THE WORLD WATCHES AS AMERICA
ENTERS A NEW ERA OF HOPE

They all went to Washington, people of all ages, different racial and political backgrounds, an estimate of over two million souls made the ultimate pilgrimage to personally observe in a two mile-long sea of humanity as Barack Obama, a son of a white woman and a Kenyan father, took the oath of office as the 44th president of the United States, as people world-wide watched on television or heard on radio, observing the peaceful transition of power in a truly democratic government.

How many in America and throughout the world ever dreamed that this moment was the ultimate goal to fully accomplish an act of finality in a democracy where “they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character,” is a monumental accomplishment in the political history of the United States. This act, in itself, was not a major moment in his speech.

In an inaugural address, considered to be one of the foremost among presidential speeches, Obama initially spoke of a crisis and a nation at war, “our economy is badly weakened, a consequence of greed and irresponsibility on the part of some, but also our collective failure to make hard choices and prepare a nation for a new age.”

He continued to state about the indicators of crisis=health care too costly, failed schools, ways we use energy- “a nagging fear that America’s decline is inevitable.”

On this day, we gather because we have chosen hope over fear, unity of purpose over conflict and discord.”

Obama spoke of the rejection of the policies and values of his immediate predecessors and a return to the American traditions of virtues of hard work, fair play, tolerance and sacrifice for the common good. “Starting today, we must pick ourselves up, dust ourselves off, and begin again the work of remaking America.”

Thunderous applause occurred intermittently during his speech, and in the final moment of his presentation received a tremendous roar of approval. In the minds of millions this was an emotional historical experience – the newly sworn president transmitting a ray of hope for the future of our nation.

President Barack Obama

Vice President Joe Biden
RETURN OF THE NATIVES

SALT RIVER INDIAN RESERVATION, Ariz. - Nearly 50 years ago, a Pima native took a Greyhound bus from this sun-roasted redoubt of Indian land to the winter chill of Washington, D.C., to witness the first day of a young American president.

"When he came home, my father was so excited because John Kennedy stood up for him when he walked by in the parade," said Diane Enos.

The president stood up for an Indian! He couldn't stop talking about that.

Next week, Diane Enos will make the same trip, along with hundreds of other American Indians who hope that Barack Obama's inauguration will bring the wind of possibility to Indian Country.

In less than a week's time, the flood of dominant culture, where Indians die younger than most other Americans; suffer from higher rates of suicide, alcoholism, debilitating dietary problems;

The Pimas, who hold this 52,000-acre homeland amid the predatory sprawl of 4.2 million people here in the Phoenix metro area, have one of the world's highest rates of type diabetes - a consequence of the rough adjustment from their world to one handed down by Europeans.

Presidents come and go. They promise to uphold treaty rights and appoint somebody to oversee Indian affairs who understand that history did not end when Custer fell to his hubris. It's ho-hum, usually, with a mournful shrug on the reservations.

But on the most recent Election Day, on the Navajo Rez, which spills into three states and is the size of West Virginia, high school kids held up Obama signs at intersections in the town of Window Rock, and cheered themselves hoarse as returns came in. "I feel very elated," said Joe Shirley, Jr., president of the Navajo Nation. All of Navajo Country came out strong for Obama.

Shirley says nearly half of Navajo families heat their homes with wood they cut themselves, drink water hauled into their homes in barrels and light their rooms with kerosene lamps.

Talk about stimulus: a billion dollars, one-seven-hundredth of what taxpayers are giving the financial institutions that caused the Crash of 2008, could bring much of Navajo land into the modern age, Shirley said.

But beyond the desire for urgent, fundamental infrastructure help, Indians look to Obama as a powerful narrative. People, who were subjugated, with near-genocidal brutality, feel a kinship with people who were first brought here in chains, even though Obama is an immigrant's son.

"There's a bond there," said Shirley. "Birds of a feather flock together. We try to teach that there are no impossibilities to Navajo people. His election speaks to the young especially."

Cynicism is the poison of so many young people. In Indian Country, where despair is often woven into the landscape, it takes hold even earlier.

So when Diane Enos, who is president of the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community, arrives in the festive capital next week she will have a teenage tribal leader with her.

"Obama's life has been a journey to find identity," she said. "That's the Indian struggle. And it starts with children."

On Inauguration Day, the capital will host the likes of Ludacris and Chaka Khan, corporate titans and political giants, and balls too numerous to count.

Among the sea of Americans ushering in the president will be a small contingent of people who have clung to this country longer than any other. And for once - if only for a January moment - they will feel like they belong.
KIWANIS CLUB OF GREATER SAN BERNARDINO SPONSORS TRADITIONAL ANNUAL CHILDREN TOY GIVEAWAY

In a decades-old tradition of annual toy give-away during the Christmas holidays, the Kiwanis Club of Greater San Bernardino planned an extraordinary event this year of ensuring that added toys, jackets, coats, and food were provided due to current economic circumstances. The event at the Mount Vernon Elementary School in the West area of San Bernardino on Saturday, December 20th, was attended by over 500 children and their families with Santa and Mrs. Clause (Henry and Dorothy Calderilla) and over 100 volunteers ensuring that each child was given toys, clothing, and Christmas goodies. Donors to the event were Juan Polio, Toys for Tots, Cardenas Market, San Bernardino School District, School Principal Luis Chavez, Colton School District, Mary's Table, California School Employees Association, Kiwanis members (Juan Lopez, chair), CWA Local 9588, and Joe Lombardo and his friends and many local citizens.

BACA VOTES FOR GREATER ACCOUNTABILITY OF REMAINING TARP FUNDS

Washington, DC - Congressman Joe Baca (D-Rialto) joined a bipartisan majority in the House of Representatives to pass legislation that sets necessary requirements, accountability, and oversight provisions for how the Treasury Department should draw down the remaining $350 billion in the Troubled Asset Recovery Program (TARP). H.R. 384, the TARP Reform and Accountability Act of 2009, passed the House of Representatives with a 260 - 166 vote.

H.R. 384 also includes three separate amendments authored by Rep. Baca. The amendments - which help to keep more families in their homes, provide essential protections from foreclosures for renters, and enable credit unions to receive TARP assistance - were approved last week for inclusion in the final draft of the legislation by the House Financial Services Committee, an exclusive committee on which Rep. Baca serves.

Rep. Baca stated, "My amendments can help to prevent homelessness among our most vulnerable families, while also decreasing the overall number of foreclosures, and ensuring more families and small businesses have access to the credit they need for survival."

The first amendment authored by Rep. Baca, in conjunction with Rep. Keith Ellison (D-MN), focuses on tenant protections for renters living in foreclosed properties. It ensures that tenants can stay in the property for as long as the term of their lease (for up to 6 months), even if the property forecloses, while also mandating that renters must be given at least 90 days notice before they are asked to leave a foreclosed property. This prevents renters from facing sudden homelessness.

The second amendment authored by Rep. Baca, and co-sponsored by Rep. Jerry Lewis (R-San Bernardino) and Ken Calvert (R-Norco), allows the Treasury Department to take regional public-private partnerships into consideration when creating their loan purchase program.

The third amendment authored by Rep. Baca would enable credit unions to participate in the current TARP program and be included in government assistance in the calculation of net worth. This provision would ensure that credit unions receive the TARP assistance necessary to continue meeting their members' needs.

"With unemployment in my district as high as 10%, it is essential Congress acts to quickly shore up America's credit unions. Congress created TARP to restore our economy and provide foreclosure assistance to those in need, not to subsidize banks," Baca concluded.

The Board of Education of the San Bernardino City Unified School District, on Tuesday, January 13, approved a plan to reorganize the District's top administrators to strengthen the focus on student academic achievement.

Under the new streamlined administration, already in effect, there are five assistant superintendents instead of eight. Dr. Harold Vollkommer remains the assistant superintendent in charge of Human Resources-Certified. Dr. Paul Shirk will continue in his position as assistant superintendent of Data/Research. Dr. Dayton Gilleland, former assistant superintendent of Educational Services, is now the head of Student Services. He takes over for Narciso Cardona, who is retiring at the end of the school year. Yolanda Ortega, assistant superintendent of Employee Relations, will also take on oversight of Human Resources-Classified. John Peukert will continue overseeing Facilities while also heading Maintenance and Operations. The five assistant superintendents will report to Deputy Superintendent Dr. Judy White, who is in charge of Academic Accountability, and Mel Albiso, who has been assigned to the newly formed position of associate superintendent of Administrative Services.

Mohammad Islam assumes the title of Chief Business Financial Officer. He will be responsible for Worker's Compensation and Employee Benefits, as well as his previous duties as the assistant superintendent of Business/Finance.

Superintendent Dr. Arturo Delgado crafted the reorganization plan to better adhere to recommendations made four years ago when the District underwent an internal, voluntary curriculum management audit.

"This reorganization is part of an intentional, strategic plan that will allow our School District to move forward with the best interests of students in mind," Delgado said. "This new structure will allow our School District, and ultimately our students, to be more successful."

The new District hierarchy uses existing personnel to make the changes, which will save about $215,000 annually.

ROBERT GARDNER NAMED NEW CSUSB VP FOR ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — Robert W. Gardner, who has worked in higher education, served in many senior-level positions for a variety of federal agencies — most recently with NASA — will join California State University, San Bernardino as vice president for administration and finance on Feb. 9.

"I'm delighted that Bob Gardner will be joining us," said CSUSB President Albert Kammig. "He comes to the university with an exceptional array of prior experiences, responsibilities and successes. Given his extensive background and expertise in financial management, especially during these challenging budget times, he has exactly the right skill set for the vice presidential role."

"I am excited about joining the leadership team at Cal State San Bernardino, and I look forward to the opportunity to work with that team to serve the university's students, faculty and staff," Gardner said. "I have been impressed by everything I have learned about the university and will do all I can to contribute further to its accomplishments."

He replaces David DeMauro, who is retiring this month after serving at CSUSB since 1986, and as vice president for administration and finance since 1990.

"Bob follows David DeMauro, who has been a remarkable vice president for the past 18 years, leading the university on countless initiatives, many of which have won awards and helped the university to more than double its size in buildings and other facilities," Kammig said. "He simply has been an outstanding administrator."

Gardner will oversee the university’s most diverse administrative division, including the departments of accounting, facilities services, financial operations, human resources, parking services, capital planning, design and construction, and university police.

"He'll also head the Foundation for Cal State San Bernardino, which handles university grants and contracts, financial management (including the university’s endowment) and sub-contractors for the Coyote Bookstore and campus food services.

Previously, he was with the Transportation Security Administration at the Department of Homeland Security in Washington, D.C., where he served as assistant administrator for finance and administration and was named U.S. financial officer from 2002-2005.

Gardner was the assistant commissioner for budget at the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Washington, D.C., from 2000-2002, and was director of restructuring for the INS from 1998-2000.

He previously held several positions in public policy, management, finance and higher education at the Department of Veterans Affairs, deputy inspector general at the U.S. Small Business Administration; senior development officer in the Political Science Department at the University of Redlands; budget director for the Veterans Benefits Administration; assistant controller of the Drug Enforcement Administration, and budget manager at the U.S. Office of Management and Budget.

Gardner earned a bachelor’s degree in political science from the University of Redlands, a master’s degree in public administration from the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University in New York. He and his wife Karen have three grown sons, Adam, Kyle and Nathan.

CALIFORNIA HISPANIC CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO HOLD MIXER

California Hispanic Chamber of Commerce (CHCC) has planned a Regional Networking Mixer to be held at the Ontario Doubletree Inn on January 23, 2008, at 5:00 P.M.

CHCC State Chairman Ken Macias has invited the regional Hispanic chambers of commerce and businesses to join in expanding networking linkages among the business organizations. "We must encourage businesses to join us in forming a cooperative environment and organize to support each other in our business ventures," Macias stated.

The inland region includes the following chambers of commerce: Victor Valley, Ontario, Pomona, Corona, Riverside, Moreno Valley, San Gorgonio Pass and Lower Desert.

I would like to thank the City of San Bernardino for the privilege of working for eight years as a youth leader at Los Padrinos. In those eight years, I learned the great responsibility there is as a citizen and employee for this city. Los Padrinos had the privilege to work the triathlon at Cal State, San Bernardino, Route 66, Christmas parades, and community events with Operation Phoenix and help out at soapbox derby, give a hand to the elderly who couldn’t clean their own yards, and provide trash pickup, curb appeal and graffiti removal services. At $9 an hour for eight years, I worked my best because this is my city. I want you to know that I worked from my heart. I will never forget the young men and women whom I mentored and encouraged. Some died, some failed, but most succeeded. I got to make good friends in all walks of life, cultures and races. A good percentage of our citizens appreciated and backed up Los Padrinos. I respect my city leaders and honor their positions, but I still question the decision made by four of them.

To Mayor Pat Morris: Los Padrinos backed you up in anything you asked of us, to the best of our ability. We never questioned anything you asked of us to do, we just did it. Yet on Nov. 3 the vote was three for us and three against us. Your vote could have made the difference for this youth program. Your biography says that you worked tirelessly to deliver on your campaign promises to increase the number of youth programs offered in this city. Mayor, maybe you and I can sit down and you can explain why you voted no.

To Councilman Chas Kelly: You know what you were doing and now the people know what you have done. Los Padrinos will not give up hope. I believe that only time will tell the truth about the 17 years that this organization dedicated to this city. Giving young people hope and saving lives was not measured in making good hamburgers or getting your money’s worth.

Joseph Paul Lujan is a youth leader who worked with Los Padrinos, which performed graffiti abatement duties for the City of San Bernardino before its contract ended Dec. 31.

Los Padrinos did more than clean up yards, and provide trash pickup, curb appeal and graffiti removal services. They also provided free dental care to the community, will be held Sunday, November 21, 2010. The response to “Clinic with a Heart” has been overwhelming. Hundreds of community members have received free dental care and treatments ranging from simple fillings and cleanings to extractions and diagnoses of more complex dental problems.

In the late 1980s, Leif K. Bakland, DDS, who was at the time associate dean of clinic administration, encouraged dental student leaders to begin an early one-day free clinic for community members who could not afford dental care. He suggested the name Clinic With a Heart after a similar program, Doctors With a Heart, in which practitioners open their office for a day of free care.

SAN BERNARDINO - Some 70 students from Apple Valley and Yucca Valley high schools will work with the San Bernardino County Sheriff Department’s Scientific Investigations Unit to do a field study on blood pattern interpretation on Jan. 23.

The purpose of the event is to demonstrate real-world applications for trigonometry. The demonstration is made in partnership between the County Sheriff’s office and County Superintendent of Schools Alliance for Education program.

The Alliance for Education partners with businesses, labor, education, government, faith-based and community leaders, who develop and demonstrate authentic applications of math in the workplace to students in the classroom or at business or industry sites.

The Scientific Investigations Unit will lead the demonstration of the field study on Jan. 23 at the County Sheriff headquarters at 655 E. Third St. The media is invited to attend.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY RECEIVES $1.82 MILLION IN FUNDING FOR HOMELESS/HUNGER PROGRAMS

Riverside County will receive $1.82 million in federal funds for the homeless, almost double of last year’s allotment. The additional funds come as social service agencies throughout the county experience a higher demand for their services amid the economic downturn, said Ronald Stewart, manager for the county’s Department of Public Social Services homeless programs.

"Stories of people losing their jobs and homes are becoming alarmingly common," Stewart said. "The funds will allow us to continue helping those in need, including residents who find themselves on the brink of becoming homeless for the first time in their lives."

The increased funding highlights a federal awareness of these new intermittent homeless population segments, Stewart said. Social service providers are increasingly seeing people who can’t afford shelter but are not chronically homeless, and need help navigating the resources available to them.

DPSS will administer the federal Emergency Food and Shelter Program funds, which will become available late spring. A local board will determine which agencies will receive funding through a competitive process based on unemployment and poverty levels of the population served.

Congress made available $200 million in funding to support qualifying jurisdictions’ social service agencies in more than 2,500 cities and counties nationwide.

The newly sworn president and his wife, Michelle, as tradition dictates, escorted former President Bush and Mrs. Bush to a waiting helicopter that would fly the couple to the airport and their final destination in Texas.

The presidential couple were guests of honor at a traditional luncheon at the Statuary Hall, the original chamber of the House of Representatives, sponsored by members of Congress.

The couple walked during the inaugural parade for a short distance. They later joined family and friends for celebrations.

NEW TOOLS PROMOTE HEALTHY LIVING FOR HISPANICS

(NAPS) – There's good news for those in the Hispanic/Latino community who have diabetes, as well as their families and the organizations that serve them.

A toolkit has been created that provides organizations with comprehensive and culturally relevant information and educational materials on diabetes and healthy living.

Each toolkit contains bilingual brochures, recipe samplers, posters and healthy lifestyle tip sheets. Community-based and faith-based organizations conducting outreach to Hispanic/Latino communities can order a free copy of the Adult Prevention Toolkit by calling (800) DIABETES.

According to Lurelean B. Gaines, M.S.N., chair of the American Diabetes Association's National Latino Subcommittee, The American Diabetes Association provides a wealth of relevant information specifically for Hispanic/Latino populations, so health issues can move from personal or individual challenges to broader, community-based solutions.

The Abbott Fund, the philanthropic fund of global health solutions, supported the project. "Chronic disease, including diabetes, is one of the global health challenges of our time, and we are very excited to be able to work with the American Diabetes Association on such an important effort," said Catherine V. Babington, president of the Abbott Fund.

Diabetes is increasing at an alarming rate in the United States, affecting nearly 24 million children and adults across the country. This serious illness disproportionately affects Hispanic/Latino populations, which are nearly twice as likely to develop diabetes over the course of their lifetime as non-Hispanic whites. If present trends continue, one in three Americans, and nearly one in two minorities, born in 2000 will develop diabetes in their lifetime.

In addition to creating and providing the toolkit, the American Diabetes association will also be hosting Feria de Salud Por Tu Familia, an outdoor Latino health festival in cities across the United States.

The events are designed to capture the elements of a festive street fair while communicating the importance of making healthy lifestyle choices for the entire Hispanic/Latino family. Elements of this event include music, dancing, cooking demonstrations, nutritional information and speakers on topics related to diabetes.

The association is targeting community and faith-based organizations with these special resources because these organizations play a critical role in providing important health information and services in Hispanic/Latino communities.
