U.S./China Standoff Continues

Standoff: U.S. and China relations are on thin ice as both side argue over Chinese possession of the downed spy plane.

By Stacy Benderman
Staff Writer

Under clear and sunny skies, the C-9A Skytrain aircraft carrying the 24 crew members of the grounded U.S. spy plane touched down at Whidbey Island last Saturday. The men and women were welcomed home by their families in a ceremony in Hawaii, a seemingly happy ending to a long ordeal.

However, questions remain about the implications of the incident and what impact it will have on future U.S.-China relations.

Upon arrival of the spy plane crew, the Pentagon has been able to learn more about the collision. Video taken by the U.S. aircraft shows the Chinese fighter plane flying dangerously close to the spy plane, consequently colliding into it. U.S. officials are unwilling to accept any blame and China still blames the U.S. for the loss of their pilot in that collision.

Naval captives are welcomed back to the U.S., in Hawaii

Chinese propaganda depicts the U.S. as irresponsible and entirely at fault, while presenting the fallen pilot as a hero. One chat room message faults Chinese officials for releasing the "24 pigs", calling their government "incompetent."

The U.S. Government had proposed the idea of possible trade sanctions against China that could pose a serious impact on the U.S. economy. Currently, over $125 billion is traded between the U.S. and China annually. At this time, business leaders say the odds of the U.S. imposing trade sanctions are extremely low.

China still holds the plane, an EP-3 Aries II. U.S. officials say there is little hope for progress until China returns the U.S. Navy spy plane back into U.S. custody.

ASI Candidates Introduced

Elections: ASI candidates prepare for the campaign trail, looking toward the future of the school, with high hopes and political promises

By Claire Benson

Take Back the Night Becomes Up-Close and Personal

Take it Back: Crowd of 100 supporters show they are impervious to fear. Event states Women will not be victimized anymore.

By Goldie Avalos
Staff Writer

Take Back the Night, an annual event at California State University, San Bernardino, was held in the Student Union courtyard last Thursday as an acknowledgement to those who have survived sexual assault and violence.

The event was supported by the Women's Resource Center in an effort to suppress violence against women, and appealed to a crowd of 100 men and women who came to learn from personal sexual assault experiences.

Serenity and peace luminescent

Some students who attended were curious as they passed through, while others were encouraged by their sociology and psychology professors to attend.

The six hour event began with resource booths that provided literature on sexual assault and violence for the attendees to read while the Taiko drummers entertained..

Many booths offered support services to survivors and friends of survivors who had been sexually assaulted and abused.

Among the various booths, The R.A.D. program, Rape Aggression Defense Systems, provided information to sign up for self defense classes offered on campus. The program teaches women the skills to defend themselves against

VIOLENT ACTS HAVE BEEN ATTRIBUTED TO MARIJUANA

Motorcycle Gang Leader Convicted

Harry "Taco" Bowman, the alleged kingpin of the Outlaws motorcycle gang, was convicted Tuesday of ordering the slayings of rival gang members, firebombings and other crimes.

Bowman, 51, showed no emotion as the verdicts were read, capping a monthlong racketeering trial. The onetime fugitive included on the FBI's "Ten Most Wanted" list could face life in prison when he is sentenced July 27 by U.S. District Judge James S. Moody.

He was convicted of eight of nine counts and acquitted of an arson charge. Jurors began deliberations Monday afternoon and reached their verdicts before lunch Tuesday.

New Year Fest Deadly for 375

The death toll from accidents and fights during the Thai New Year festival has risen to 375, the government said Sunday.

The National Accident Monitoring Cell said 265 people have been killed and 15,705 people injured in road accidents since Thursday, a day before the start of the three-day festival, the accident agency said.

The death toll this year is the highest recorded during Songkran, when Thais travel to their hometowns or visit relatives and holiday resorts.

Suspected Slave Ship a Mystery

The return of a ferry at the center of a frantic hunt for scores of suspected child slaves raised more questions than answers Tuesday, with puzzled officials unable to say whether the child traffickers were still at large or if there ever was a slave ship.

Aid workers said they took a number of unaccompanied minors from the ferry to two children's homes in the commercial capital, Cotonou, where they could eat and rest.

The U.N. Children's Fund ordered its offices along Africa's western coast to stay alert.

Mission to Find Remains Canceled

A joint U.S.-Vietnamese search for the remains of Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War has been canceled as a result of an April 7 helicopter crash that killed seven Americans and nine Vietnamese.

It is only the second time such a search mission was canceled since they began in 1985. The other was in November 1999, when a mission was canceled because of severe flooding in central Vietnam.

The U.S. military organization that conducts the searches issued a statement Monday night from its headquarters in Hawaii, saying canceling the May 3-June 1 search will allow both the U.S. and Vietnamese to assess the helicopter accidents cause.

President Bush and the Republican Budget Proposal

Budget: Republicans trim down on the environment, beef up on the National defense.

By Goldie Avalos
Staff Writer

President George W. Bush issued his proposed budget for 2002 to Congress last Monday, April 9. The proposed budget plan has conjured up critical opinions within American politics because it proposes so many drastic changes. The Bush budget plan proposes a $1.96 trillion spending plan, which represents a 5.6 percent increase. The plan focuses mainly around education and defense increases while decreasing the budgets of several transportation, agriculture and environmental protection programs.

The proposed changes in government spending changes the entire focus of our current economic structure. At a recent Cabinet meeting Bush told reporters "This budget funds our needs without the fat", "It puts the taxpayers first, and that is exactly where they belong." Not everyone in Washington agrees with the constraints of Bush's plan. Critics believe that it cuts spending too much and that much needed federal programs will suffer as a result. The notion that Bush's plan may be excessively strict may not be so far-fetched. Shortly after the President's proposal the Senate had added billions of dollars in new spending. Bush's plan attempts to put taxpayers back in control of government.

Under Bush's plan, Education will receive the biggest boost with an 11.5% increase. The proposed $44.6 billion dollar plan intends to provide funding for literacy programs and elementary and secondary school advancements. Pell Grants will also go protected under the plan, as they will increase to aid in Advanced Education Programs. Bush's interest in Defense has always been evident as it remains to be as reflected through his budget proposal. The Pentagon will receive the greatest dollar increase with a proposed $13.6 billion increase with federal service workers receiving $1.4 billion of those defense dollars in total. Bush's plan also places a great deal of emphasis on medical research and the prevention of the transportation of exotic diseases into the United States. The decreases are seen in areas such as Transportation, Agriculture, and Environmental Protection. Even though these areas of government are the targets of major budget cuts, not all of them are upset about it. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is a major target for budget cuts yet, none of their core programs will be touched and none of their 17,000 employees will be losing their jobs. For the most part, Bush is not cutting core programs for any federal agency. What he's doing is eliminating those programs that were only supposed to be in effect for a few years. Washington is known for implementing programs for a supposed short amount of time and then unnecessarily holding on to them, as a result, our budget never stabilizes. Other programs that will be affected by Bush's plan is the COPS (Community Oriented Police Services) program implemented by Clinton. The programs purpose was to put another 100,000 police officers on the streets. Instead of hiring new officers, existing officers would be reeducated and "desk" officers would be put back on the street. Bush also has plans for the budget that would a lot funds for mentoring programs to be formed that aid children whose parents are in prison. He also plans to increase funding for child abuse prevention programs and a program that buys child safety locks for handguns.

Bush's plan makes an attempt to take an active role in America's education. Many of the education and social programs are centered on the needs of American children. The plan is trying to move American economy away from protecting and feeding dollars into sources that are not paying back into the system. Taxpayers are the focal point as demonstrated through the intense federal tax cuts and the support of those issues that taxpayers are most intensely affected by such as education, disease, and healthcare.

Though the plan was only introduced a week ago, the Bush Administration may have to deal with major congressional defeats. Senate sees a need to increase

Bush's plan to make room for a $200 billion increase to aid in debt reduction and believes that Bush is cutting federal spending too much too drastically. Bush's plan attempts to restrain "recent explosive growth in discretionary spending" by eliminating "unjustified programs, excessive programs, duplicative programs and

Spending (fiscal year 2001 authorized)
"The President's budget can be increased or decreased by Congress every year. "Sequestration" is a program that must provide benefits to all persons who qualify for them. Expenditures exceeding the amount in the year as they become income eligible.

CSU HONORS 21 STUDENTS FOR WORK IN COMMUNITY SERVICE LEARNING

By Goldie Avalos
Staff Writer

California State University has honored 21 students throughout the state with the STARS (Students That Are Recognized for Service) award to acknowledge their outstanding efforts in their service learning projects and their ongoing commitment to serve the community.

Students from 20 different campuses were selected for their innovative efforts that improved the lives of individuals, or the community at large in at least one of the following areas: social justice, social, economic, health, public safety, or environmental issues during the last year. The CSU Office of the Chancellor and the systemwide Office of Service Learning created the STARS award last year.

"The STARS award recipients are student leaders at the California State University and exemplify our students' dedication to community service," said CSU Chancellor Charles B. Reed. "They have raised awareness on issues facing the elderly and disabled, promoted sustainable agriculture, tutored children, and provided over 10,000 hours of community service within the past year."

More than 135,000 CSU students systemwide perform a total of 33.6 million hours of community service annually. That would be a minimum wage value of approximately $193.2 million.

Community service-learning promotes student learning through active participation in community service experiences that are directly related to course content. In September 1997, the CSU developed a Community Service-Learning Strategic Plan. Now, all 23 campuses facilitate service learning, and the CSU systemwide service-learning department, which was created three years ago, supports their programs.

The strategic plan provides direction for each campus to maximize the potential of service learning. The two key objectives of the five-year plan (1997-2002) are to engage students at each CSU campus in at least one service-learning experience prior to graduation, and to offer an ongoing variety of service-learning experiences so that all students will have those opportunities. All CSU campuses now have identified a service-learning coordinator; two-thirds have established a service-learning office and most campuses have built service learning implicitly into their mission statements.

Last year, Governor Gray Davis included $2.2 million in the CSU 2000/01 budget to support the expansion of service learning at CSU campuses.

The 2001 STARS Honorees Are:

CSU Bakersfield

Flor Esthela Rodriguez

Rodriguez was recognized for her efforts to collaborate with the CSU Bakersfield Community Service Office and the Child Development Department of Kern County to create service-learning projects in the community. In addition, she tutors elementary school students and volunteers with a family literacy center that supports literacy activities for children and their families.

CSU Chico
Talía Scherquist

Scherquist volunteers with CAVE (Community Action Volunteers in Education) and is the current student director for 10 youth programs. Her responsibilities include managing more than 650 student volunteers, coordinating training workshops, recruiting new volunteers, and supervising 32 staff members who run ten separate programs for children. In addition, she serves on CAVE's Steering Committee and volunteers at the Sonoma Developmental Center to help developmentally disabled residents.

CSU Dominguez Hills
Lidia Mongerie Brown

Brown is a tutor and mentor for children and adults who are struggling with their education by assisting them in learning how to speak and write English. She was also selected by a local high school to work with parents of newly immigrated families to improve their educational skills.

CSU Fresno

David Aston

Aston has served as an AmeriCorps Promise Fellow for the past year. He has served the community by leading workshops on developing leadership skills for both mentors and youth, creating a tool to track and evaluate the health of youth in the community, and facilitating a faith-based collaborative that works with at-risk youth.

Summer Tuition Increase for International Students

Conflict: 635 graduate and undergraduate students face more than $1,000.00 increase in summer tuition

By Rika Yoshimoto
Staff Writer

Tuition prices on the rise

The Office of Extended Learning announced that the summer quarter is going to be a regular quarter starting this year and that summer tuition is going to be the same as the Fall, Winter, and Spring Quarters. Despite the benefits of decreased tuition for the domestic/California resident students, more than 600 international students now have to pay an additional $1,200.00, at least, for tuition in Summer quarter.

According to Lydia Ortega, Director of Record Registration & Evaluations, the purpose of this change is to encourage student enrollment for summer quarter by providing the opportunity to use state funds and facility, as well as in the Fall, Winter, and Spring Quarter. She expects the enrollment to grow for the Summer quarter within two or three years.

An average student pays $615.50 per quarter. International/Non resident students pay an additional 164.00 dollars per a unit. Thus international Students have to pay around $3,300.00 for 16 units per quarter. By comparison, domestic/California resident students pay less than $2,000.00 per year for the same amount of units. The difference is due to the fact that CSU is funded by the state: International Students are not eligible for any benefits from the state because their families have not paid for state tax. However, the summer quarter was sort of a "Gateway" for International Students in terms of cheaper tuition (110 per units, instead of $615.00 plus $164 per unit).

Most of the international Students' family members sponsor the student's academic expenses and students prefer to take summer classes rather than go back to their home country in order to save money and time. "It sucks...it is way too expensive for me to go home and now it is hard for me to take classes for summer as well,"

Sandra Kamusikiri Named Permanent Associate Vice-President

By Public Affairs
Special to the Chronicle

Sandra Kamusikiri, a Riverside resident and English professor at Cal State San Bernardino, has been made permanent associate vice president for assessment and planning as well as dean of graduate studies. She's served in these posts as an interim administrator since the fall of 1999.

"When we appointed Dr. Kamusikiri as interim associate vice-president and dean, we were confident she'd do an excellent job. During the last year-and-a-half in that position, 'she more than met our expectations,'" says Louis Fernandez, Cal State provost and vice-president for academic affairs. "Under her leadership our Student Outcomes Assessment project continues to be a model in the CSU system, and the Graduate Studies Office has expanded the services it provides our students." Kamusikiri came to Cal State in 1983.

Good measurements of students' progress in college are a major university initiative, says Fernandez, adding that Kamusikiri has one of the most solid understandings of the assessment field on campus.

The exchange is a great idea for any student looking for something new and interesting, but not completely permanent. This year on the exchange there are over 50 students at Cal State alone and already for next school year they are expecting over 70 at this University. Leaving the school where you know everyone, is difficult but you are never completely alone. With the exchange comes the others that are in the same boat as you. They are the first people you meet so you already have a group of friends. The deadlines are coming up! Find your way to UH-183 to find out more about the school of your choice. For any questions and finalizations e-mail Theron Pace the NSE Coordinator at tpace@csusb.edu or just stop in his office. It's not bad being a traveling student, the weathers always changing out here!

Once Bitten, Twice Shy

By Misty Lynn Reed
Staff Writer

When I was 20-years-old I had four teeth pulled all in one visit. Seven shots of Novocaine to the roof of my mouth could not compare to the pain of being nearly $18,000 in debt. I had two nurses hold me down while the dentist drilled away. Every now and then one of the nurses wiped my tears with a napkin. I have nobody to wipe my tears away now.

Every time a statement showed up in my mailbox I felt like I did that day at the dentist. How I wish I had someone hold me down when I was filling out those credit card applications. I would gladly sell all my teeth for $18,000 to pay it all back. I guess I should have kept those "wisdom" teeth; they may have kept me from falling into the credit card trap.

A black cat must have crossed my path, maybe I walked under a ladder, perhaps I opened an umbrella indoors or I broke a mirror, which is said to be seven years bad luck.

I didn't fall for a free t-shirt or calling card, all my credit card mishaps were offered with no freebies on my own freewill. My first card was a secured card with a $100 limit. Soon after I was offered a second card from the same company with a $250 limit. Not too long after that both cards climbed to $500 limits. I eventually found myself with a third card at $1,000 maximum, and my fourth at $5,000.

Every store I went to was offering credit. I was immediately ushered to the signup booth once I walked through the front entrance. I went in to buy shampoo and left with a Target credit card. I would go in to buy a lamp and end up walking out with a Pier 1 Imports card. A simple trip to the store turned into a complicated attack on my willpower.

I had no self-control. I was a starving student and a single mom working less than 20 hours a week for $10 an hour. I basically lived off my credit cards. I bought groceries, filled my gas tank and paid bills. Sometimes I even used one credit card to pay for another credit card bill. And during those "reward myself" times, usually after finals, I would go on a small yet significant shopping spree.

Despite my spending habits, I felt that I was being responsible with my credit cards. I paid the minimum every month on time, and sometimes even paid over the amount, yet my balance never seemed to get any lower. My interest rates were so high that I was barely paying the principle. At this rate I was headed toward bankruptcy, yet another seven years of bad luck.

Seven years and 11 credit cards later, I have managed to repair my almost damaged credit. I was in way over my head and needed help. With interest rates ranging from 19 to 29 percent, averaging anywhere from $10 to $180 per month, I was ready to pull all my teeth out.

The credit card vampires had lured me in, and my debt became immortal. I was fighting a never-ending battle of endless bills by bloodsucking credit card companies that preyed on young college students. I was forced to consolidate six credit cards and cancel the remaining five. Before I jumped on the save my neck bandwagon, I researched the debt consolidation companies, procedures and weighed the pros and cons. I found my solution with Consumer Credit Counseling Service.

CCCS is non-profit credit counseling agency that helps solve debt problems with free counseling and a debt repayment plan. They were able to negotiate with my creditors to lower interest rates and late fees, arrange one simple bill payment each month instead of dozens and create a repayment plan that I could afford.

I had been paying an average of 22 percent on purchases and as high as 48 percent on cash advances. Consumer Credit Counseling Service was able to lower my interest rates to 9 percent. I recommend Consumer Credit Counseling Service to anyone who wants to regain control of their finances, repay their debts and get back on track. CCCS also provides a Debt Management Plan with a realistic alternative to bankruptcy that is customized to fit consumers' financial needs. In addition, they offer a monthly newsletter with tips on budgeting, saving and smart money management. They also have online workshops on how to manage, budget and save money.

Orange Blossom Festival Returns To Riverside

By Ana Ivonne Cespedes
Staff Writer

The Stater Brothers Orange Blossom Festival is taking place in downtown Riverside this weekend. It is an affordable family event and there is no charge to attend. There will be lots of food, activities, entertainment, crafts, buzz and much more.

Stater Brothers, as the main sponsor, will have a vending area along with 20 of its vendors, who will participate in handing out free packaged samples to give away to families. This is the second year that Stater Brothers is sponsoring this festival; yet the Orange Blossom Festival is celebrating its seventh anniversary.

The festival will start on Saturday April 21 with a parade at 10 in the morning. Following the parade there will be different types of entertainment.

At noon there is going to be a stage schedule starting with singer Dean Mills and continues with a Shadow-box Puppets show at 12:55, which is sure to be a good show for kids. There is also entertainment for single people and students that just want to have fun and enjoy a day away from the books, without necessarily spending money.

On Sunday the festival continues with more concerts, shows and food. More importantly it will be a perfect day to relax and enjoy the day with loved ones. Last year there were from two to three hundred thousand people who attended the event.

This festival is more of an advertisement of what Riverside has to offer to the community. According to Susan Atkinson, Stater Brothers vice-president of public relations, the Orange Blossom Festival is to promote and advertise their goods. They do the promotional efforts to bring more people to the festival. The five stages of live entertainment enables different bands and groups to expose their music to the public. The same could be said for the large amount of arts and crafts that will be on display throughout the week-end.

Two Shows Open At Fullerton Museum

Public Affairs Office
Special to the Chronicle

Two exhibits are currently underway at Cal State, San Bernardino's Robert V. Fullerton Art Museum. One features works by 13 artists, called "Out of Context." The second is a solo show in the Entrance Gallery by Jody Zellen, titled "City Views."

Museum Director Eva Kirsch says both exhibits present art that deals with language in a form of written or spoken text. "Out of Context" attempts to explore the conjunction of language, text and literature with visual art. The works include painting, drawing, sculpture, video, sound and electronic media. Artists in the exhibit are Joe Amrhein, A.S. Bessa, Kent Butler, Steve DeGroodt, Alison Foshee, Eduardo Kac, Antoinette LaFarge, Yucef Merhi, Robin Michals, Brian Moss, Mark Pauline, Bruce Pearson and Lloyd Rodgers.

These artists cross over disciplines and draw upon ideas from different media, genres and disciplines to create a new visual language, says Kirsch.

Jody Zellen, creator of "City Views," is a Santa Monica artist. She explores new technology media art, including interactive potentials of the internet.

Both shows run through May 19.

The Fullerton Art Museum is open Tuesday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call (909) 880-7373.

Punk Legend Dies

Ramones Frontman Passes Away at 49

By Matt Schoenmann
A&E Editor

Joey Ramone, front man for the classic punk band The Ramones, was laid to rest Tuesday at Hillside Cemetery in Woodhurst, N.J.

Deborah Harry, of Blondie, Joan Jett and various New York DJ's were present for Ramone's burial.

Ramone was beloved in New York, where The Ramones got their start at the famed CBGB's bar.

"Our beloved Joey Ramone passed away this afternoon at 2:40 p.m., in a hospital in New York City where he was being treated for cancer," the Ramones' official website read. "Joey's loving family was at his bedside." Ramone passed away on Easter Sunday at just 49 years of age of lymphatic cancer.

The Ramones, along with the Clash and the Sex Pistols, were the pioneers of the three-chord punk song in the late '70s.

After starting out at drums, Ramone began fronting the band and sing such anthems as "Rock and Roll High School" and "I Wanna Be Sedated."

Ramone began wearing dark sunglasses, leather jackets and long messy hair.

Ramone fought conformity and commercialism, and partied legendarily. He was the true definition of a rock star.

The Ramones disbanded in 1995, yet could constantly be seen on one of their many fair-well tours.

"Our first show with Talking Heads was with the Ramones at CBGB's. ... Joe was always a gentleman to us, despite his wild reputation. As a performer, he is unforgettable! Our sympathy goes out to his family and to the other Ramones who must be feeling this loss terribly right now. He was one of a kind. One love, Chris and Tina." former Talking Heads members Chris Franz and Tina Weymouth said in a statement.

Ramone will certainly be missed by many.

Alma Clark and David Gonzalez are also running for the office of President. Seeking the seat of Vice-President of Finance will be Ann Marie Butler and Ezekiel Bonnilla. Running for the Board of Directors, Raul Herrera will be campaigning for the Natural Sciences position and Gerald Arterberry will be running for the Business and Public administration position.

The next four candidates are running together in a "Slate" and they are: Ed Mendoza running for President Sara Talbut running for Executive Vice President Glen Cummins running for Vice President of Finance Juan Luna running for Vice President of Student Affairs

ASI stated, "as the growth of the campus continues a definite need for growth within A.S.I. is required. Our proposals, plans, and means will meet and enhance the growth of A.S.I. while providing the student voice with strong representation."

various types of assault.

"It's more than physical skills themselves. It's the knowledge that you have a choice to fight back or not," said Kathy Hayes, the representative of R.A.D.

The event continued with Becky Heiple, the Women's Resource Program Assistant, as she explained the purpose and history of Take Back the Night. She explained that the first Take Back the Night began in England in 1877, because the women were afraid to walk the streets due to sexual assault and violence. This event spread to the U.S in 1978, where women protested violence in San Francisco.

This year's event was not designed for protesting but as an acknowledgement to the survivors and friends of survivors who had been sexually abused or assaulted. It also provided speeches filled of personal sexual assault experiences.

"This event is definitely centered around the personal," said Heiple.

As the night grew colder, heat lamps were provided, and students huddled around as they listened intently to Mariah Burton Nelson, the keynote speaker of the evening. She spoke of her own personal experience of being sexually abused as well as the steps needed to heal from such abuses.

"She is a powerful woman," said Pastor Joseph Mack, a CSUSB student and a friend to sexually abused survivors. "I feel I have learned a lot of things because my friends were raped. She is saying things we weren't able to talk about."

"I can also see this applied to a person who has not been a survivor, but a person who needs to forgive somebody for other circumstances," said Kathy York, a friend of a CSUSB student.

After Nelson's speech a question and answer discussion was held, followed by an empowering march around campus.

said Alexey Zabolotskikh, a sophomore Economics major from Russia. On the other hand, it is now easier and better access for domestic/California resident students for summer quarter. "I think it is fair because our school sponsor their visa; therefore, they can stay here in the state and get a degree," said Matias Murillo, a freshman student from San Bernardino.

Most students in the Summer quarter are international students. "New changes would make us leave to Valley College, Riverside Community College, and Chaffy College during the summer for open university," said Sergios Charntikov, a senior psychology major from Greece. If they decided not to enroll for this summer, it would be a great loss for Cal State San Bernardino.

Why Barry is Going to the Hall

By Chris Walenta
Executive Editor

Barry Bonds is the greatest player of our generation—hands down! He may not be your favorite baseball player to watch. You might actually root against him—all the time. But by looking at the raw numbers alone, there has not been a better baseball player to lace them up since Hank Aaron or Willie Mays.

On April 17 Barry Bonds joined one the most, currently elite clubs, a hitter can be a part of in baseball. He hit a 2-0 slider off of the Dodgers' Terry Adams into McCovey cove and by doing so punched his unanimous first time ballot into Cooperstown. It was Bonds' 500 homerun making him the 17th player in Major League History to do so.

For years Bonds has been a closed person, to both the media and fans. He may be considered by many to be arrogant. Perhaps it is the way he catches fly balls out in left field. Maybe it is because of how he watches his homeruns for a moment before he begins his quest around the bases. Or it could just be the wristbands with his self-image on them.

Does it matter that Bonds does not talk to the media as much as other players do? It may matter come voting time when he is up for enshrinement to the Baseball Hall of Fame. Why should he talk to the media when they either give the credit for the San Francisco Giants success to other players, or when the Giants struggle, it must obviously be because Bonds is struggling.

The one beef that I might have with Bonds is that he is not as friendly with the fans as he should be. But is that entirely true? There are plenty of times after games, Bonds will stay to sign autographs for the many fans that adore him. It's True he does not show up in the off season to the many autograph sessions at card shows that he could. But I feel that the off season is meant for two things—prepare for the next season and spend some time with your family.

Many of the fans outside of the Bay Area will talk about how they love to hate the Gold Glove left fielder. In a recent survey taken by ESPN.Com a question was asked as to explain why Bonds did not receive the same attention as some of baseball's other great players (Griffey Jr., Gwynn, McGwire, etc.). Some of the reasons presented were—he has never hit 50 homeruns in a season, he has not performed well in the postseason or because of his personality, etc. By a landslide, 39%, people said that because of his personality he does not get the acclaim that he should.

Barry Bonds is the only member of the 400-400 club (400 stolen bases, 400 homeruns). He will soon be the only member of the 500-500 club. To compare Bonds to someone like Mark McGwire would be an insult to either, but lets do just that. Bonds is 10 months younger than Big Mac. He has hit 55 less lifetime homeruns, but he has driven in 65 more runs than McGwire, and the fact that stands out the most is that Bonds has scored 472 more runs than Mac. Besides Jimmy Foxx, Bonds is the only person to ever hit 33 homeruns or more in nine straight seasons.

Whether you like him or not, you must respect greatness. Bonds emanates greatness and by the time he is done, he will be the best left-fielder of all time, better than his godfather (Mays), and perhaps he will finally get the recognition that he deserves—that of the greatest player of all time.

There are easier jobs than the ones at Enterprise. I've done them. But here I see the whole picture, not the inside of a cubicle. I deal with clients, grow my business, hire people I like being around. And when the balance sheet says we're #1 in operating profits... nothing's better.

Enterprise is about challenge, pace, solving problems. I'm fast-tracking in a $5 billion company with 38,000 people. Yet it's also a tight-knit culture, where energetic people have a lot of fun taking ownership of their careers. And I really enjoy that.

Luck, and Leon, Carry Coyotes

By Cosmin Ritivoiu
Special to the Chronicle

In the Coyotes' series against the Cal State L.A. Golden Eagles, Rene Leon helped propel the team with back-to-back comebacks by hitting a home run late in each game. The Coyotes swept the Eagles with a little luck in the first game and good run support in the second.

On Thursday April 12, the Coyotes started their comeback in the bottom of the seventh on Leon's solo shot over the left field wall. His home run pulled the Coyotes within a run after they had trailed 3-1. Despite the solid pitching of Brett Rudrude, who had 10 strikeouts and played a complete game, the Coyotes still trailed after seven innings. With the bases loaded the Coyotes were lucky enough to tie the game up off of a wild pitch by Eric Biddlecome, which scored Nick Garcia. After switching pitchers, Golden Eagles relief pitcher Andrew Wirmani walked home Robert Galvan, which put the Coyotes up for good.

In the second game on Friday the 13th, Leon scored the Coyotes first runs in the lucky seventh inning. For the second day in a row Leon hit a home run in the same inning, in the same general area, just beyond the foul pole in left field. The only difference was that this time there were two men on, giving the Coyotes a 3-2 lead off of one at-bat. The Golden Eagles tied it up in the top of the eighth off of a single by Rashawn Owens. The Coyotes would have none of that coming back strong with a solo home run by Adam Rabusin and scoring Garcia and Galvan off of errors. They hung on to top the Eagles by a score of 5-3.

After they wrapped up this series against the Eagles on Saturday the Coyotes began to prepare for San Francisco State whom they meet on Friday at Fiscalini Field.

This Week in Coyote Athletics

The baseball team is home for four games against San Francisco State on Friday through Sunday while the women's water polo team hosts University of San Diego and Chapman University Saturday in a 3-way mini-tournament. Softball, tennis and golf are on the road.

BASEBALL

The Coyotes (17-9 in the CCAA and 22-12-1 overall), host San Francisco State (7-17 in CCAA, 12-27 overall) at 2:30 p.m. Friday at Fiscalini Field. The same teams play a doubleheader on Saturday at noon and the final game will be played at noon Sunday.

SOFTBALL

The Coyotes (6-19 in CCAA and 13-29 overall), travel to Bakersfield for the Roadrunner Classic Tournament on Friday through Sunday. They will also try to finish a CCAA tie game with UC Davis that was suspended due to darkness on Feb. 16 sometime during the tournament.

TENNIS

The tennis team (1-7 in CCAA and 3-8 overall), travels to Cal Poly Pomona for the CCAA conference tournament, starting Friday and continuing through Sunday.

WATER POLO

The Coyotes, 12-8 on the season, host a mini-tournament on Saturday against the University of San Diego and Chapman University. Game times are 9 a.m., noon and 3 p.m. The event will serve as a tune-up for the Women's Water Polo Association regional tournament at UC San Diego the following week.
