The Re-Discovery of America's Greatness

The foregoing Fourth of July is anticipated to be a revitalization of a new spirit of patriotism and an outward acknowledgment of confidence in our Armed Forces throughout the country as a result of the victorious performance in the recent Desert Storm conflict.

The lightning strikes by the air forces and mechanized units by the allies and the advanced technology utilized to expedite the conflict instilled a sense of national pride with ordinary citizens and a general feeling of accomplishment.

The national and military leadership exhibited throughout the many months prior to, and including the conflict, regenerated a prestigious position for the United States among every nation.

The 100 hour war was considered the quickest victory in our nation's history.

The cessation of hostilities was the beginning of celebrations and increased in the jubilation of victory as the first troops arrived in the United States. Air bases were filled with people welcoming the troops home, and as buses returned soldiers to their home bases, they were greeted as heroes and showered with flowers, food and liquid refreshments.

Parades and civic functions in numerous cities strived to recognize the returning troops including Washington, D.C., where 8,000 troops marched down Constitution Avenue in a parade led by General Norman Schwarzkopf and witnessed by an estimated 200,000 spectators, including President and Mrs. George Bush.

Not to be outdone, the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce had its own parade which included television and movie stars intermingled with troops and military units.

The mother of all parades occurred in New York City where approximately two million people, including every civic and governmental official within the radius of the region, watched a huge ticker-tape parade.

The rejoicing of a victorious conflict and welcoming the troops home was reconciled with the recognition of the role that the Vietnam veterans had in that disastrous conflict. The returning soldiers in that conflict were not cordially welcomed with open arms, as many veterans have recently stated privately and publicly.

As the Fourth of July approaches, the Inland Empire is preparing to celebrate the traditional holiday. The aura of victory is still in the air and veterans' groups are planning patriotic activities, both to celebrate the return of Desert Storm troops and the belated recognition of the Vietnam veterans. COUNTY EMPLOYEE "AWARDS FOR EXCELLENCE"

Four Hispanics honored by County Board of Supervisors

(SAN BERNARDINO) - Four Hispanics were among 48 San Bernardino County employees recognized recently by the Board of Supervisors for excellence in service.

Receiving "Awards for Excellence" were: Larry Torres of Apple Valley, a supervising worker's compensation auditor for Human Resources/Risk Management; Dolores Mireles of San Bernardino, a public information clerk in Purchasing; Tom Garcia, 40, a deputy at the Sheriff's Victorville substation; and Wendy Ramirez-Lewis of Moreno Valley, a fiscal clerk for the Treasurer/Tax Collector.

In April 1990, Deputy Garcia was shot nine times with a 9mm handgun by a forgery suspect at the Bank of America branch on 7th Street in Victorville. Although bleeding profusely and gravely disabled, Deputy Garcia returned fire with other deputies on the scene, killing the suspect. He is still recuperating from his injuries and may never return to active duty status.

"Deputy Garcia demonstrated exemplary courage during this incident," Sheriff Dick Williams said. "He is strongly recommended for this award, not only because he is deserving, but because it would serve as a message to all peace officers that their sacrifices are appreciated."

Deputy Garcia, a 17-year veteran, is a member of the International Footprinters Association, the Elks, and the Latino Peace Officers' Association, which recently honored him as a Law Enforcement Officer of the Year.

He also was chairman of Hands Across the Border, which procured and donated uniforms to the Ensenada, Mexico, police department.

Torres, 35, has four years with the county and is based at the Risk Management Division of Human Resources in Colton. He was promoted to supervisor of the Risk Management Division Workers' Compensation Section at a time when the annual staff turnover was more than 50 percent.

Torres filled the staff vacancies and established an effective training program.

He also introduced a computer system which saved the department nearly $150,000 in medical costs in 1990. "Larry works well as a team member and brings enthusiasm, professionalism, and common sense into every project," said Assistant Risk Manager Ronald B. Owens. "He projects a positive attitude and is an excellent role model for staff."

Ms Mireles has been employed with the county for 16 years.

"Because of her friendliness and her personal knowledge of the county system and employees, she is able to help expedite requests made of the Purchasing Department," said Acting Director Edward F. Ciabattini.

Ms Ramirez-Lewis, 31, had worked for the county for seven years. She is

Ms. Pam McDaniel's sixth grade class at Warm Springs Elementary School is getting a head start in the "real world of business." Once a week, Mr. Chris Montanez, a volunteer, teaches these young students for an hour on Business Basics, an overview of business organization, management, production and marketing. The primary goals, said Mr. Montanez, is for young people to establish interest in the business world at an early age, develop the motivational drive to continue their education and simultaneously, create a deterrent for student dropout.

The course is a supplement consumer economic curriculum which extends into the middle and senior high levels of business education. In the middle school level, a weekly lesson titled, Project Business, is taught, which introduces more complicated concepts, including supply and demand, corporate finance and basic global competition.

At the high school level, advanced designed lessons include Applied Economics, an in-depth and comprehensive business course. Students develop and operate their own companies/businesses, including hands-on experience electing officers, selling stock and marketing products with the help of visiting consultants.

The total curriculum structure is organized under the Junior Achievement Program, a national non-profit foundation founded in 1919 by Mr. Horace A. Moses, president of Strathmore Paper Company. Since its inception, the foundation has been financed by over 100,000 businesses, foundations and individuals in the United States and approximately 70,000 businesspersons have volunteered their time to teach the goals of the organization.

It has been estimated that the Program has contributed to the economic and business education in over 1,000 communities throughout the United States and has been taught to over 280,000 students.

In order to currently evaluate the effectiveness of the program, a pilot test of The Economics of Staying in School curriculum was implemented in the Santa Ana Unified School District by Dr. Kathleen M. Wulf of the University of Southern California School of Education. The District was selected for the text based on its representation as an urban population and its largely Hispanic minority, which, according to recent trends, is one of two minority groups with the highest student dropout rates, the other being the African-American.

Eighth grade social studies level was targeted in selected schools throughout the district. In-service training was provided to business consultants on curriculum and lesson plans.

The conclusions of the pilot test were that consultants rated a strong approval with an overall 4.0 on a scale of 5.0 points and prioritized components as follows: effective lessons plans, program's goal of keeping students in school and students facing the issues.

Teachers in whose classrooms the Program was conducted gave an overall four-point rating in a five-point scale, and evaluated the components in priority, as follows: quality of lessons, student responses, cooperative learning groups and curriculum. Teachers' commentary were "students comprehending the value of staying in school and the practical application of the program."

Mr. Ladd Biggs, fifth and sixth grade teacher at Lincoln School, felt a continual frustration with his young students which was due to difficulty to fully communicate core subjects such as science, geography, social studies, math and reading. Secondly, there were school discipline and other problems that students were encountering in his class. Realizing that a part of the problem was an overall lack of first hand experiences and basic understanding on his student part, he decided that one of the possible solutions was to augment the classroom environment and expose the young students to other practical learning experiences.

Being involved with scouting for 30 years and knowing first hand of the positive impact that scouting has on young people, Mr. Biggs organized Troop 111 with ten boys and received the charter on March 1, 1990. Within a short period of time, the program was accepted with enthusiasm by the boys and their parents and in a short period of time, the membership jumped to 25.

The troop went to their first scouting experience to Firestone Scout Reservation. The students made comments like: why is everything so green?, where does all the water in the world come from?, what kind of tree is that?. Different questions, both in English and Spanish. They began to exchange information about things they had seen and when they were back in the classroom, began to share their new experiences with classmates and wrote about their experiences. “As scouts, they are having fun, learning the value of an education, realizing the need to finish high school and going beyond. You have never seen boys so happy as to be called ‘tenderfoot’. In all my years of scouting, I have never had a group of scouts with more desire to live the ideals of scouting than these boys,” said Mr. Biggs, “they’re not perfect, they’re kids, but they are willing to try and are beginning to understand the meaning of honor and they are learning.”

The troop activities reached students from other schools and as a result, Mr. Biggs has expanded his scout troop to include scout membership from other areas. “These young men come from families that are unable to give them an opportunity to have experiences beyond their little world. This has opened a new world for them.”

The troop attempts to schedule monthly activities to different locations throughout the area, which includes Angeles and San Bernardino National Forests. The experiences of hiking and camping, learning about the environment has made an impact, and according to Mr. Biggs, students attitudes have changed significantly.

The Lincoln School administration and staff have been supportive of the program and have financially and in-kind contributed to the various activities. Mr. Harold Vollkommer, principal and Mr. Paul Shirk, assistant principal are involved on the scout committee. They have stated that discipline problems at school among the boys involved in scouting has been reduced.

"The troop has been very active in many ways. The most important part of scouting is to take trips to the various locations, including the mountains and camping overnight. However, we have been handicapped by lack of finances, adult supervision and necessary equipment that is required by scout regulations. As a result, planned trips have been cancelled. Although it’s a strain on my family and personal finances, and many of the parent help as much as possible with transportation and equipment, there is a dire need for help from the community."

Lincoln School has a 1000 student enrollment, which is the largest in the school district. “The teachers here at the school want to make a difference in the lives of their students” said Mr. Biggs. He continued, “I, too, have a dream. A dream where I see a multicultural scout troop working together in friendly competition, each boy doing this personal best and being cheered on by his comrades, being proud of his group. I have seen the dawn. I know it can be a reality.”

Troop 111 is requesting the community for help by: persons wishing to participate in their scouting activities, financial contributions and scouting equipment such as stoves, dishes, sleeping bags, etc.

Contribution can be sent to Troop 111, Abraham Lincoln School, 255 West 13th Street, San Bernardino, CA 92405. For further information, call Mr. Biggs at (714) 889-0615.

Memorial for all Riverside Residents Killed in Action

"Among the Valiant"

Organizers of a war memorial that will feature a life-size statue of Ysmael Villegas, a Medal of Honor recipient, hope to dedicate the monument on Veterans Day.

The memorial, to be called "Among the Valiant," is intended to honor all Riverside County residents killed in the line of duty during any war, said Mike Figueroa, deputy chief of the Riverside Police Department and a member of the memorial committee.

"Staff Sgt. Ysmael Villegas is a symbol of the ultimate that someone can give," said Figueroa, a Vietnam veteran. "This (memorial) is a community effort to always hold in our memory those residents who have given their lives to preserve our freedom."

The memorial was designed and will be sculpted by Gary Coulter, the New Mexico artist who created the statue in front of the city police headquarters building. The Riverside Cultural Heritage Board has given tentative approval to both the memorial and its location, which will be in front of City Hall on a grassy area east of the fountain.

Villegas, who lived in Casa Blanca, was killed March 20, 1945, while leading an attack on a machine gun emplacement in the Philippines. The staff sergeant, who died the day before his 21st birthday, is credited with saving the lives of 400 fellow infantrymen.

Members of the committee planning the war memorial include Villegas' brother Darío; John Cisneros, a Casa Blanca resident who initiated the drive for the memorial; Figueroa; Art Pick, executive vice president of the Greater Riverside Chambers of Commerce; Mario Prez, president of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce; Bill Denmore of the county Office of Veterans Affairs;

Colton High Sophomore to World Leadership Conference

Colton High School sophomore Nicole Quintana was named one of 225 delegates to a worldwide leadership conference, she learned last week.

The 15-year-old daughter of Frances Quintana of Colton, Quintana will travel to Chicago July 26 to August 3 to attend the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation World Leadership Congress.

Addressing "The Role of the U.S. in the World Community," which is this year's conference theme, speakers will discuss the environment, medical technology, business ethics, the arts, the justice system, sports and the media.

Formed in 1958, the foundation works to seek out and recognize leadership potential in promising high school sophomores. At Colton High School, Quintana is active in Future Farmers of America and will serve as next year's president. After graduation, she plans to attend UC Davis to study veterinary medicine.

David Just, who also works with county veterans; and Karen McSpadden, who is coordinating fund-raising and promotions for the project.

Figueroa said the committee has already raised more than $5,000 of the $35,000 needed for the statue. A formal fund-raising drive is scheduled to begin in September.

The committee plans to present an 18-inch bronzed model of the statue, signed and numbered by the sculptor, to the Casa Blanca community for possible placement in the community center that bears Villegas' name, Figueroa said.

For more information or to obtain a copy of the fund-raising flyer, call the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce at 682-7288.

In order to generate funds for the building fund, the Board of Trustees initiated Friday evening dinners with long-time member Alex Torres and his family preparing a variety of menus for each occasion. In addition, Santos Rodriguez and his Suave Band have been contracted to provide dancing music on the first and third Fridays of every month.

The American Legion Post 650 was chartered in 1949 with 12 veterans of Hispanic descent. It was named after Philip Marmolejo, the first Hispanic from Redlands to die in World War II. The Post membership is over three hundred and it (the Post) has achieved numerous awards for outstanding veterans and civic activities and is considered one of the most active posts in the 25th District.

"This Post belongs to not only the veterans but to all the citizens of Redlands. We want to continue the good work that has been done in the past. We urge the citizens of Redlands and surrounding areas to patronize our activities, especially on Fridays, in order to raise the necessary funds and achieve our building goals as soon as possible," stated Mr. Martinez.

The address of the American Legion Post is 1532 North Church Street, Redlands, (one block north of Lugonia Avenue). For further information or inquiries for renting the building call (714) 792-6783.
