him a "baffling" perspective on his music.

"The music that we are making here is based on a Zula song," said Modisane, a pianist whose practice time was interrupted by political difficulties in his township. "If you see the minute you put English words in it, the rhythm is damaged. It's all about flow."

Another Black student, Bongani Ngobesa, said the orchestra members inspired him.

"I can combine the classics with things I have learned from my culture," he said. "I think I could add something different to classical music."

Happiness, love and sorrow - I shoot all of it right through that guitar," says Riffer "Iceman" Robinson. For those who live the hard life, it's the way to complain about love gone bad, women gone wrong and the cruel twists of fate. Uniquely, the blues can be claimed by two very different centuries in America: the small, sleepy towns of the Deep South and Chicago, Illinois. (Ethnographic Society Photo Bill Solberg)
