BIZARRE MORENO VALLEY SCHOOL DISTRICT "SB" BOARD TAKES ACTION AGAINST "MB"

The Moreno Valley School District board this week voted 3-2, on a tie-breaking vote by Board President Tracey Vackar, to fire Mrs. Linda Winter, Mr. Rodrick Burks, and Assistant Superintendent Dr. Linda Winter of creating an internal investigation of her highway, Metropolitan. On Friday, 80 women filed a "422" lawsuit, in which she claims that she was not being transparent about the internal investigation of her husband, Highway Patrolman John W. Mack, President of the National Urban League, pulling the National Conference from California because of the anti-Affirmative Action policy of Gov. Pete Wilson. The conference was scheduled for July, 1996, in Los Angeles, and was expected to draw some 20,000 members, a Job Opportunities Showcase, a gala concert and other highlights. Greer Gillson, the head of the Moreno Valley School District, said the board will not hear any more of the "anti-Affirmative Action" policy of Gov. Pete Wilson. New Report Card Spells Trouble For California Teens

State Ranks in the Bottom of the Class in Critical Areas for Children

California Report Card '95 on California's children released today by Children's Now, a nonpartisan policy and advocacy organization for children, shows startling trends for California's 8.9 million children, with the poverty rate escalating more rapidly than in the rest of the nation. While the group measured key indicators for children in a number of areas, one of the most grave was the picture painted for California teens. Among the most alarming trends for teens are:

- In 1993, California had the highest teenage unemployment rate in the nation at 26.2%.
- Each year, 100,000 California high school graduates do not go on to college and have little guidance in their transition to work.
- In 1991, 837 California children, the equivalent of more than 25 classrooms, were victims of homicide. The rate of homicides perpetrated against children in California is 59% higher than the rest of the nation.
- In 1990, over 7,000 babies were born to teenage girls in California. California's teenage birth rate is the 43rd worst in the nation.

California's teenage birth rate is worst since California began tracking this statistic in 1976.

The state might be coming out of the recession, but its children have been left in the dust," stated James P. Steyer, president of Children's Now. "These problems have been brewing over the past decade and we must make a commitment to help them transition to productive adults. This report card sends a dramatic message to the nation. We must be smart about the effect of those changes on our most valuable and most vulnerable assets—our children. The Children's Accountability Act would give lawmakers a useful tool to make informed decisions on measures affecting children. This could begin to reverse the intolerable trends outlined in this '95 Report Card," concluded Ms. Salisbury.

Children Now will present the California Report Card '95 at the first meeting of a newly convened California State Assembly Select Committee on California's Children, following the press conference at the State Capitol. The group will be joined by youth and families to discuss the implications of the findings in this report and to identify solutions to improve the lives of California's children.

Families for California Report Card '95 and California: The State Of Our Children '95 was provided by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, as part of its Kids Count project.

What everyone in the stands and on the field felt was that Angela Williams, 15, a freshman at Chino High is just too quick.

She was winning the 100-meter in an eye-popping 11.24 seconds, Williams proved she is too fast, too determined, too well coached, and too good to be denied.

Not concerned about her age or size (5-foot, 6), Williams lets her feet and work ethic do the talking, as a result she's not entirely surprised by what's happening for her.

"I've been working hard to get here," Williams said. "I noticed that I started doing big things in track at a young age, and this year has been no different. I must admit it's been happening at such a young age.

Nikki Giovanni Visits San Bernardino

By Stanson Allen Weeks

In 1967, while I lay in a cab, Yolonda Cornelia Giovanni, Jr. was graduating, along with honors from Fisk University, the same campus that benefitted from her efforts to strengthen their chapter of the (SNCC) Students Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. She went on to attend the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University. She holds an Honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from Wilberforce University in Ohio. She later held associate professorships at Queens college and Huntington College in Indiana.

Ms. Giovanni, better known as Nikki Giovanni, makes her home in Cincinnati, Ohio, where she resides with her son. Nikki, a noted poet, political activist, educator, and author of almost twenty books, is enjoying the success of her latest books Sacred Cows and Sor positions at Queens college on the black experience. Her lectures feature gospel music. Her master list of published works includes her performance in the hit musical Things Ain’t What They Used To Be an eccentric, philanthrading man who takes for granted his educated, hard-working wife, Roseanne, played by the talented actress/singer Angela Teck. Not only does K.T. take Rose­anne for granted, but he is living in a fantasy world, and his atten­tion is divided between his imaginary deals on his cellular phone and his misplaced focus on the "busty-ful" Tasha, played by up and coming actress/comedian Tangy Amos. "The Black women in her poem Trippin’...giving oil to the Arab cause." In closing Nikki, a history major at St. Mary’s College, makes her nose; giving oil to the Arab cause.

Nikki Giovanni circled by her Sorors. But, her poems also portray deep and passionate love relationships. This phenom­enal poet, roots many of her poems in fact and history. Giovanni, a history major with a profound vision, speaks proudly of the evolution of the Black woman in her poem Ego Tripple. "I was born in the Congo, I walked the fertile crescent and built the sphinx...the fillings from my finger nails are semi-precious jewels...On a trip up north I caught a cold and blew my nose; giving oil to the Arab cause." In this and other works were recited during Nikki’s strict visit to Cal State San Bernardino.

In her talk she predicted the demise of these popular athletes whom the media hyped up to only tear down later. "O.J. and Tyson are great examples...Grass Hill is the here this month on the cover of every magazine but, give the media the time and they will have him shown in a negative light." She remarks, "Affirmative­ Action is not a save all buy, it gives people an opportunity without automatic dismissal. You may fail, there are no guar­antees that you will succeed." "Okay, City, she contin­ues was horrible! As long as we think we can go anywhere and blow up everything, then people are going to think they can too...The media builds resentment by painting situa­tions to be the fault of foreigners. They keep us from feeling compassion." She also probes, "Thirty and forty are wonderful ages because you know where your going. Don’t buy into the myth that high school is the best time of your life, no one has a good time in high school." In clining Nikki, a devout Tekke saint, in exci­t ing looking into the future. One obligation is to the future not to the past. Care about the life around you! Remember forgiveness, perseverance, and adjustment. Open dialogues! "The Southland

Power Rangers Come To Big Screen

The popularity of "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" stems, in part, from its fantastical characters and locations. "Kids love the colors and the lights and sounds and music," says the movie's producer, Suzanne Todd. "It takes them through an exciting experience."

The Power Rangers' appeal also comes from more than just action and adventure. The characters themselves demonstrate some important everyday values to the audience. "Kids adds Todd, "That could be me: 'I could do that,' when watching the Power Rangers live their lives as high school students." Through his interweaving of these and other concepts, like the importance of environmental protection and the challenges of fitting in as a group — into the storyline. The Power Rangers have subsequently become role models to children across the country. "We've always tried," says David Yost, who plays Billy, the Blue Ranger. "to give positive messages to kids." Adds Karan Ashley, who plays the Pink Ranger. "Our characters are always achieving: practical jokes are a way of life for us."

The director is Craig Stearns. The screenplay is by Anne Olsen, from a story by John Kangas and Oloma. Haim Saban, Shuki Levy and Suzanne Todd are the producers. David Cote is the co-producer, and Joseph Pevney is the costume designer. Craig Stevens is the production designer and Paul Murphy, A.C.S., is the director of photography. The film is edited by Wayne Whitehead, A.C.E.
Tillie's Memorial Chapel Expands 'Musical Presence' Service

With a significant degree of automated selectivity, Tillie's Memorial Chapel is said to have a positive effect on people, especially those undergoing ordeals. For both background music and funeral home ceremonies, we offer an incredible variety of instrumental and vocal renditions. Proper chapel music, because it is exclusive in its enveloping and therefore more meaningful, he notes.

Polin points out that a number of scientific studies have shown that certain music can have a positive effect on people, especially those undergoing upheaval and therefore more meaningful. He adds that "proper chapel music, because it is exclusive in its enveloping and therefore more meaningful, he notes.

"Our 'Musical Presence' system is uniquely designed with this in mind," the music is exclusively selected and recorded for use in funeral homes and is played on equipment engineered for our facility," Polin says. "We can accommodate just about any request a family might have." This helps to make our service more personal and therefore more meaningful, he notes.

Polin says that 'Musical Presence' is in one example of how his firm is committed to serving the community, "Bringing Merrill Woman's. music of music to our families has been an important part of our care-taking."

Tillie's Memorial Chapel is located at 1537 W. Baseline, San Bernardino.

Hasan's Accessories And Sir Charles Brown's Productions To Present African Fashion Explosion

Hasan's Accessories, in conjunction with Sir Charles Brown's Productions, will be hosting a cultural Wearable Art (Fashion Show) event on July 15, 1995. This gala affair will be held at the Sturges Center for the Fine Arts from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., co-sponsored by the Rialto Black History Committee, Inc. Unlike any other Fashion Show that you may have seen, the show will be truly fascinating as Sir Charles combines his 25 years as a fashion designer and director with his worldwide travels to such countries as Kenya, Tanzania, Nigeria, Egypt, Ethiopia, China and Israel. Sir Charles' expertise and extraordinary creativity promises to delight the senses of all in attendance.

Also showcased will be the Diamond Mind African Dance Troupe with drumming and poetry. Indeed a delight in itself!

Please mark your calendar and tell others about this African Fashion Explosion. Tickets are available at Hasan's Accessories - 122 S. Riverside Ave. (909) 230-4664 and Tadel's Fine Gallery - 334 N. "E" Street (909) 885-5568.

"Musical Presence" was developed by Merrill P. Womach, a nationally known gospel vocalist and recording artist who has endured his own extraordinary measure of grief. His singing has a distinctive quality which comforts and uplifts — perhaps the result of contending with his own ordeals.

On Thanksgiving Day of 1961, Womach barely escaped a crash in which he was burned 94% of his body and therefore more meaningful. He adds that "proper chapel music, because it is exclusive in its enveloping and therefore more meaningful, he notes.
