extensively uses videotape and guest lecturers to help students improve speech patterns, body language and expression through viewing themselves and then comparing their performances with those of the successful women executives brought in as role models.

At a ceremony at the annual meeting of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business in New Orleans yesterday, Dr. Gibbs accepted a $5,000 award on behalf of the College. She also received $1,000 as the innovator of the winning program.

Although the course, Women in Administration, 485, has been taught on campus only twice, it has assisted women who are seeking first jobs or changing from a temporary to a career-ladder assignment, re-evaluated career goals and later resulted in responsible management positions in business, government and education.

FILM COMEDY OFFERS
"A DIFFERENT APPROACH"

"A Different Approach," a funny film sponsored by the Disabled Students Assn., will be shown in two screenings next Monday, May 7 in the Student Union - 1:30 and 2:30 p.m.

This Academy Award-nominated motion picture encourages employment and equality for the physically handicapped. A traditionally serious subject, the film paints it with broad comedy strokes in a truly different approach. The picture has excited the handicapped as well as the professional rehabilitation community like no previous film has ever done.

The script was written by the comedy writer for "Chico and the Man," "The Harvey Korman Show," and other popular TV shows. It is produced and directed by the producer of the "Maude Show," "All's Fair," and "The Nancy Walker Show." The physically impaired actors in the movie are actually handicapped people who work in the professions pictured. Special guests are Ed Asner, Norman Lear, Jim Nabors, Carroll O'Connor and Betty White.
