Letter To The Editor
Dear Editor: (Letter Directed To RVN Reader)
Please join us in our quest against the rapidly rising prices at the gas pumps. Everyday the prices are getting higher and higher with gas companies saying that these prices will last through the summer.

Written protests to our government leaders and the gasoline companies may or may not have any effect. However, there is something that we can do to cut the sending messes for gas. By being selectively exclusive with our purchasing dollars we can actually send a message to these companies that we are very upset and that we are not going to sit idly doing nothing while these huge companies cash out of our pockets.

The plan is from now through the end of the summer we can buy our gasoline anywhere, but to avoid these companies listed below. By using larger and careful crossing the names will lower their prices to sit competitive.

Until the end of May — Avoid Shell and Texaco
June — Avoid Arco and Mobil
August — Avoid Shell and Texaco
September 76 — Avoid Shell and Texaco
October — Avoid Shell and Texaco

With a large enough participation should we begin to see results in a few weeks. We have always been able to get used to paying the high prices and then cut back, but not all the way back. This site is staggering to us. I, in particular I thoroughly understand the following text till the end of September.

With just a little bit of persistence we can SUCCEED!!!!

Sincerely
Concerned Gas Buyer

President Clinton Announces Intent to Nominate Raines

President Clinton recently announced at a White House ceremony his intent to nominate Franklin D. Raines as Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), a position that has been vacant since George W. Shrubelda in 1993. Clinton also announced his intent to appoint Stanley R. Kreszenitz as Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to replace Michael D. Brown, who exited his post in November.

OMB Director Clinton announced his intent to appoint Raines to the post on Thursday evening.
"There is no excuse for the fact that Mr. Raines has not been confirmed, Clinton said. "It is a national tragedy that we have been unable to move forward on this issue."

Raines, who has been a senior aide to Clinton since 1989, is currently serving as the director of the National Economic Council, a position he has held since 1992. He has also served as the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) since 1993.

Raines will replace John B. Snow, who resigned in January 1996 after being nominated to the position of Secretary of the Treasury.

President Clinton's announcement is expected to be met with resistance from Republicans in Congress, who have long criticized the way Clinton has handled the budget process.

Raines is a career government official with over 30 years of experience in federal government service. He was appointed to his current position in 1993 by then-President Bill Clinton.

Raines has been praised for his work in leading the budget process, but has also been criticized for his handling of the deficit reduction efforts of the Clinton administration.

Raines is expected to face tough opposition from Republicans in Congress, who have long criticized the way Clinton has handled the budget process.
Hispanic Chamber Of Commerce Celebrates Grand Opening

The National Center for Chronic Disease Prevention and Health Promotion (CDC) in Atlanta published the results of the Third National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, 1988 to 1991, concerning exposure of the U.S. population to environmental tobacco smoke. This data puts into perspective that both the home and the workplace have been significantly associated with increased levels. This study did not measure all health effects but the implications for health effects and health care are obvious.

The American Medical Association by 1988, had taken the lead by diverting its investment in tobacco company stocks directly and indirectly with mutual funds that hold investment in tobacco companies. Companies around the country have taken the lead by divesting its holdings for health effects and the incidence of respiratory infections, decreased lung function and disease of the heart and arteries.

Lakers face elimination in must-win situation in Houston.

By LELAND STEIN III
BVN Sports Editor

INGLEWOOD - What an intriguing matchup the Houston Rockets (48-34) and Los Angeles Lakers (53-29) present for the knowledgeable basketball fan.

The two teams split their games in Los Angeles, and for the Lakers sake, they hope the Rockets reciprocate in Houston, or they can all break out the golf clubs and double knit and spend the Lakers on vacation.

Tonight the Lakers will need everyone to step up and show their championship mentality. Houston surely will be there, ready willing and able to send the Lakers on vacation.

Magic scored that he's not "a sit-back type of guy" and he's "got to have the ball, some kinds way," referring to crunch-time action.

Well, Magic may need to back track and produce remaining 42 point, 15 rebound and seven assist masterpieces against the Philadelphia 76ers in the 1980 NBA Finals if his team is to live to play another day.

The Lakers have the young guns, pais ain old cagy gun (Magic) to make it interesting, and his guns are we win tonight and forced a game five showdown at the Forum.

Lakers never recovered.

Coming into this series, there was a lot of optimism for the Lakers faithful, and why not? After all, the Lakers had home court advantage, and one of the best players ever in the league, a rejuvenated Magic Johnson to lead them in the second season.

After the Lakers were beaten in game one, Magic took over game two and showed the youngsters how it's done at crunch-time. Magic scored 20 points to lead the Lakers to a 104-94 victory.

After the win, Magic explained the game plan: "We should attack. We can't be worried about where Hakeem is going to be.

In the game three loss, the Lakers did indeed attack and take the play right at Houston, but, a late fourth quarter delirious six minute funk has put the Lakers in a win or else situation tonight.

Surely the Lakers are up to the task and are not dead. Eddie Jones continues to be a shining star in this playoff series.

Nick Van Exel, Cedric Ceballos, Anthony Peeler, Elden Campbell, Vlade Divac and Magic are all capable of getting in the zone.

Talking Talk With Rolonda

By Stanton Allen-Woods

The 1996 television season has brought the premiere and the demise of many talk show programs. There are only a handful of talk shows that find the success, longevity, and money that Rolonda Watts has garnered, rapidly approaching her fourth season as host of "Rolanda," a one-hour nationally syndicated talk show. When asked what has helped her show, Rolonda simply says, "We are credible, compassionate, and caring. We never stop to define what is popular and we use other shows, and it's paid off!"

Rolonda brings with her a talented cast of experienced producers, directors, and staff. However, her fourteen years in journalism hasn't hurt the show or because they want to better themselves, they honestly want to make their lives better, and it's paid off."

Rolonda can be seen as a prince, the bigger-than-life monarch. Yet his reach is limited, no more so than the limited reach that he has in the locker room. You'll hear him explain "adjusted to profit with a sliding scale" much more frequently than the line and out of organized fight clubs. But despite his hunting and financial wizardry, Sultan's success, longevity, and the carnival of carnage ... the center of attention. "Rolanda," the ultimate capitalist, as he is in the locker room. He's the devil incarnate. "The 1996 television season will be a Ballet of Blood. Boxing."

The Black Voice News

"It's not the same," she states. "Tackling either issue honestly, what folks did years ago when journalism hasnt hurt the show. Working as an anchor for WNYC-FM and "The Tonight Show," it was no time before she was co-hosting Lifetime Television's "Attitudes." "I think America has an insatiable appetite for talk in our fast-paced world. It's our way of connecting with our neighbors once again. It's like what folks did years ago when they roamed their front porches and exchanged stories," she stated. Tackling pertinent issues and offering solutions has come to be what Rolonda's show is associated with. Societal ills such as corporate punishment, police brutality, drugs, and relationships continue to be the shows focus. "We love to have fun and want to make a difference," she continued. "I enjoy having people on the show who are asking for help, either because they honestly want to make their lives better, or because they want to better the lives of others around them." Rolonda can be seen working at 11AM, 5PM, and 11PM, laughing, learning, and finding answers.

Jackson Takes A Jab in "Great White Hype"

Damon Wayans, Jamie Foxx and Salli Richardson join Samuel L. Jackson in the Twentieth Century Fox Production.

He's a flamboyant crook, a hunter and the consummate promoter. There are even those who say he's the devil incarnate. He rules over the modern-day Sodom and Gomorrah better known as Las Vegas. His kingdom is the realm of the little acts ... the sweet science ... the carnival of carnage ... the ballet of blood. Boxig. Men Revolved Final Sultan. In a sport of wannahe kings, Sultan is the mightiest of monarchs. Yet his reach extends far beyond the ring. Rich, powerful and dressed like a prince, the bigger-than-life Sultan is nothing less than the American Dream personified. He's the ultimate capitalist, as comfortable in the boardroom as he is in the locker room. You'll hear him explain "adjusted to profit with a sliding scale" much more frequently than the line and out of organized fight clubs. But despite his hunting and financial wizardry, Sultan'sfeldiren is fading. Boxig attendance is dwindling, along with public interest. Even pay per view is down 50 percent. The problem, according to Sultan, is that people are tired of paying money to see "bushkin" beating up "brothers." Sultan's solution: Find a White heavyweight contender to face the undefeated heavyweight champ. James "The Grim Reaper" Roger. Sultan finds his Great White Hope in a steady bar in Cleveland, Ohio. The would-be contender, Tony Conklin, is a long-haired front man for a rock band all-too-appropriately named Massive Head Wound. But Tony's got one thing going for him, besides the color of his skin: he actually beat the champ in an amateur bout many years earlier. The Fight of the Century—the of the Millennium—is set. "Yeah" Tony Conklin vs. James "The Grim Reaper" Roger. Is it Hope? Or is it Hype? Either way, the boxing world is in about to take it on the chin. Twentieth Century Fox presents An Amblin Entertainment/Fred Berger Production. A Reginald Hudlin Film, Samuel L. Jackson, The Great White Hype, starring Jeff Goldblum, Peter Berg, Jan Lavitz, Curtains Berner, Chuch Mario, Jamie Fox, and Damon Wayans. The Great White Hype is directed by Reginald Hudlin, and produced by Fred Berger and Joshua Donen, Barry Berg and Neil Lebanon for the co-producers, the screenplay is by Tony Horma and John Shiban. The Great White Hype co-stars Rocky Carroll, Sally Richardson, and John Rhyvanter. Finding themselves typecast as reporters were noted boxing journalists Bill Sugar of KO Magazine; Michael Kari of The New York Post; USA Today's John Saravacos, and Tim Kovac with the Los Angeles Times.

Samuel L. Jackson as the Raw. Fred Sullivan, a charismatic promoter/hustler/pipe-tapping tycoon who is always the center of attention. Damon Wayans as James "The Grim Reaper" Roger and Peter Berg as "Irish" Terry Conklin square off before and during the fight of the Millennium.

Dream Weavers Build Model Community

MORENO VALLEY - With a budget of $1.5 million, a 16-week session, and building supplies consisting of 40 sets of 20th-century-style furniture, 20 kitchen cabinets, 100 kitchen appliances, 40 seven-foot houses and eight grade girls, members of the Dream Weavers program at Sunnymead Middle School in Moreno Valley, are completing construction of a model community. Recently, George Simms, Building Official for the City of Moreno Valley was on hand to present "certificates of occupancy" to the girls as they celebrated completion of the project.

Dream Weavers, which is funded and administered by the Riverside YWCA, is an after school career education program designed to assist middle school girls in exploring career options for the future. The aim of the Dream Weavers program is to help girls develop assertiveness skills, self-esteem, overcome gender stereotypes, and increase awareness of non-traditional career opportunities. Juliann Olson, math teacher at Sunnymead Middle School and facilitator for the program cites that during the construction of the project the girls "are not only becoming better students, they are becoming leaders in class." They tell the other kids 'Pay attention, that's Mrs. Olson talking!' It's also made the girls more confident.

Local Students Rewarded

TOMORROW'S LEADERS REALIZED TODAY:

Two local students each received a $1,000 college scholarship for being named as a "McDonald's Black History Maker of Tomorrow" and were recipients of an awards luncheon sponsored by the McDonald's Operators' Association of Southern California. McDonald's franchise owners, employers and the two girls, who both attend Moreno Valley High School, were honored for their leadership, scholarships, character and service to their communities. Since the program's inception in 1987, more than $40,000 in scholarships have been awarded.

Mauri is just very impressed with the way the kids have gotten involved with this project; everything was their own idea, nothing was suggested to them... Riverside YWCA
