Info Needed In Riverside Homicide Case

A jogger called the Riverside Police Department this morning when he discovered a female next to the roadway in his neighborhood. Homicide investigators were called in to secure the area due to the circumstances. Witnesses reported that the woman was laying at the side of the roadway in the 4700 block of Somerset Drive. The area is an established residential neighborhood. The cause of death is pending the autopsy, but is classified as a homicide.

The call was received at 6:00 a.m. by 911 operators. The victim's identity has been tentatively made, but not available due to pending notice of next of kin. She is an adult in her early twenties of African-American decent.

Anyone with information is requested to call the Detective Division of the Riverside Police at (909) 782-5238.

Principal Calls Out Police

Clara Thomas, the Principal we reported on last week in Moreno Valley, has had to call out the police. It seems strange threatening things are happening to her and her children and she is concerned for their welfare.

Thomas' car was stolen in December. The only thing missing when the car was returned were files she was working on.

Thomas is the third Black Principal targeted by members of the Moreno Valley Education Association (MVEA). Reports of a fourth one is in the wings.

Stereotypes About The Black Press Dispelled

The National Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation has released the first extensive national research study on Black newspapers which proves the viability of Black newspapers as an effective marketing tool for advertisers and an important media outlet for African-American consumers.

Funded by The Sears-Roebuck Foundation. "Exploding Stereotypes: Milestones in Black Newspaper Research," explores the stereotypes of Black newspapers, identifies their competitive challenges, and provides practical strategies for Black newspapers to survive in a changing information marketplace.

"We initiated our support of this innovative project in the belief that by doing so, the Sears-Roebuck Foundation would help ensure African-American newspapers continue to serve as powerful tools for community development and literacy. We encourage other marketers to consider the results of the study as they develop approaches to reach African-American consumers," said Paula A. Banks, national manager of community relations, Sears Merchandise Group. For the past 15 years, Sears has been the leader among national retailers advertising in African-American newspapers.

"Everyone — publishers, advertisers, ad agencies and sales executives — should use the Milestones research study as a catalyst to re-examine old attitudes and identify new areas of opportunity. . ."

--said Ken Smikle, publisher of Target Market News.

The Milestones research study, conducted by the Stephenson Research Center at the University of Missouri School of Journalism, shows that Black newspaper advertising (42%) scored higher than radio (32%) and TV (38%) advertising in reaching and effectively influencing African-American consumer patronage. Two-thirds (68%) of African-Americans surveyed read the Black press, and an overwhelming 90% strongly agreed or agreed that Black newspapers provide information not available in the mainstream press. Almost half (47%) regularly read grocery store ads, 35% read restaurant ads, 44% read ads for discount stores, and 43% read ads for department stores in the Black newspapers.

"This information is critical to reshaping thinking and destroying negative myths about Black newspapers. The Milestones study justifies why companies should continue to spend advertising dollars in Black newspapers and USC the papers as an effective marketing tool to reach and influence Black consumers," said Dr. Frederick H. Black, executive editor of the Milestones in Black Newspaper Research and project director of the NNPA Foundation's Prototype Newspaper Project.

"The Black press has struggled for a long time to help provide an identity for African-Americans. The study shows that African-American readers have very specific expectations of their publications and rely on them to provide a unique viewpoint or 'Black' perspective on news, issues and events. It's important for advertisers to better understand Black newspapers and their role within the community," said Dr. Gail Baker Woods, an assistant professor of the Advertising Department at the University of Missouri School of Journalism and editor of the Milestones in Black Newspaper Research.

Although Black newspapers are one of the oldest and most entrenched business institutions within the African-American community, they struggle to survive against competitive media, escalating expenses, declining circulation nationwide, cutbacks in advertising revenues, the attrition of talented Black journalists and sales people to mainstream media, lack of resources, and unfavorable myths about the Black press.

"At the heart of any newspaper's struggle for survival is its ability to develop and maintain advertising support. This can be a vicious cycle, since decreasing circulation is unattractive to advertisers. This study is the first step in examining advertisers' perceptions of Black newspapers and the relationship of these perceptions to the purchase of advertising in Black papers," said Dr. Woods.

The Milestones study revealed that advertisers know little about Black newspapers, their penetration in the African-American marketplace, the types of readers the papers attract, or how to use them as an effective marketing tool. About 72% of advertisers agreed or strongly agreed that they could reach African-American audiences through

Free At Last: Slavery Abolished In Mississippi

BY GINA HOLLAND AP
WRITER

Mississippi cut yet another tie with its abolitionist past Thursday by making official what its sister states had done more than a century ago - abolishing slavery.

Of the 36 states in the union when the 13th Amendment was ratified in 1865, Mississippi was the last holdout. At the time, state lawmakers were angry because they were not reimbursed for the value of freed slaves.

Rep. Charles Sheppard, D-Lorman, called it a "constitutional embarrassment."

Without debate the State House approved a resolution ratifying the 13th Amendment. The Senate had acted earlier.

"It clarifies where Mississippi is and where Mississippi potentially is going," Sheppard said.

No one in the Senate voted against the resolution, but Sen. Mike Gunn, R-Jackson, said "it's moot, it's needless."

"I guess it was overdue, but I don't think it is a big deal, said Rep. Jeff Smith, R-Columbus.

Rep. Robert Clark, a 27-year lawmaker and the first Black to serve in legislature this century, said the amendment would have been adopted earlier but some Blacks felt the failure helped civil rights cases.

"It doesn't reflect the Mississippi of today or tomorrow," said Clark, D-Lexington.

Many members of the Legislature were unaware that Mississippi had never ratified the amendment until Frazier brought the issue to their attention earlier this year. He urged the "sons of slaves and sons of slave owners" to set things right. "They realized a mistake was made, and they corrected it. It's a good sign for Mississippi. It shows the nation we can handle issues that are controversial," Frazier said Thursday.

Sen. Steve Seale, R-Hattiesburg, said "If we didn't act on it we'd be branded as racists he said, but "these people who are clinging to the past would say we abandoned our heritage."

John Quincy Adams, emeritus professor of political science, said the adoption could help the state's image.

"The state does have image problems, mostly from the past, not the present," he said. "This one (amendment) has basic importance for the state of Mississippi."

Patricia Ramdhan Released From Jail

Psychological Report says she is ok but depressed because she wants her children back. Los Angeles County will not release them.

Patricia Ramdhan, the legally blind Moreno Valley woman, who was thrown into jail three weeks ago is finally out of jail. She was jailed on a complaint of terrorism by her niece Tracy McDuffy. She was not released until last Thursday. After being in jail for over a week the Judge threw out the charge. The reason she was given for the extended time stemmed from when McDuffy reported that Ramdhan had kidnapped her own son. Alphey was under the guardianship of McDuffy. She had to do community service for that infraction and because she hadn't finished the court ordered community service she was kept in jail. Ramdhan denies either of the charges. The two relatives lived only around the corner from each other, and her son would come over to visit his mother. This was in Los Angeles before Ramdhan moved to Moreno Valley.

"The Los Angeles Department of Social Service continues to try to make her look crazy," said her sister Arletta Wright.

According to a letter (dated February 15, 1995) from Kane Phelps, Supervising Children's Social Worker, after he questioned the validity of a letter from Ramdhan's son Alphey pleading for help and gave her credit for her drug testing that was never reported to the Judge according to Wright. Phelps reiterated the court order mandating counseling four times a month for six months.

Ramdhan has gone to counseling twice a month for months. Her Psychologist, Nelson E. Evans of Moreno Valley, wrote a letter dated February 6, 1995 reporting that he had seen her in his office since October 4, 1994 for a total of nine sessions. "Mrs. Wright (Ramdhan) presented with mild to moderate depression brought about in the writer's opinion by prolonged separation from her children...No serious psychopathology has been found. The Depression and Anxiety are the primary sources of discomfort to her."

In the letter from her son, Alphey wrote to his mother, and to Phelps stating, he did not want to go to a foster home and asked why he couldn't come home with her. He prays the family will be together. Alphey also made some charges that, by law, the Department of Children and Family Services has to investigate.

Editorial

On September 24, 1965, Executive Order 11246 was signed into public law by President Lyndon B. Johnson. This law requires non-discrimination in employment by contractors or subcontractors who wish to do business with the federal government, and who have 50 or more employees and a contract worth $50,000 or more. The responsibility for administration of this Executive Order was given to the Labor Department, which formulated "Title 41, Chapter 60" which required voluntary affirmative action programs. But why the need for affirmative action in the first place?

With all the tremendous gains made by the Civil Rights movement of the 1960's, it still became necessary for the federal government to seek remedies to break down the walls created by years of blatant racial discrimination. Prior to the passage of the Civil Rights Act in 1964, signs were posted in places of employment "Negroes Need Not Apply," which was legal in America. That was only thirty years ago. Then, after 1964, the signs came down, but the discriminatory employment practices continued. Another sign was placed in most employment offices which read, "We Do Not Discriminate In Employment Because Of One's Race, Religion, Sex, Or National Origin." There was still no significant increase in the employment rates for people of color. One of the reasons for this dismal showing in employment for people of color was that the same individual's with a Klu Klux Klan mentality were still making the hiring decisions. It was only after a few federal contracts were placed on hold for those companies that refused to comply with the new laws, those companies and others, then flooded their employment offices with Black and Hispanic Representatives with no authority to hire, promote, or fire anyone.

Those employers who want to maintain the status quo had no intention of having the workforce reflect the diverse composition of the labor force — with or without affirmative action. But, affirmative action does serve as a small hammer, smashing the hopes of those people who wish to return to the "good ole' days" when fair employment practices were not monitored or enforced. Without affirmative action, those individual's in hiring positions can stand behind flimsy excuses and even flimsier laws. Actually it is many veteran personnel officers (read: White males or their FBI's - friends, brothers, in-laws), who created this negative attitude toward affirmative action in the first place. During job interviews, these individual's would tell White applicants that, "I would love to give you this job, but I can't hire you because I have to hire a Black or Hispanic." They knew what kind of animosity this would create. But, in fact, this is not what affirmative action means, although it is a commonly held belief by most Americans.

If you were to request any large business to show you their business plan, they would provide you with written document that explains their mission, purpose, market strategy, competition, income capabilities, staffing needs, turnover rate, potential labor resources and other strategies to reach their goal with accompanying time tables. Well, an affirmative action program is just a part of one's business plan. Strictly defined, "affirmative action is a set of specific, result-oriented procedures to which each organization is committed to apply every good faith effort, and which are intended to result in prompt and full utilization of under-represented African-Americans, Hispanics, Asians, Native Americans, or females at all levels in all segments of their workforce."

Ask yourself this question. If you were to establish a business in Japan and use at least some money from Japanese investors, use American workers to make your product, and then place your product on their market, would you expect their citizens to purchase it without giving them nothing in return? Do you think this marketing strategy would work? Absolutely not. They would run you out of Japan before you could sign a fair employment agreement. Well, Black Americans and others who pay taxes in this country only want the same returns from their taxes which every White American receives from theirs. As stated earlier, we were denied and still have not received our "fair share" of tax revenues. The first attempt in this country to address equality for Blacks was when slavery was abolished and the Civil Rights Act of 1866 was enacted into law. Since then, there have been many attempts to eradicate discrimination but to no avail.

The question should be, "What would it have been if affirmative action was not the law?" When we start talking about reverse discrimination and unfair advantages, we must remember who still controls most of the wealth in this country.

•White males still own all of the Fortune 500 companies, and there are no Blacks in the pipeline to take over. As a matter of fact, only a small handful of Black businesses are included in the Top 1000 Businesses in America. Actually, blacks continued to be under-represented in management, professional, and technical positions in most companies.

•Between 1979 and 1989 the average income for Black college graduates declined 11% while Whites college graduate's income increased by 11%, that is a 22% spread for a ten-year span.

•Over the last thirty years, the employment rate for Black Americans has remained twice as high as their White counterparts.

And they say we ought to get rid of affirmative action programs. I believe that what we should do is start implementing the law as intended by President Johnson, Nixon, Carter, Ford, Reagan, and Bush.

I believe that members of any affected group who, by virtue of past or present discrimination, continue to suffer the effects of discrimination should be entitled to swift and fast remedies. And I believe that the person or employer causing the discrimination should be fired or at least their company's subsidized tax assistance should be withheld. In other words you can continue to discriminate, but not with public assistance.

The Black Press Of America: 168 Years Old

Is the Voice of Black Americans Still Lighting the Road To Freedom?

By William Reed, NNPA
Director of Communications

Is America's Black Press still viable? With daily newspapers now hiring Black reporters and editors and giving more coverage to African-American communities than ever before, is there still a need for Black-oriented newspapers? Is it not true that publications directed primarily to an African-American community are actually a stark example of "Reverse discrimination"? As the nation's 200 Black-oriented newspapers celebrate the 168th anniversary of the first newspapers especially for Blacks, these questions abound among the general public, newspaper subscribers, advertisers and general community media, who now see high-income African Americans as a new and growing market.

Freedom's Journal was America's first African-American newspaper. John B. Russwurm, the nation's second African-American to earn a college degree, and Rev. Samuel E. Cornish, published the first issue in New York City on March 16, 1827. The weekly tabloid was published in response to printed attacks against freed and enslaved Blacks, Black leaders and abolitionists.

In 1827, New York City boasted America's second largest free Black population, second only to Baltimore. The bustling city's active Black community had formed its own churches, schools, social groups, and entertainment organizations. A group of educated Black religious leaders and others were committed to abolishing slavery and its evils. While the majority of Blacks in New York were free, the city was not free of slavery's ills. Slaves still worked in New York and freed

West Coast Black Publishers celebrated Black Press Week in Las Vegas Restaurant Sadie's (l to r) Les Kimber, Fresno, CA; Brian Townsend, San Bernardino, CA; Ruth Hopkins, Pasadena, CA; Lee Brown, Las Vegas, NV; Peggy Onakomalya, Oxnard, CA; Cheryl Brown, Riverside/San Bernardino, CA; (Seated) Bernie Foster, President WCPA, Portland, OR; Ramone Savoy, Las Vegas, NV.

Black tradesmen looking for jobs lost out to the flood of lesser skilled European immigrants. Thugs known as Black-birds kidnapped both freed and fugitive slaves and smuggled them out of town and to the slave markets in the southern states. But, the most powerful tool against Black equality was the press, entirely owned and operated by Whites. Mordecai Noah, publisher of several newspapers, including the New York Enquirer, printed frequent attacks on Blacks, causing many to oppose reforms to aid Blacks. In the spring of 1827, a group of Black leaders, from the Northeast, met in New York to counter the racist propaganda of the White press. Out of that meeting, held at the home of M. Boston Crummel, a prominent Black businessman and shipping magnate, came the creation of Freedom's Journal, with Cornish and Russwurm at the helm. The paper was published until 1829, ultimately being distributed throughout the northern states, Canada, Haiti, England and even in some of the southern states.

Freedom's Journal defined the role of Black-oriented publications in succeeding decades as champions of freedom and equal rights for people of color. Continuing to light the road to freedom, in the late 1800s, Frederick Douglass' North Star newspaper was a dominant force among Blacks and Whites. In the early 1900s, Douglass' crusade was taken up by leading publishers such as Monroe Trotter in the Boston area, John Murphy in Baltimore, Robert Vann in Pittsburgh and Robert S. Abbott in Chicago. In the early part of this century, publications such as the Afro-American newspaper chain; the Chicago Defender; Pittsburgh Courier and the Boston Guardian were the principal mediums discussing issues and events affecting African-Americans and dominated Black minds, thoughts and actions. Great family businesses and traditions evolved through generations via the Black Press, such as: the Scott family of Atlanta; Murphy's of Baltimore and Washington, D.C.; Mitchells of St. Louis; Sengstaken and Johnsons of Chicago; Perrys of Philadelphia; Youngs of Norfolk and Dejoies of New Orleans.

Today, there are more than 200 Black-oriented newspapers across the U.S., and many of the Black staffers on daily newspapers got their start with the Black Press. The Black Press' weekly circulation exceeds six million and industry statistics show a readership of over 11 million each week. The president of the National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA), Robert Bogle, feels that there is competition from the mainstream press for his readers, "We must be more competitive to attract Black consumers, now that everyone else, including the daily paper, wants them." Bogle and others in the Black Press feel they must become more aggressive to protect their turf. Dr. Calvin Rolark, deceased Chair of Black Press Week, said last year, "No other media can be the medium for stories about Black America in the way that we can, and have been." Although the majority of Black newspapers are weekly publications, the Chicago Defender, New York Daily Challenger and Oakland Post newspapers are published each week day. Black newspapers do not appear to be going away, the average age of NNPA members in 1994 was 25 years of age. Most are in their third generation of family ownership, and the Philadelphia Tribune is the nation's oldest continuously published newspaper, now in its 111th year. The Houston Informer and Freedman and Afro-American publications have also been in operation for over a 100 years.

Letters To The Editor

DEAR EDITOR:

Praise God for Pastor Ron Gibson!

Maybe if more parents started back the whipping or paddling our children, we can make a reality of getting back to the basics that we hear a lot of empty talk about.

We stopped whipping our children and now the police are doing it for us.

If it were not for my mother whipping me, I would be dead. Just the fear of it kept me from being disobedient and I did not follow three of my playmates. I got to thinking about the whipping I was going to get and I went home. All three of the boys who wanted me to go with them were drowned. My life was spared because of the fear of a whipping.

Thank you Reverend Gibson
Allie Stevens

DEAR EDITOR:

I enjoyed the recent reception at the Edward-Dean Museum in Cherry Valley, in behalf of the "Images of Africa" exhibit that featured art from the continent of Africa. It was an educational and social event in commemoration of Black History Month in America.

Present at the reception and representing the sister cities of San Bernardino and Riverside respectively were County Board Supervisors Barbara Riordan and Kay Cenicerros. It was a pleasure meeting Lois Carson, international chair for the National Council of Negro Women, Inland Empire Chapter, and learning of her adventurous travel to Africa. I watched the ardent interest of a friend, Mary Irving, (San Bernardino) as she admired several artworks from Nigeria. Her enthused study mirrored respect for ethos, the moral, or universal quality that a work of art represents. Irving is the chairperson of the Sister City International program for Ile Ife, Nigeria and its sister city, San Bernardino!

The continued support of museum programs by community leaders and volunteers that transcends geographical boundaries is vital to the preservation of our international cultural heritage! I hope there will be an enhanced appreciation for the arts, and a heightened interest in cultural events by all peoples for the common good of mankind.

Sincerely,
Joan Marie Patsky,

Congressman Brown Visits Local Elementary Schools

Congressman George Brown Visits Schools To Demonstrate Support For The School Lunch Program.

Congressman George E. Brown, Jr. (D-San Bernardino) visited the Alessandro and Monterey Elementary Schools in San Bernardino to observe school lunch programs in operation and to demonstrate his support for the federally-funded school lunch program. The program is being targeted by Congressional Republicans as unnecessary and wasteful.

"I cannot understand how some of my colleagues in Washington can say that providing decent meals for children who are in need is wasteful," Congressman Brown said. "For some children the reduced-price or free lunches they eat at school may be the best or only meal they eat all day. The idea that these children may be the victims of mean-spirited political policies is unthinkable, but unfortunately a reality."

reform package would end the entitled status of the school breakfast and school lunch programs and create a school-based nutrition block grant. Although the bill does provide additional money up-front for school nutrition programs, the

Congressional Budget Office (CBO) projects that, over a five-year period, the proposed level of funding is not sufficient to keep up the current level of assistance given project growth in school enrollment, the expected increase in the percentage of children below the poverty level, and food price inflation. Based on CBO data, school nutrition block grant funding would be $2.3 billion less over the next five years than schools would receive under current law.

Congressional Republicans argue that any reductions in funding would be counteracted by reduced regulatory and administrative costs. However, the American School Food Service Association, as well as others who have looked at the proposal, do not believe that it will reduce administrative complexity for the state at local levels. Any savings in administration and bureaucracy would likely remain at the federal level. None of those savings would be available to schools to help cushion the impact of the funding reductions caused by the block grants.

The formula contained in the bill for allocating school nutrition block grant funds could cause a major shift in federal funds for school food program from poor states to affluent ones. Currently, those states with the most poor children get the most money. Under the Republican proposal, more money would be given to those states that serve the most meals, regardless of the ratio of children receiving free lunches compared to reduced price lunches.

Bridal Fair Coming To Los Angeles For People Of Color

I have been attending a lot of different bridal shows for the last few years, and it is a little disappointing to see one or two Blacks as exhibitors, and in most cases none.

I knew there were several Blacks in the wedding industry but where are they?

Shirley Inez Spruill CEO/Owner of Touch of Elegance Black Bridal Fair decided to do something about it, and for the last three years, she has been promoting minority businesses through the bridal fair. She said "the wedding industry is a $35 billion dollar per year with over 200,000 Blacks marrying each year and spending 1.6 billion dollars on wedding items and related services." The focus of Touch of Elegance is to identify, develop, and promote the minority businesses.

MVHS Hearing Impaired Student Wins Medal In Academic Decathlon

Shazia Siddiol, a Moreno Valley High School student, recently won the silver medal for speech at the Academic Decathlon competition with a nearly perfect score of 985 from a possible 1000. Shazia's speech about "Optimism" was presented in sign language while an interpreter translated for the judges.

The Academic Decathlon gives students a chance to show off their skills in ten events: Language and Literature, Mathematics, Science, Economics, Fine Arts, Social Science, Speech, Interview, Essay, and the Super Quiz. There are gold, silver, and bronze medals in each event. There are also team awards in the Super Quiz and for overall ranking. Over 30,000 students compete nationwide.

Shazia is part of a program that integrates the hearing impaired and the hearing at the Moreno Valley High School. Staff members at MVHS have readily accepted the hearing impaired students into their classes, where the students and their interpreters are placed along with hearing students.

Shazia's accomplishments include being named the valedictorian at Alessandro Middle School.

MVHS Restructuring Program Initiates Help For Incoming 9th Graders

For the last two years, the staff, students, and parents of MVHS have been making plans to improve the quality of education at the school through its Restructuring and school Improvement Programs. Beginning first semester this year, the 9th Grade Academic Foundation Program was piloted as the first of many steps to bring real and visible improvement to its student programs and curriculum.

MVHS identified several areas of the schools' programs that needed to be improved or totally redesigned. One of the most important areas dealt with the curriculum and the support services students should be receiving.

According to Becky Flinn, facilitator for the MVHS Restructuring Program, "It was clear from our research that incoming freshmen had the greatest needs. They had to be our #1 priority," she said.

Many students reported that the classes they were required to take didn't completely prepare them to meet their after-high school goals. Other students reported that they really didn't know how to study or how to do the kind of research that is often required of them in their classes.

The Technology and Interpersonal Skills (TipS) class is the first major curriculum and instruction piece to be implemented as part of the 9th Grade Academic Foundation Program. It has been designed to help address the difficult transition that incoming freshmen face when moving from the middle school to the high school.

The Foundation Program provides instruction in the core academic subjects of English, math, science (and, in one option, social studies). It also offers a course called Technology and Interpersonal Skills. This course covers units of study such as study and research skills, introduction to technology skills, career exploration and interpersonal skills. Sports Bra

Our Bodies

By Dr. Ernest Levister, M.D.

DEAR DR. LEVISTER: Should all women who exercise or play sports wear special bras? Will a sports bra keep breasts from sagging? Athletically Inclined

DEAR ATHLETIC: The answer to your first question is no.

It's not the exercise that makes breast tissue stretch, but heredity, density and elasticity of breast tissue, breast size and such factors as pregnancy and lactation.

The word "brag comes from the French "brassiere", by the way, which in turn derives from the older word meaning "armguard". Bras have existed since the 1920's. Bras are a matter of comfort, appearance and personal preference.

Sports bras were devised in the late 1970's and have grown into a multi-million dollar industry.

Many women don't experience breast discomfort, bouncing, chafing, sore nipples while exercising. For them a regular bra or no bra is O.K.. Large breasted women are more likely to experience discomfort than others but there are sports bras for all sizes.

The idea is to minimize motion and reduce chafing. They come in two types: those that compress or bind breasts and those that encapsulate each breast.

Some shopping tips: try on the bra and simulate the motions of your sport in the fitting room. Jump or run in place, reach up and bend.

Avoid bras with hooks, fasteners or rough seams positioned so that they chafe. Choose a bra with seamless cups or one with seams that don't cross the nipple.

A cotton/polypropylene blend will help "wick" away perspiration, thereby reducing chafing.

The band should be slightly elastic so that breathing isn't restricted. Be sure that the band at the bottom of the bra is wide enough to prevent the bra from riding up. A band at the top can also control bouncing.

The function of the bra straps is to hold the bra in place, not to support the breasts, so be sure the straps don't dig into your shoulders. Slightly elastic straps are better for activities that require overhead arm motion.

media other than Black newspapers. In addition, radio (75%), magazines and trade publications (62%), and TV (45%) were media used by advertisers to target African-Americans. Approximately half of the advertisers reported using Black newspapers to target African-Americans.

"Advertisers are not convinced that Black newspapers are the best way to reach Black audiences, nor do they perceive Black newspapers as being credible vehicles for advertising messages. One of the missing links for advertisers has been research that evaluates the audience that newspapers serve and documents the importance of Black newspapers," said Dr. Woods.

Other factors also are at play here. According to Dr. Woods, many Black newspapers have not been effective in promoting themselves to advertisers or providing appropriate reader demographic information, and most advertisers either rely on mainstream newspapers to reach African-Americans or use a mix of media forms for advertising.

"Everyone — publishers, advertisers, ad agencies and sales executives — should use the Milestones research study as a catalyst to reexamine old attitudes and identify new areas of opportunity. It is likely that the demand from African-American readers for the information Black newspapers provide and the newspapers' commitment to answer that challenge will continue," said Ken Smikle, publisher of Target Market News.

Newspapers, such as The Atlanta Voice which participated in management workshops as part of the project, have implemented strategies from the study to improve the publication's image with potential advertisers and increase sales force efficiency. "The grant study from the SearsRoebuck Foundation was instrumental in changes made in The Atlanta Voice Newspaper. These changes have resulted in an increased interest in readership and advertising revenues," said Janis L. Ware, publisher of The Atlanta Voice and board member of the NNPA.

The Milestones study is being marketed as a textbook to colleges and universities and will be a useful tool for students, faculty and journalism professionals, as well as provide insider information to advertisers, advertising agencies and marketers trying to court African-American consumers. To receive a copy of the Milestones study, contact the NNPA Foundation at (202)588-8764 or write the NNPA Foundation, 3200 13th St., NW, Washington, DC 20010.

Parenting The Godly Way

An Interview With Mom & Pop Winans Part-I

BY LANETTE WHITE

For over a decade the world has watched the offspring of David & Delores Winans (The Winans, BeBe & CeCe, Daniel Winans, and Angie & Debbie) sing the praises of the Lord Jesus Christ and wondered, "How did they raise so many children to desire to serve the Lord?" Since Christeen believes Proverbs 11:14, which says, "Where no counsel is, thy people fall" (KJV), we decided to seek the counsel of parents who know how to parent God's way.

CHRISTEEN: Did the children watch much television? With your household being as busy as it was, how were you able to restrict what your children watched on television? MOM WINANS: No, they didn't have time to watch much television. We were in church on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursdays & Sundays. They went to school, so that left them with homework. But when they did watch TV, I knew what types of shows that I watched, so I knew what they could watch on TV. TV is not like it was when we were raising children.

CT: That's true. Let's switch reels. How did you guys handle questions on sex and sexuality?

POP WINANS: What? (Laugh!) That word was hardly even used. The kids really didn't ask many questions on that subject.

CT: (Laugh!) You all sound like my mother. She always thought I was getting ready to do something when I brought up the subject.

MW: Things were a lot different than they are now. Kids didn't ask a lot of questions about those things when they were coming up.

CT: How did you all handle the problems of peer pressure?

PW: That really didn't come up.

CT: Really? You mean to tell me that you guys didn't have the same problems that all of the rest of the families had?

MW: (Chuckle) Well I'm sure that they had a little pressure, but I think they weighed the peer pressure against what was waiting for them at home and they decided to do the right thing. Now they were kids and they came against a few problems, but the teachings that they received early about the Lord, helped. Because when they got out, it became a part of them.

How Often Is Communion?

QUESTION: Dear Pastor Woods, I was raised in a church that served communion once a month. When I got married, I decided to attend my wife's church. They serve communion every Sunday. Isn't that too often?

San Bernardino, CA

ANSWER: Jesus very plainly said "As often as you eat this bread and drink this cup, you proclaim (declare) the Lord's death till He comes", 1st Corinthians 11:26. We must retrace our steps and understand the purpose of communion. Communion is our covenant meal with the Heavenly Father, recognizing the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The bread is symbolic of the body of Jesus Christ that was bruised for you and me. The cup is symbolic of the blood of Jesus that was shed for you and me, that washes us white as snow.

Questions & Answers

Dr. Reginald Woods

We need to continually be in remembrance of the meaning of communion. Some people need to partake in communion every single day. Jesus never gave a definite day or time frame for communion. He simply said, "As often as you..." Some churches do it once a year, some once a month, others every Sunday. The key is that it not become ceremonial but be an impacting experience that causes us to appreciate the sacrifice of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Jim Brown Is Still Running And Scoring Touchdowns

By LELAND STEIN lull
BVN Sports Editor

"Show a caring concern for the youth and try to solve problems instead of creating them. Accept others for what they really are... while trying to relate and communicate with all people, whether they agree or disagree with your philosophy of life." --Charles Faulkner

LOS ANGELES - Jim Brown, the legendary football star with the Cleveland Browns from 1957-65, set the standards that all running backs are measured against. He traversed the gridiron for an amazing 12,312 yards (5.2 average per carry) and found the end zone 126 times. Both were NFL records.

Just as Michael Jordan did later, Brown was one of the first superstar athletes to retire in the prime of his game. He shocked the sporting world when he called it quits while filming the Dirty Dozen just outside of London. The year before the abrupt cancellation of his football career, Jim had torched the NFL for 1,544 yards and 21 touchdowns.

After retiring from football in 1966, Brown, made over 17 movies in a 10 year span. He became proficient at the acting trade, as evident by the number of movies made, and still appears on the big screen from time to time, although he's not actively seeking acting opportunities.

Now, Jim has endeared himself to making a real contribution to the improvement of the youths and adults that have strayed away from education, family and general respect for other peoples lives or property.

Brown's Amer-I-Can Foundation is: Out front in trying to reach, teach, rehabilitate and show wayward individuals how to improve their performance in society, by clear thinking - through education - and avoidance of mindless impulses.

Brown shared his views on many subjects in a question-and-answer session:

Q: How did you get reunited with the Cleveland Browns and what's your title.

A: When you are a Brown, you are always a Brown. When you spend nine years with a team you are always there. Jim Brown is just a small part of that history. The commonalty we have today is based upon maturity of understanding and everyone wanting to win, plus, my independence is no longer looked upon the same way it was at that time. Coach (Bill) Belichick and I are very good friends and owner (Art) Modell is a heads up, straight forward, individual that has helped many, many players that people don't now about. They are a first-class organization. My becoming active is mainly because of the coach. I've found that I can deal with every element of the Browns straight-up, and I like it because the Cleveland fans have always been in my corner. . .they have always been tremendous and still are. I like being able to make a contribution to the younger players and being back in the city of Cleveland. I'm a Special Consultant to the coach. Modell's son, David Modell, is a special individual, and he was very instrumental in re-introducing me to the fans and he probably brought everything together.

Q: I know you left football in your prime and never looked back, but have you ever reflected and wished you had played longer.

A: Not at all. I'm very happy I left when I did. It's no question football players are gladiators who are controlled by somebody else, with no power other than the power of performance. The world isn't run by football players and the decisions that affect the lives of human beings are not made by football players.

Q: How have you used sports in your life.

A: It allowed me to understand education, and when I understood education I applied it to sports. So sports came to me at an early age, because I was interested in the physicality of it, but by getting involved it made me understand education. Even more important, I could apply that education to life. So the reason I could quit was because I didn't think sports was the thing. I thought education and decision making was the thing . . . and it is.

Q: How do you view the importance of sports in the black community.

A: I think sports are over-emphasized in the Black community. I believe that the Black athlete has to deal with the principals of economics, hard work, culture, community and education. And I think that we have been given sports and our sports heroes have been made intellectuals, which they are not. It's a very sad thing. Our teachers, the good fathers and mothers and fine business people have all been de-emphasized, by the over emphasis on the high profile glamorized industry that is controlled by none of us.

Q: What do you think of the Black Coaches Association's stance against the NCM.

A: It's something I try to stay out of, like I stayed out of the Rodney King situation. But, I do have a lot of respect for the BCA. But there are no black coaches or entertainers that compare to a Paul Robeson or Marcus Garvey. So I'm into the revolutionaries, because bullets are flying all over the ghettos, drugs are exchanging hands, there's black-on-black crime, incarceration, unwed mothers and poverty are the things I deal with as priorities. Killings, car jacking and the predators in the black neighborhoods are destroying our culture, and these wrongs are my priorities.

But, I must say in relation to the BCA, anyone that helps any human being is great. It is very important for every individual, your father, you and the coaches to do great work, but when you put it into the proper context, millions of individuals get no chance to play nothing. So, let's acknowledge the importance of overall change of the conditions of this country.

especially the black populace that really isn't all about college. A great leader has to deal with the majority of the people. I was very fortunate to go to college, but the problem is not college. The problem is why do people want to kill each other or are so interested in doing or dealing drugs. Why is that negative culture so popular now? We need to prioritize and identify the most meaningful areas of work right now.

Q: Would you like to see the black athlete do more in their communities.

A: I would like to see the black athlete become more educated about life, history and culture. The average black athlete doesn't realize they all work for somebody. Whatever they think they are, they work for somebody. They have the economic power to do more.

Q: Is a black athletic coalition necessary to improve business opportunities and unite economically.

A: It would be an improvement. The black athlete should study the Jewish culture and learn how to emulate it. How to work together, develop economically and make government accountable. They have been in the adversary situation for so long, it's like unbelievable, but they have managed to overcome most of it. One of the ways they did it is by accepting and loving themselves, and not seeking to be approved of by others.

Q: How is your work with youth gangs progressing. What is the name of the organization.

Benjamin Pushing Hard To Get Back

Ex-Riverside North player's rehabilitation almost complete.

By LELAND STEIN lull
BVN Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES - Pain, it's a feeling we all try to avoid. Sonny Benjamin, former Riverside North basketball star, knows all about it.

First he tears a ligament in his knee before the start of his freshman year at Oregon State. Then, he had to endure the long rehabilitation process that always makes you wonder if the effort will ever lead you back to the free flowing and flexible position your knee and body was in before the injury. Finally, never having an opportunity to play in a college game before suffering such a serious injury test your will and resolve. The pain was as much mental as physical.

Well, Benjamin was back on the basketball court this year as a red-shirt freshman and found himself sitting more than playing.

At the Sports Arena in the Beavers' last game of the season against USC, which they won in overtime 83-81, Benjamin made a minimal contribution of 4 points in six minutes of action, thus completing a long hard year of relearning how his body would respond to his rehabilitation efforts.

"It was a serious let-down to have something like that happen to you, in your first year," said Benjamin, a 6-foot-7 forward. "Of course every player wants to play as much as he can. But, I'm a positive person and I've tried to turn this negative into a positive, by working extra hard to get back and taking the opportunity to learn what college life is all about."

Added Vickie Benjamin, Sonny's mother: "I want him to get a college degree, and if possible achieve his dream of going to the NBA. I hope he understands the chance he has in school and makes the most of his opportunity. The injury probably helped him focus more on school than basketball, and that has to be good."

After leading North to the California Interscholastic Federation 2AA title his senior year while averaging 17 points and 10 rebounds, and being named on the Best in the West list, as well as to the All-American teams by Street & Smith, Benjamin was excited and ready to showcase his many skills in the Pac-10.

In fact, he chose Oregon State because of the excellent opportunity to play immediately. But, he ended up testing his will before getting a chance to display his skills.

Although the Beavers did not have a winning season (9-18 overall, 612 Pac-10), Benjamin said he didn't get frustrated, but was very glad to just be back out there and "contributing to the team." He also noted that he wasn't as quick or mobile or could run the floor with the same speed as before the injury. But, he feels that by next year he will be able to do most, if not all, the things he could do before.

Benjamin's brother, Corey, junior a 6-6 forward, who led Fontana to the CIF I-M title this year, says it would be great to be united with his brother, but isn't totally committed to that yet.

A: Amer-I-Can Foundation is probably the most progressive organization in the country. We are in eight states now and going into about twelve others. Ex-convicts and ex-gang-bangers run the organization. We are teaching in schools, training policemen and community people. We deal with contracts and independents. We have a curriculum that's being accepted across the country. And the people that run the organization are the people that everybody says could not be part of the system. Amer-I-Can was envisioned from the Black Economic Union in the 60's. At that time we dealt with economic development of black people, by, establishing a base of expertise. In 1968 we got over I million dollars from the Ford Foundation and we used black MBA's from around the country. We affected over 400 black businesses. In the 90's, I'm dealing with convicts and ex-gangbangers. They must be the most inspirational individuals in the country because of their change, and they will also bridge the gap to get back into the system. Also, at some point they will join forces with those young MBA's from the 60's, because any group that's going to be a part of the system, has to use all the services available. It's real easy for me in the 90's, because I dealt with the 60's. I didn't march or shoot during that time, I was busy creating the concept of entrepreneur.

Q: What are some of the reasons you have emerged as a guy that is making difference.

A: By understanding culture and dealing with the concept of economic development. Admitting this is the greatest country in the world, but knowing there are many things wrong, I was able to transcend the philosophies. By that I mean: Passive resistance is no philosophy, non-violence is no philosophy, violence is not rewarding, dependence is not rewarding, but education and self-sufficiency is rewarding. So, I've always dealt with education and self sufficiency...I will not beg.

Q: Are you still seeking acting opportunities. Are acting opportunities on the up swing for blacks.

A: There is no up swing when someone else controls the buttons. So, how would I know when I don't control it, nor does any other blacks. I have no interest in acting right now, but that is what I'm talking about, get a, economic base and finance your own films and hire anyone you want.

Q: When you have an audience with trouble youth, what advice do you give them.

A: My concept is very simple: You are responsible for your own actions, your own deeds. . .you are responsible for you! I don't want to beg or steal for anything. I want to maximize my resources and ability. I want to take one step at a time and be successful. The greatest art on earth is one human being helping another. It's a simple formula, but it works for me.

WE ARE FAMILY: Corey (L) and Sonny Benjamin both have led their high schools to CIF titles. Photo by Gary Montgomery-BVN

"Anyone would love to play with their brother in college if it was possible, but I'm not going to try to convince or sway him either way," said Sonny. "He's just going to have to weigh all his options and make the best decision that is right for him at that time. But, sure it would be special to have him at Oregon State."

With or without his brother, Sonny feels the Beavers have a solid chance to get back into the Pac-10 race next year and in the following years.

"We have a young team that is hungry to be competitive in this league," said Benjamin. "This school has a strong basketball history (A.C. Greed and Gary Payton played here) and I expect us to continue that history in the future."

Benjamin notes that he likes playing in the Pac-10 and the league proved this year that they can "compete with any conference in the country."

In particular, he likes the support the team gets from the town and the fact that the city is kind of quiet and it is a great place to concentrate on his studies, as well as play basketball. He added that staying in the Pac-10 will allow him to play in front of his family every year, and against guys he has been playing against all his life.

Sonny says he plans to "work on a medium range shot and continue to strengthen his knee," and don't be surprised if we are at or near the top of the league in a few years.

Reynaldo Rey: More Than Just A Laughing Matter!

Rey Departs Off-Broadway Play, Returns to Hollywood

Comedian Reynaldo Rey once billed himself as "the red-headed, freckled faced, Black Indian country boy with the Mexican name." Truth be told, the veteran entertainer is an ex-professor, visual artist, actor, writer, lyricist, businessman and then, comic. In fact, with 39 television shows, 28 movies, 12 stage plays, three comedy albums and two comedy videos, his billing is no laughing matter.

Rey has been treating theatergoers around the country to a first hand view of his comedic magic with his starring role alongside recording artist, Millie Jackson, in the hit, musical comedy stage play, Young Man, Older Woman. The box office success has been selling out around the country for the past two years as Reynaldo simply wowed audiences with his hilarious antics as Jackson's older husband.

"I've been out on the road with Millie Jackson for over two years now. I closed my leg of the tour in New York City with a bang! We were consistently sold out for a full month's run. Now it's back to Hollywood where I can pursue several personal projects that I've had on hold," offers Rey.

Hollywood embraces the gentleman that audiences

young and old have grown to recognize and appreciate. Reynaldo Rey endeared himself to television viewers nationally with his famous swagger while playing the role of Ray, the mailman on NBC-TV's long running series, 227. Older fans relish the scope of this man who was managed by legendary entertainer, Redd Foxx, for 12 years, while younger enthusiasts embrace his scene stealing performances in movies like House Party 3 and White Men Can't Jump, not to mention his HBO Def Comedy Jam blow out!

Reynaldo was teaching school in Cleveland when he decided show business was his true calling. It was Redd Foxx who saw him performing in a nightclub and took the fledgling comedian under his wing. Foxx put him on Merv Griffin's show, and hired him as his opening act in Las Vegas. And the rest, as they say, is history. Reynaldo went on to write for Norman Lear's Sanford and Son, secure regular comedy gigs and eventually land television roles.

Not one to rest on any laurels, Rey has produced and co-directed his own music video, "I'm Scared A' U," based on his popular rap tune, performed on Def Comedy Jam and in the play, Young Man, Older Woman. He's recently completed the script for a television sitcom entitled, Hollywood P.O. and is working on a screenplay called, Revelation of Evil, a comedy horror.

"I've played church houses, whore houses and the White House," proclaims Rey, a man blessed with a sense of the absurd. "And I've received the same depth of laughter from them all. In fact, I've performed in as many churches as clubs. Versatility is the name of my game."

How else to describe a man who can perform blue humor, yet emphatically recite Martin Luther King's I Have A Dream. Just a "red-headed, freckled faced, Black Indian country boy with a Mexican name"...we think not!

Rey will be the guest MC for the San Bernardino Boys and Girls Club of America's program for disadvantaged youth on Friday, April 21, 6:00 - 10:00 p.m. at the Kola Shanah Starlight Room, 1746 Mt. Vernon, San Bernardino.

CBS Entertainment will host community screenings of Under One Roof in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and Detroit. Under One Roof cast members will attend the community screenings to get audience feedback final encourage viewer support.

Gas? Yes, Natural

(NAPS)—The next car you see zipping by on the road may be powered by natural gas. In fact, one that you may have seen on the speedway is a 700-horsepower drag racing car. Aptly named, The Natural Gasser, it can do a quarter mile in 9.38 seconds.

The Natural Gasser is one of 30,000 natural gas vehicles on the road today. By the year 2000, 1.46 million are expected.

Driver Joe Mezquita, promotes the use of natural gas vehicles (NGVs) by racing it in National Hot Rod Association races across the United States. One of its sponsors, Consolidated Natural Gas, operates the second largest NGV fleet in the country, second only to the U.S. Post Office.

NGVs have a number of advantages. They are clean, economical (the current price of natural gas averages 80 cents for the equivalent of a gallon) and they are safe. The American Gas Association predicts that by the year 2000 there may be as many as 1.46 million NGVs on the road.

The "Masked Man" For The Homeless Faces Big Challenge Ahead

The Black Cowboy that rides the range in Riverside and San Bernardino Counties, stomping out local homelessness once again finds his back against a wall. In providing room and board for eight homeless individuals, The Goodman Homeless Inc. in association with the "Lady of Grace, founded by Mrs. Ruth Mickens, is having problems keeping their doors open until approved funding can be received. "The Goodman" is shown in photo passing out snacks during one of his three visits per week to the Armory, located at Fairmount Park in downtown Riverside.

"The recent closing of the Armory proposed another problem for "The Goodman" and the homeless, because the ability to stay in constant communication with some of the homeless clients will be possibly forever interrupted. Over the past few months we have helped families and individuals that live at the Armory better their chances to seek employment or obtain services, said The Lady of Grace, Ruth Mickens.

The Lady of Grace operates as a communication base that transmits or receives messages and correspondents for our homeless clients. In the past two months they have found four individuals that have found permanent employment. "The Goodman" firmly believes that the Government gives handouts, friends give hand-ups. In less than sixty days four successful clients worked their way back to a productive wage-earning citizen. "We are not greater than God said "The

Goodman", and God helps those who help themselves."

When asked, what drives "The Goodman's" desire to help the homeless, he replies that "I am not driven by the number of successes we have in helping human beings; we make a great impact in the lives of the peoples we reach; but the energy is derived from my anxiety, that annoying feeling, deep in my stomach, the fear that there is that someone else that needs some immediate help."

Presently the plans of "The Goodman" will be to help secure funds for Lady of Grace to operate their first four bedroom and board facility in Riverside. "The Goodman" will continue to campaign for the building of a 30 unit mobile home park in Rubidoux. "The Goodman" admits that he is a long way from building the 30 unit mobile home park that he projected to build in Rubidoux. The age old problem is money.

The county has been very supportive of the idea of building the mobile home park. But the problem of needing $30,000 to start the process with the the County Planning Department for zone changing and acquiring a land usage permit; is keeping this projected mobile home park from going forward.

The most pressing issues are funds needed to keep a four bedroom house going for ninety days for eight individuals. This pilot program will allow a homeless person to begin a new start in helping theirself.

Persons interested in joining the fight against Homelessness, please contact "The Lady Grace" (909) 325-2935 or write: The Goodman Homeless, Inc. P.O. Box 3383, Riverside, CA 92519.

The Board of Education of the San Bernardino City Unified School District named Calvin White to the principal position at Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Middle School recently. He took over his new assignment from Stephanie Cereceres who has been appointed to Shandin Hills Middle School.

Employed by the district since 1978, White had been serving as vice-principal at Pacific High School at the time of his new appointment. From 1988 to 1993 he was vice-principal at San Bernardino High and had also been vice-principal at Curtis Middle School. His move to Curtis followed eight years as a counselor at Pacific and Cajon High Schools and he was also an industrial arts teacher at Fremont and Shandin Hills Intermediate Schools.

In other assignments, the Board of Education named Sylvia Torres to succeed Barbara Stewart who retired as district Purchasing Manager last June.

A buyer for the district since 1990, Torres came to San Bernardino from her position

A ten year veteran, Fenster's education career began with a teaching position at Lytle Creek Elementary and she also taught at Cypress. She went from Cypress to a resource teacher position at Newmark Elementary and then became vice-principal at Davidson. She has also held this position at North Park.

New Chief Of Medicine Appointed At Riverside General Hospital

Daniel Lee Bouland, M.D. has been appointed as the new Chief of Medicine at Riverside General Hospital. He replaces Habeeb Bacchus, M.D. who retired after twenty-five years of service at Riverside General.

Urban League Addresses A Multitude Of Issues

Next Meeting, Saturday, March 25, 8:00 a.m., Park Avenue Baptist Church.

The Greater Riverside Urban League has been busy. They have dealt with workshops on Prop. 187 and Brainstorming Sessions on non-violence, desegregations and now on Saturday, March 25, 1995, Affirmative Action. The youth are busy through the Star program. The recently had a leadership training workshop, a talent show and they appeared on television shows at Crown Cable in Riverside and on Inland Empire Alive KCSB Channel in San Bernardino. The session for the workshops on non-violence and leadership with the youth were taught by, Rev. James Lawson from Holman United Methodist in Los Angeles. In his presentation about Non-Violence, about 50 people heard the history of the subject. He took the subject back to Biblical times and stated Ghandi was not the first to practice non-violence. He gave examples of groups, who are today, using non-violence tactics to make achievements. Justice for Janitors is working to raise benefits because they have been reduced to the pre 1980's era. Rev. Lawson suggest we throw color out of the window, develop coalitions and organize to affect change. Following the Brainstorming, League Board members and other community leaders met for a National Urban League Training Session. The facilitator from the national office was Vincent

Austin. He gave the training and explained the responsibility of a Board of Directors in any organization. One clear message is that Board members do not mettle in the day-to-day operations of the organization. The talent show was exciting for the youth. When asked how it came about, Monica Damper, Instructor/Counselor for Project STAR said, "Amos McGlothen came to Yolanda Nava, acting director, with the idea of a talent show so the youth could have something to do." The winner received $100 cash and everyone else received a trophy. First place in singing was awarded to Gabriel Nowee, second Love Devine, third Something Dope

In the Rap Drama and Dance category, first was David Hill, Second was Bonified Huslers and third was Martha Ruiz. The Brainstorming session dealt with the 30 year practice of busing Black & Hispanic children to neighborhood outside of their community to create schools which are ethnically balanced. After 30 years newer parents are speaking out. Some parents feel that there is no longer a need to bus their children. At the time of desegregation, schools located in the minority neighborhoods were viewed as inferior. Many parents, however, feel the wrong message is sent to students who are bussed. Parents also feel they cannot be involved in their student's education. The discussion continues. Saturday, the subject of Affirmative Action will be discussed at 8:00 - 10:00 a.m. at Park Avenue Baptist Church. The Brainstorming Breakfasts are sponsored by a grant from the Irvine Foundation.

Jim King, President Local Urban League and Area Manager, So. Cal. Gas Company, Rev. James Lawson, of Holman's Methodist Church, Los Angeles, and Yolanda Nava, Acting Executive Director of the Greater Riverside Urban League.

Andrew Chripzczuch, singer, writer, musician and composer.

Second Place Winners (Rapping) "Bonified Huslers".

School And Business Partnership Formed To Help Students

Inghram Elementary School students in San Bernardino are use to visitors on their campus. They have learned to sit quietly and pay attention to guest speakers. Whenever the principal, Joyce Payne, asks questions to see who is listening, eager hands are raised to answer.

At a recent assembly, however, the children could not contain their joy at an announcement that their campus visitors from FHP Health Care wanted to be their partners and friends.

"We realize the climate financial cutbacks have created for schools across the nation," said Nova Hunn, public affairs supervisor. "Our hope is to provide support to partnership schools and to entire school districts. We want to let the children know that businesses do care about their education and their future."

An adoption ceremony was held at the school to celebrate the newly formed partnership. The kindergarten class welcomed parents and friends from the community with a song performed in English and Spanish. Performer Nachaka sang her rendition of "The Greatest Love of All".

"It's important for the children to know that people from the community care about them," said Principal Joyce Payne. "We are fortunate and thankful to FHP Health Care for showing our children that they are very important and worthy of attention."

In addition to an exchange of partnership plaques and certificate signing, FHP Health Care representatives presented the school with a $1,000 contribution.

"Our partnerships are serious endeavors to show that a child's learning environment should not be stifled or limited," said Hunn. "This contribution is our way of saying we understand it takes the collaborative effort of businesses, community leaders, and parents to raise our youths."

FHP Health Care, the nation's third largest health maintenance organization (HMO), has adopted more than 30 schools within Southern California. The managed care company recently expanded its Partnerships for Achievement and Learning in Schools (PALS) program to work throughout school districts.

According to Hunn, many of the programs scheduled for Inghram will focus on health education and include Career Days, sponsorships of school awards programs, field trips, and visits from the company mascot, Stuffed, who teaches children about anatomy and fitness.

"I hope more businesses and even community organizations will get involved with our schools," said Payne. "It's needed."

The children are excited. They look forward to more visitors like FHP Health Care to bring them good news.

Rethinking Affirmative Action

Part One Of A Two Part Series
BY DR. MANNING MARABLE

Several nights ago, I stood on a street corner in midtown Manhattan, attempting to hail a taxicab late on a cold, frosty evening. I was wearing a business suit and topcoat, and carrying an oversized briefcase. Despite my outstretched arm, I watched as five medallion cabs in a row which were "on duty" sped past. One cab even slowed down a little, apparently surveying the color of my skin, and then speeded up.

I mention this little incident to illustrate that African-Americans and many other people of color can never forget the fundamental reasons for the adoption and institutionalization of affirmative action programs: discrimination and inequality. A generation ago, the 1964 Civil Rights Act was passed to outlaw legal racial segregation in public accommodations. At that time, banks openly and routinely denied credit to Blacks and Hispanics; White universities refused to admit most minority students; unions often refused to train women and minorities as apprentices; and corporations rejected well-qualified women and people of color from most positions. Even today, thirty years after the original adoption of affirmative action, programs which factor into account the real historic and contemporary patterns of discrimination rooted in gender and racial inequality, minorities remain grossly under-represented in many white collar professions.

frequently excluded from consideration. Overall, Blacks still suffer twice the rate of unemployment as Whites.

It is in this context that the recent political and ideological assault on affirmative action must be understood. Americans have made significant progress to reduce institutional discrimination, yet the struggle for full representation and equality for women and people of color for jobs, incomes, and across the board has scarcely been won. Nevertheless, a deep and hostile impression exists among millions of Americans that affirmative action policies have gone "too far," and that White males have become the victims of "reverse discrimination." In 1989, the Supreme Court overturned a program in Richmond, Virginia, which set aside 30 percent of all municipal contracts favoring racial minorities. In several court cases, Whites are challenging the use of different admission standards which increase Black and Hispanic enrollments, and scholarships designated for minority students.

In Congress last month, the House voted overwhelmingly to cancel a tax deferment which helped companies selling television, radio and cable stations to minorities. Since 1978, this tax break helped to increase Black and Hispanic ownership of broadcast outlets 600 percent. African-Americans in Congress interpreted this crucial vote as the first in a series of legislative assaults on minority set-aside and affirmative action programs. Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-MD, declared, "The people around the country are looking at this and seeing a race debate."

But the most important attack against affirmative action nationally is being waged in California. Two conservative academics, Tom Wood and Glynn Custred, have proposed the California Civil Rights Initiative, which if passed next year would outlaw race and gender based preferences in hiring, government contracts and school admissions. USA Today reports that the proponents of California's anti-affirmative action initiative are now joining forces with anti-tax groups, building a vast coalition of conservative voters favoring smaller government and fewer regulations.

Although we must emphasize that affirmative action remains necessary in order to address real patterns of discrimination in employment and throughout society, it is also clear that a majority of Americans now favor the elimination of such programs and policies. The question now confronts progressives and liberals, as well as others who have favored the creation of a just society. Where do we go from here? We must move toward the development of remedies which simultaneously accomplish two objectives: first, eliminate discrimination through the creation of greater opportunities for racial minorities and women, and second, the implementation of such policies which are framed within a single standard of excellence, and cannot be challenged as "quotas." We need to begin a national dialogue around these objectives, and begin to move forward.

Affirmative Action Workshop A Success!

Fred Jordan

About 150 people, heads of organizations and community leaders met at the Orange Show this week to bring together a coalition of community groups to plan the assault on Affirmative Action.

Fred Jordan, Chair of the Statewide Coordinating Committee, formed to fight the Constitutional initiative drive and the anti - Affirmative Action legislation was one of the speakers. He said this assault is legally and morally wrong.

Frances Grice, one of the organizers said, "I thought this was behind us. We are at the doors of Reconstruction. As we end Apartheid in South Africa, we become separated in America....We are losing the gains of the 60's."

"Our aim is to coordinate our activities," said Grice. She said we must be all marching and unified as women, minorities and community-based organizations.
