ROTC will remain on campus

Campus chooses to leave issues of discrimination on national level

By Edward Durlak
Staff Writer

California State University, San Bernardino President Anthony Evans announced on April 26, 1991 that the Reserved Officer Training Corps (ROTC) Program will not be removed from the curriculum at CSUSB.

This decision came despite the resolution of the campus' Faculty Senate in June of last year to eliminate the program because of its practice of discrimination against homosexuals. The Senate holds that discrimination of any kind violates university policy.

The Council of Academic Deans reviewed the recommendation by the Senate, but voted to keep the ROTC program intact. Dr. Dennis Hefner, vice president for academic affairs, said, "Despite our opposition to this practice, the council was nearly unanimous in opposing the proposed discontinuance of the ROTC program."

Dr. Evans said, "While I, too, heartily disapprove of the Department of Defense's practice of prohibiting homosexuals from serving in the military, I agree that the discontinuance of the program is an inappropriate response at this time."

"I believe that our campus should continue the ROTC program and simultaneously work to secure a reversal of the Pentagon's practice of excluding homosexuals from the armed services."

Dr. Aubrey Bonnett, dean of the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences and overseer of the ROTC program, said, "I think we should encourage the legislative and/or judicial branches of our government to obliterate this discrimination."

Dr. Hefner provided three reasons for keeping the ROTC program:

First, the Senate's proposal would yield a permanent solution rather than a change in legislation or court ruling.

Second, the elimination of the ROTC program would effect the education of ROTC students who rely on military funding.

Finally, the Department of Defense's practice of excluding homosexuals is, to this date, legal. Canceling a program as a protest to a legal policy could jeopardize the several million dollars in federal student financial aid that is provided annually to CSUSB.

Dr. Evans said, "If our campus took such an action, Congress could possibly retaliate by cutting off all federal funds to our university."

Dr. Hefner said, "We must continue to approve curriculum solely on the basis of its scholarly merit, and guard against any form of political censure."

—President Anthony Evans

Dr. Hefner also added that almost 70 percent of the officers in the military today are ROTC program graduates. As a result, the military as a whole has become more broadly educated.

The ROTC program, sometimes referred to as the Military Science program, incorporates 56 and 48 total units in its two different options as a major and 24 units in its certificate program.

Hefner announces where budget axe will fall

By Stacy McClendon
Production Manager

Next year, California State University, San Bernardino will have a $7 million budget cut from this year's budget.

"This is the most difficult budget year in the history" of the California State University system, Vice President of Academic Affairs Dennis Hefner said.

Among other things, instructional programs are going to be saved.

Hefner's budget provides sufficient faculty positions to the schools to guarantee all new hires, meet student needs in both sections and seats, afford some flexibility to the schools to hire part-time faculty for courses and sections as needed, and attempt to meet the 1991 levels.

The new budget also maintains the Library's periodicals and operations and expenditures budgets.

Permanent staff, tenured, tenure-track, and six-year temporary faculty are protected; no layoffs will occur among these positions.

The budget covers contract guaranteed sabbaticals with school resources. Additionally National Business and Social Work accreditations will be funded.

Among other cuts, class sizes are going to grow. The Student-Faculty Ratio has been permanently raised from approximately 1:16 to 1:17. While English 101 will be held at 18 or fewer students, the upper division writing requirement classes will go up to 30 students.

26 current faculty positions will be held vacant saving more than $750,000.

75 percent of faculty development money and 80 percent of the instructional equipment money will be returned. Concurrent enrollment money, originally designated for the schools, will also be returned.

The temporary help budget will be reduced by 20 percent which will affect all Academic Affairs offices.

The university will also be reducing "assigned time" by 75 percent. This will affect release time for Faculty Senate, University Evaluation Committee, Program Reviews, Coordinators for numerous programs, Institutes, the Advising Center, Liberal Studies Assessment Program, Graduate Mentors, and Doctoral Programs support. Additionally the Learning Center Director position will be held vacant.

Most new degree programs will be put on hold. The MA in See "BUDGET," page 3

African-American studies object of racist graffiti

On April 19, 1991, flyers posted around campus by the African American Student Coalition were defaced. A number of the flyers stating the AASC's general and specific objectives were disfigured with the remark "Stop Black Racism."

Members of the coalition were upset over the graffiti.

"It's hard to believe (they) thought it was a racial issue," Yvonne Johnson said.

There are other instances of racism on the CSUSB campus. In the fall of 1988, a black student with a state certified disability discovered a written note that said, "your only handicap is that you're a —ing nigger." The faculty member found guilty in the incident was temporarily suspended from his teaching position in the Physical Education Department.

In February, 1989, two black female students who lived on campus notified the Public Safety Department that a swastika was written with a black grease pen on their door. The housing office investigated and posted the University Directive regarding harassment.

Michael Burnely, a pre-law student believes that the incidents occurring on campus and campuses nationwide, is a projection of social perspectives continuing to identify people by stereotypes.

"The defacement of the flyer is a general expression of the prominent ignorance on this campus," Burnely said.

With the influx of minority students attending this campus, Dr. Vice President of University Relations Judith Rymer foresees the inevitable implementation of selective cultural courses.

"In the kind of world we live in, it is essential to have cultural courses to accommodate our culturally diverse campus," Rymer said.

Fascination with the past

By Karen Brummitt
Staff Writer

John Henry Parker's photographs of Rome is in display in the Visual Arts Building through May 25, 1991.

Parker (1806-1884) was a pioneer in photographing architecture. His interests in the bridges, walls, gates, aqueducts delivering water from the Tiber River, as well as "The Monuments of Palatine and Capitoline Hills and the ruins in the Roman Forum, are represented by his photographs.

Parker reveals his style of Rome in its modern history, by "cataloging ancient business types," showing how the Romans utilized different materials, and illustrating ancient architectural technologies.

Peter J. Holliday, assistant professor in the department of art, said "socked by the dramatic changes rampant development has wrought on our own cities, disconcerted and cut adrift by the destruction of our own historical record in the process, we see Parker's images of Rome with an ambivalence towards progress and share his fascination with the past."

Crime Watch

On May 1, around 11:00 a.m., a female student parked in the parking lot east of Serrano Village witnessed two juveniles allegedly break into another student's car.

The student then drove to the information booth at the main entrance of campus and notified the parking officer there.

The parking officer contacted the Department of Public Safety, and the dispatcher alerted units of the campus police.

Chief Ed Harrison, and Sgt. Stephen Nowicki responded to the call and observed two male Asian juveniles fleeing onto Northpark Avenue.

Harrison and Nowicki apprehended the suspects on Little Mountain Drive. In the suspects' possession was a car stereo.

The suspects, both 15-year old students at San Bernardino's Pacific High School were booked on suspicion of auto burglary. One suspect was remanded to juvenile hall custody and the other was released to his parents.

Chief Harrison expressed admiration for the student who witnessed the event and complimented her wise decision to not confront the suspects. He encouraged students to continue to take an active role in Crime Prevention.

The Department of Public Safety's Operations Analyst, Quentin Moses, calls on all students to "Help a Friend" and enroll in First Aid/CPR classes. Moses is a certified instructor and is available to instruct organizations in groups of 6-10 persons. Contact him at extension 5165 to arrange for instruction.

On the spot

This week's question: How do you think the A.S.I. should spend your money?

Cathy Ramirez

"I would like to see more classes offered for nighttime students (They) should be better represented... I don't like them to spend our money on personal computers for themselves. I would also like to see some big name concerts that involve the whole community."

Bruce Cooley

"Get some real groups and advertise them better. I usually don't know there's one playing 'till I see them setting up their equipment. ASI is so... I hardly don't know they exist. I would like to see things that all the students can enjoy and get involved with."

Drew Beets

"More concerts with big names like Social Distortion that the students can be involved with... The library should have more than just two or three copy machines that work at one time.... Also I think that some money should be given to The Chronicle."

Carmalyn Hunt

"Well It would be nice to have more classrooms. I don't have any time for student activities. Some more dances would be nice and some more computers in the basement of the library is needed."

Tracy Lopez

"I think there should be more computer facilities for the students to use and different places to eat. I am a transfer student from UCI and we had a food court where there was a variety of foods to eat. Something like that would be nice."

SAIL dedicated to student success

Students at California State University, San Bernardino have a program available to them that offers both adjunct instruction and counseling. The program is called Student Assistance in Learning (S.A.I.L.).

A federal program initially funded in 1981 through the Department of Education, S.A.I.L. is designed to assist low-income, first generation, and disabled students with support services. These services include: adjunct course instruction, diagnostic assessment, individual assistance in reading and study skills, assistance in obtaining financial aid, and "early warning" academic and probational counseling.

Adjunct classes are designed to compliment and enhance the instruction provided by the teachers of heavily enrolled, general education courses. The courses also ease educational difficulties experienced by freshmen, returning students, transfers and under-prepared students. Classes meet for two hours per week and review the requirements, homework, reading, writing and lectures of the content course.

The classes facilitate quality instruction by providing students with an instructional environment much smaller than that of the regular classroom. Students are encouraged to interact with each other and the adjunct instructor. Through this interaction, student's self-esteem increases as they become more familiar and comfortable with the material.

Adjunct courses usually retain approximately 94 percent of their students, while non-adjunct courses retain only 59 percent. Students enrolled in adjunct courses typically receive much higher grades than their non-adjunct counterparts.

Counseling is provided to students in need of both academic and personal assistance. S.A.I.L.'s staff works to identify specific areas of academic and personal need. After exploring these areas of need, the staff assists students in establishing and ultimately reaching goals. As the goals are met, S.A.I.L. continues to provide follow-up support, aiding the student in their academic and personal growth.

Clark E. Howard, the program's director, said, "the S.A.I.L. program is dedicated to student success. I hope more of CSUSB's students will take advantage of its services."

CSSA: Cal State's lobbyists

By Scott Ruppe
News Editor

The California State Student Association was established in 1959 to provide a forum for student body presidents to share information about campus issues. Part of the students responsibility as a member of the CSSA is to establish priorities relating to campus problems, the CSU budget, and collective bargaining.

Although CSSA has lobbied to reduce fees this year, there is a move by the state organization to support Prop 98, which could cost the CSU system millions of dollars. California State University, San Bernardino voted against the measure.

"What have they done for us lately?" asked last year's ASI President, Aaron Watson who came into office supporting the program and left disgusted with the waste which goes on in it.

"It's clearly a waste of student's money," he said.

According to information published by the CSSA organization, in 1972 the CSSA was successful in advocating for legislation which amended the education code and permitted students to form a professional lobby and work with the Legislature. The CSSA now includes an in-system liaison to the Chancellor's office and a collective bargaining director. The Legislative staff works out of Sacramento, while, the liaison and the Collective Bargaining Director work out of the Chancellor's office in Long Beach.

The CSSA is comprised of nineteen student body presidents or their designees.

ASI president Patrick Cooney, and Legislative Director Russ Bogh said that California State University, San Bernardino's biggest accomplishment to CSSA has been the proposal that all new buildings constructed on Cal State campuses be provided with accessible entries for handicapped students. Bogh also stated that one of their main goals is lobbying for the passage of a bill providing education equity. This bill mandates that educational standards be maintained for all ethnic races.

Another accomplishment Cooney emphasizes is the funding allocated by CSSA to initiate the Children's Centers on the Cal State campuses.

But Watson said that often CSSA meetings are a means to more personal ends. While some representatives used the monthly meetings to advance their personal political goals others go up to have fun.

There is "a lot of drinking and different kinds of partying," according to Watson.

"As long as you have (student leaders) who aren't here to serve the students, they will find reasons to justify CSSA's existence."

CSUSB student volunteers needed

By Renee Groese
Club Editor

Students interested in volunteering their time at an organization should check into the Volunteer Center, located in the Student Services Building.

Rosann Curtis, director of the Volunteer Center, said there are currently about 75 places available where students can volunteer. Some examples include Riverside Probation, crisis hot lines, and senior centers.

The volunteer program has been active on campus for about five years, and right now they have about 35-40 volunteers. Some of the programs can also be used as internships, and doing the volunteer work is an asset to your resume, said Curtis.

Curtis is currently looking for volunteers to help with volunteer placements of students. Anyone interested in volunteering can contact her at ext. 5237.

Budget

Land Management/Planning already has a substantial waiting list, but the program will be delayed one year because there is no money to implement it.

The impact of the budget cuts include decentralization of instructional resources to the schools. Professors will spend more time in the classroom, leaving administration duties to their "free time."

The library will be "seriously underfunded for shelving and monographs acquisitions, and periodical subscriptions will be discounted by inflation, increased postage rates, and the new application of sales taxes," according to a memo from Hefner. The Library anticipates a $94 million shortfall in their periodicals budget, and "has begun the dismal task of identifying subscriptions that will not be renewed."

Audiovisual equipment in critical need of replacement will have to last one more year. Outmoded science and performing arts equipment can not be replaced in this budget.

While the current situation is frustrating, Hefner hopes this is a one time situation and has developed a long run planning priorities list. The goals are threefold: to enhance instructional programs, to provide academic support services, and to beef up general academic programs.

To enhance instructional programs, CSUSB hopes to significantly increase operating expense baselines; upgrade equipment in the science teaching laboratories, especially in biology, chemistry, and physics; hire an adequate number of technicians to support fully all science and computer laboratories and courses; and begin to address inadequate and uneven faculty-staff ratios in and among the schools through new hires.

To provide Academic Support Services, the University hopes to staff, equip, and relocate an adequate testing center for the campus; provide "catch-up" funding for library acquisitions and audio visual equipment replacement, because these programs will be underfunded in the 1991-92 school year; and significantly enhance the retention efforts especially among first-time freshmen.

To beef up general academic programs, the goals include increasing the number of graduate assistantships; ensure that all faculty have adequate computing support; replace obsolete equipment in creative and visual arts; and expand the professional development program.

"We're basically trying to weather this storm," Hefner said.

Demi Moore's debut as producer proves she's 'Mortal'

By Karen Brummitt
Staff Writer

Demi Moore makes her debut as co-producer of Columbia Pictures' Mortal Thoughts, as well as her debut side by side on the big screen with her husband, actor, Bruce Willis.

Cynthia Kellogg (Moore) appears to be stuck in the middle when her best friend Joyce Urbanski's (Glenn Headly), aggressive, abusive husband turns up dead.

The movie opens in the police interrogation room, where Kellogg has agreed to make a statement concerning what "really" happened the night of the murder. The next obvious step is not just one, but many flashbacks to explain her confession. Each flashback drags the audience through an uncomfortable scene where everyone, involved or not, is screaming in forced New York accents, cussing and crying.

Bad feelings abound as the plot continues to abuse and amuse the audience with frequent scenes and references from other thriller movies.

The acting is good, but the story is cliché. We've all seen the slow motion scenes with eerie music, and the story doesn't support a whole movie.

So, who done it? Don't waste $6.50 to find out, wait for the video, and be abused in the comfort of your own home.

Cynthia Kellogg (Demi Moore) and James Urbanski (Bruce Willis) are terrified as Joyce Urbanski (Glenn Headly) plays chicken with an oncoming semi.

Dodger game a hit with Escape Club fans

By Mitchell Halbrech
Campus Life Editor

The roar of the crowd, the crack of a bat, and the pop as a ball hits a glove were just a few of the many things that California State University, San Bernardino students got to hear at the Dodger-Giants game in Los Angeles on April 27.

Forty students took the chance to join the Escape Club and go to the game. This was a time to see the new faces on the Dodger baseball team.

Players like Darryl Strawberry, Brett Butler, Bob Ojeda and Gary Carter were added to the team just this year. Bob Ojeda started the game for the Dodgers, but didn't last too long before it was time for the bullpen.

CSUSB students may have had to sit high up in the right field deck, but there were some experiences only this area could bring. The only grilled hot dog stand in the ball park was located just a couple of aisles over. Vendors like Taco Bell and Carl's Jr. were also there to choose from.

Souvenir stands were being raided by our crowd throughout the game. When the fans would get the wave started the CSUSB section joined in.

The game itself wasn't a bad one to see. It was close with the Giants winning, 4-2. Students can look forward to viewing more sporting events with the Escape Club during the next academic year.

Various Artists get 'Dedicated' adds another dimension to these songs.

The Grateful Dead has had a long illustrious career in rock and roll. Many artists have used the Dead as a heavy influence for their music.

Arista records recently released "Dedicated" this compact disc has various artists performing Grateful Dead hits that helped influence them.

Los Lobos opens up the CD with "Bertha." During this song it is easy to picture Los Lobos singing such hits as "Will the Wolf Survive" and "La Bamba."

The Harshed Mellows and Elvis Costello perform on the next two tracks. Unfortunately, Elvis Costello just doesn't come through in his cover of "Ship of Fools."

Suzanne Vega did a surprisingly good job on the tracks "China Doll" and "Cassidy." Her voice

Country music fans will enjoy hearing such artists as Dwight Yoakam and Lyle Lovett doing the tracks "Truckin'" and "Friend of the Devil."

Midnight Oil does a cover of "Wharf Rat." The intro to the song could have been done a little better, but the rest of the song is well done.

The last song on the compact disc is "Ripple" which was performed by Jane's Addiction. This turned out to be one of the best songs on the CD Jane's Addiction must have spent a lot of time preparing for this track as it is superbly done.

"Dedicated" is one CD that is for almost everyone, the music is diverse and well performed, it is hard to believe that only one band originally made these songs known to the music world.

Theater Review

Comedy is light evening's entertainment

By Mitchell Halbreich
Campus Life Editor

The California State University, San Bernardino theater department recently presented An Italian American Reconciliation.

The play was about Huey Maximilian Bonfigliano, a man who had not been himself since his divorce with Janice (Ijeana Avila).

Huey asks his friend Aldo (Scott Langer) to prepare Janice for Huey coming to see her. Huey finally confronts Janice and regains his self respect, but does not stay with Janice and hopes to see his old girl friend Teresa (Keri Hostetter).

Six people made up the entire cast. Langer who played Aldo Scalci did a good job portraying a young Italian bachelor.

All members did a great job during the play. Wendi Hastings was especially notable as Teresa's Aunt May.

Very similar to "Moonstruck" this play had a unique flavor of humor. With scenes like Aldo talking about erections and Janice shooting at Aldo with a "Zipp" gun the viewer got a lot too laugh at and enjoy.

This production was done extremely well and most will be looking forward to the next production The Importance of Being Earnest beginning May 31.

Pups program reaches out to youth

By Ryan Smith
Staff Writer

California State University, San Bernardino does many activities which involve the surrounding community, but one seems to stand out among the crowd.

"Coyote Pups," a program that allows young people the opportunity to experience the collegiate athletic scene, while also participating in fun and wholesome group activities is turning out to be an overwhelming success.

Introduced in 1990 on a trial and error basis, "Pups" is a booster club for children ages six to ten.

There is a five dollar fee for each child.

The kids receive many items such as a tee-shirt and cap, a membership card, a picture of both the mens' and womens' basketball teams, along with the privilege to attend socials before some of the home basketball games. Pizza parties and ice cream socials are a couple of the events these kids attend.

The "Pups" have their own section reserved for them at the basketball games and are visited and supervised by student athletes. One week the womens' basketball team will sit with them and watch the men play and the next week it might be just the opposite.

CSUSB Athletic Director David L. Suenram created the Pups program. "The youth of today need someone to reach out to and with whom to identify," he said. Cal State feels that, "we, as a regional institution of higher learning and as a growing intercollegiate athletic department, have a responsibility to try and meet that need."

Along with Suenram there were other key players such as Sports Information Director Dave Beyer and CSUSB student athlete Laura Beeman. Beyer took charge of a great deal of planning and organization.

Planning the activities of over 70 young children is no small feat. The membership cards the kids received were all done by hand.

Beyer praised Beeman for her efforts and said that "without her, the program would not be near the success that it is." Beeman went to elementary schools and talked with children along with giving them demonstrations of her basketball skills.

"Laura Beeman is a positive role model for these children and they just love her," Beyer said. The players and coaches of the mens' and womens' basketball teams are recognized as unique individuals for their participation in the "Pups."

So where does this leave this booster club as CSUSB heads for another year of sports in the fall of 1991?

Beyer hopes to expand the program to include all of the sports teams at the university. This will give the kids the opportunity to be involved in a wider range of activities.

There is hope to get fraternity and sorority involvement and possibly some community involvement, such as civic groups, that will help with the coordinating and supervision of future activities.

"It takes teamwork to make programs such as this succeed," Beyer said.

As Suenram noted, "our people just want to give something back to a community that has helped us to grow as an institution."

Who's Playing in the Pear Garden?

By Renee Groese
Club Editor

The Players of the Pear Garden club at California State University, San Bernardino is a club for students interested in theater arts.

Originating in China, the Players of the Pear Garden gets its name from an old Asian theater company dating back to 720 A.D. It was started by the emperor Ming Huang, who was a part of the original theater and school of acting in China.

Kathryn Ervin, theater arts instructor at CSUSB, is the adviser for the club. Ervin said the club is a theater interest group that the theater department set up. Ervin provides suggestions for the members of the club.

The Players of the Pear Garden participate in many activities such as fund raisers for block tickets for theater productions, workshops, face painting at elementary schools, and they also go to high schools and set up theater activities.

Currently the club is preparing for its end of year banquet, which is scheduled for mid-June. The Banquet looks back at the productions of the year, and awards are given out.

Ervin provides the club with encouragement, connections in the theater business, and is an overall ear for the club members.

Right now the club has approximately 20-25 members, but new members are always welcome. They usually meet once a month. Meetings are announced in the theater classes, and flyers are posted.

Interested students can contact Ervin in the Creative Arts Building Room 170, or call her at ext. 5892.

Greeks raise athletic scholarships

Since deciding to make the move to a Division II standing in Intercollegiate Athletics, fundraising to promote scholarships has been the main focus of the Coyote program.

The student body has already defeated a proposed fee increase, and in order to gain needed funds the University has looked elsewhere hoping to draw competitive athletes in all sports.

In response to these obstacles, Sigma Chi in association with Jersey's Pizza, Kendall Copyland and Family Fitness Centers, decided to show their support by sponsoring a basketball tournament for the second consecutive year. It was designed to raise funds for the Athletic Scholarship Fund.

Participants included Delta Sigma Phi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Alpha (UC Riverside) and two non-greek teams, the Sud Slammers and Cobras.

Each team provided a $100.00 entry fee, of which $600.00 went directly to the Athletic Scholarship Fund. The additional $200.00 paid for a plaque (which incorporates a future for the tournament), and funds providing pay for students keeping score and officiating.

"The event achieved what it was designed to accomplish," said Jeffrey Johnston, event coordinator and Sigma Chi member. "It showed how campus organizations working together can effectively approach needs of the University, while at the same time building relations and promoting rapport through cooperative involvement."

The games began on April 27 and finished the next day. Kappa Alpha won the tournament by slaughtering Sigma Chi, 100-72, in the title game. The Cobras took third place when Omega Psi Phi forfeited the game. The Sud Slammers took the consolation championship by defeating TKE, 59-50.

The All-Tournament team included: Most Valuable Player Todd Bisbocci (KA), Jeff Christoffel (ΣΧ), Don Ervin (Cobras), Chris Judy (TKE), Jay Love (ΩΨΦ), Doug Eaton (Sud Slammers), Jason Horton (ΣΝ), and Robert Rounseville (ΔΣΦ).

Alpha Phi is a role model

By Jessica Fort
Publicity Manager

As part of their dedication to this community Alpha Phi is assisting Kids Against Crime paint over the graffiti on walls and buildings on Saturday, May 11th.

"It is a really worthwhile organization. We have worked with them before with the 'Stop the Violence Rally' and they asked us to come out and help them again," said Shannon Gutierrez.

Alpha Phi feels that as college students in this community they should stand as role models for the youth in this area. Through this sort of intervention they hope to reinforce the ideas of higher education and success.

Alpha Delta Pi:

Swinging into spring

By Charlene S. Hurley
Greek Editor

The third quarter of the school year is well underway, and along with it comes "spring fever." This is the desire of wanting to be out in the sunshine, talking with friends or maybe even playing in the park.

Alpha Delta Pi Sorority will have the opportunity to do just that, and serve the community from noon, May 22 until noon on May 24, during their annual Swing-A-Thon.

All of the members will take turns swinging in two-hour shifts on giant swings in front of the Pfau Library.

Their goal is to raise $1,000 to donate to their national philanthropy, The Ronald McDonald House. The money will be directed towards the building of the new facility in Loma Linda. They will raise money three ways. They can collect pledges for each hour they swing, collect straight donations, or receive donations from by passers in a bucket in front of the swing.

In previous years, Alpha Delta Pi has been given support from other greek houses on campus and local businesses.

"The support we've gotten in the past is Wonderful. People not only bring us donations, but also hot chocolate in the middle of the night, or pizza and other snacks. It is greatly appreciated," said Amy Johnston the Community Service and Philanthropy Chairperson for ADPi.

A kick-off party will begin at noon on May 24 in front of the library. Ronald McDonald will be present to entertain students, and kids from the Children's Center.

Better safe than sorry

Sigma Chi Fraternity offers escort service

By Charlene S. Hurley
Greek Editor

It is always better to be safe than sorry.

This is the philosophy Sigma Chi Fraternity took into account when they started the Student Escort Service three weeks ago.

Several members of Sigma Chi volunteer their time from 7:30 to 11 Monday through Thursday evenings, and are stationed in the Student Union. They escort students from anywhere on campus to other buildings, or to their vehicles.

"We're doing this for the safety of the students on campus," said Jeffrey Johnston, a member of Sigma Chi. Sororities meet on Monday and Tuesday increasing the number of escorts needed on those evenings. Sigma Chi hopes that the awareness of the escort service will detour the element of crime.

To send for an escort from anywhere on campus, a student needs to pick up a campus phone and dial Public Safety at extension 5165. Campus Police will then contact a Sigma Chi with the location information.

While waiting in the Student Union for possible escorts, Johnston says that the men have found an effective use of their time. They have had an opportunity to study or read allowing them to accomplish more than one thing at a time.

There are different volunteers each evening, however there are a few men that have permanent scheduled times. Monday, Orlando Moreno, Matt Bliss, Mark Wong, and Mike Spalding are there. Tuesday, Kevin Arcaris, Jeff Christoffel, and Scot Neudorff take their turn. Wednesday Matt Paradis, Ken Wical, and Greg Astran work, and Thursday, Val Jamora, Jeffery Johnston, and Greg Astran escort students.

Sigma Chi has planned on continuing its Escort Service next year.

HE/SHE/IT...

MATERIALISTIC WOMEN:

SHE: "I want to meet a nice guy, with lots of money and a cool car!"

Guys, how many times have you heard your girl "friends" repeat this litany of desire? Isn't it ironic that the same women who complain that men are insensitive, callous, and superficial indulge in such hypocrisy?

Just when we men get used to the fact that we need to be sensitive, caring and affectionate, WHAM! they hit us with the "Character, Cash and Countache" mentality.

What ever happened to meeting in college and building a life together after graduation? Starting at the bottom and working together towards a life of happiness?

Well that is not the case anymore. In high school it was the "college guys" we worried about; now that we are in college, beware the accountants and engineers!

The problem seems to be that today's college woman wants it all NOW. Working together to make "it" happen has become passe. Why go through all the problems of relationships, financial worries and stress when a girl can have someone who has either been given everything by "Mommy & Daddy" or has already worked so that it is unnecessary for her to do so.

What caused this to happen? Was it Reaganomics, MTV, Nordstroms or just plain "Knots Landing" envy? Is this a revolution or a fad? Are college men doomed to whine, "Don't you respect ME?" How can things change?

The mere fact that we men are paying for tuition, books and those mundane necessities: food, clothing and shelter, should be evidence enough that we are nice guys who are trying to do something with our lives.

The measure of our desirability should not be determined by the size of our wallets and the "Blue Book" value of our automobiles.

Instead, we college men should be judged by our innate worthiness. This can be ascertained by answering the questions, "Is he kind?", "Is he reliable?" and "Does he tell the truth?" NOT. "What's his dad do?", "Is that his BMW?" and, "Are those Armani's?"

College women are the standard bearers and future leaders of their gender. Are they fated to fill the vacuum of superficiality created by the "Modern Man's" movement away from insensitivity and crassness with standards just as boorish, although professed by those more fair?

What can be done?

First, ladies, don't write off that poor schmuck just because he wears generic clothes or drives the infamous "transportation" auto. He might be a really interesting, exciting individual. Who knows? Well, you won't unless you talk to him.

Second, when did money become the root of all happiness? I know "pizza and a video" grows old quickly, but if you don't want to do that anymore - SAY SO! How can we know what makes you happy if you don't tell us?

Third, recognize that we are still in college. The riches won't come until a couple years after graduation. So, be patient.

Finally, evaluate what is important to you. Appearances? Material things? Cars? I hope not, because if these are all you desire, than your life can be nothing but empty and meaningless.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

ASI: SERVING WHOSE NEEDS?

Another election for officers of the Associated Students Incorporated (ASI) has come and gone. Unfortunately, the realities of ASI still remain with us.

Every year we students hear candidates debate the same old issues: student services, student involvement, and how each candidate plans to best serve the needs of the students of California State University, San Bernardino (CSUSB.) Last year we heard, "Unity Through Diversity" from current ASI President, Patrick Cooney, and this year's winner, ASI President-Elect Michelle Millerechoed, "Furthering Your Interests" (which implies students interests were advanced this year.) Don't get me wrong, these are great marketing slogans. But where's the beef? Once the elections are over, it's back to business as usual for ASI.

Case in point: Let's look at Cooney's Administration (Unity Through Diversity.) I think in the beginning there were good intentions, but as Randy Travis once wrote, "...the road to hell is paved with good intentions." Yup, you guessed it, everything went downhill from there.

Throughout the year Cooney's administration has been plagued with ASI officers walking off their jobs. Board members, an AS Productions Chair, an Entertainment Chair (that was me) as well as others left their posts mainly due to conflicts over whose interests were being served. Even ASI Vice-President, Forrest Hillis, recently resigned in protest. I don't know about you, but that doesn't sound like "Unity" to me.

In fact, the last Entertainment Chair, Dex Briggs, was fired because he refused to support Cooney's plan to raid the Major Concert Fund, in order to spend $10,000.00 on an Earth Day event. Cooney and AS Productions Chair, Michelle Miller, ignored the Entertainment Committee and the AS Productions Board in order to take the money. They even went as far as to mislead the Board of Directors by telling them that, "Dex Briggs is not cooperating... he knew when he got the job that the $10,000.00 was to be spent on Earth Day."

These statements made to the Board during an emergency meeting held over spring break are false, and I find it offensive that ASI executives would tell such conspicuous lies to their own Board of Directors. The fact of the matter is that Dex Briggs was the Vice Chair of Entertainment before he became the Entertainment Chair. He held that position since last September. I was the Entertainment Chair before

Dex, and a $10,000.00 expenditure on Earth Day was about as likely as a male human giving birth to a giraffe. Earth Day was not even a topic at that time. Back then the Entertainment staff was busy working on a major concert for the students of CSUSB, as well as weekly programming. Remember back when "Thursdays were Thrashin'?" Unfortunately, the Board of Directors fell for the B.S. and fired Dex at that meeting without an investigation, a hearing, and in absentia (so much for facing his accusers.)

Sounds more like "Unity Through Conformity" to me, and whose interests are the Board of Directors serving anyway?

To be fair though, I have to excuse the Board for its actions; because of constant turnover, most of the Board's members are new and don't have a clue as to what ASI is really about.

Needless to say, the $10,000.00 was wasted on Earth Day (an event that very few CSUSB students participated in) and there will be no major concert this year.

The latest fiasco by the Cooney Administration, however, is by far the best. With today's budget crunch, it's purely a luxury for an organization on this campus to be faced with the problem of deciding how to dispose of surplus funds. ASI had this problem to the tune of about $25,000.00. (Now keep in mind that the purpose of ASI is to serve the students, after all, we do own it.)

Decisions, decisions... we could have a major concert. I think the students of CSUSB would appreciate that, don't you? Or how about giving the Athletic Department some money so we could have our Water Polo team back? Or, let's give some money to the campus radio station, KSSB. Because they just went F.M., they could probably use a couple new C.D. players and two new turntables in the studio. This would cost less than $1,200.00. Or, we could give some money to The Chronicle. I bet they could use a little. Nah, these ideas would serve the needs of too many students.

Instead, Cooney and his administration decided to purchase six shiny, new computers for the future officers of ASI (they already have four) another waste of students money.

Don't get me wrong, I like computers. But how about donating them to the computer labs on campus so they can benefit all the students. Heaven Forbid! Can you imagine an ASI executive waiting with the masses in order to use the computer labs for homework? The reality of the matter is, there is no purpose for the six new computers in ASI, with the exception of officers doing their homework, of course.

So, let's get back to my original question. Whose needs is ASI serving, and whose interests will it be furthering next year?

What's your opinion?

Manny Barba

HILLIS MISSED

I am writing you this letter in response to the recent resignation of Vice-President Hillis.

I have been part of the Associated Student's Government for the past year and a half. In my capacity as a member of the judicial section of the corporation, I have had an opportunity to observe many of the happenings of the government from a unique perspective. In that time I have seen the triumphs and trials of those who are part of our little organization. We have undertaken a major revision of our Bylaws which I believe will facilitate the workings of the corporation. There has been controversy, though prudence dictates that I not comment in detail.

This past year, however, it has been my pleasure to get to know many fine people. One of them was Vice-President, Forrest Hillis. He served in his capacity as best he could. When he chaired the meetings of the Board of Directors in

MURPHY'S LAW

Other students don't care, why should I?

By Brian R. Murphy

California State University, San Bernardino's election time has come and gone.

Only problem, however, is that hardly anyone cares.

According to Keith Momon, Elections Chair for Associated Students, Incorporated, only six percent of the student body at CSUSB voted in this year's presidential elections.

That means only 668 of the 11,132 students enrolled here voted for the persons who control approximately $432,000 of the students' fees.

Ridiculous. Utterly ridiculous.

This is just an example of the apathy that runs rampant at this institution of higher learning.

Unfortunately, all that I am learning is that students here don't give a damn about how their money is spent or who is spending it.

Let me say that I do not have a problem with those persons who were elected, just with the students who made the choice not to vote.

I have also found some surprising figures from elections at the University of California, Riverside. According to Eric McDermott, Student Lobby Director, 29 percent of the 6,389 undergraduates voted in its elections last spring. UCR's elections for 1991-92 take place this week.

CSUSB has a larger pool of students to draw from, yet only 668 of them vote. Approximately 1,853 students at UCR do care about who their leaders are.

Does this mean that UCR is better school? Not necessarily, but unless the students here wake up and notice that 668 people are speaking for 11,132, I have very little respect for the student body.

Maybe I just don't care.

HOT. HOT. HOT!

Sitting in the oppressive heat, better suited for the South American rain forests, it is pretty unbelievable that we are seated in one of the illustrious computer rooms. Namely [room] PL039. The temperature in this room is supposed to be kept relatively cool because of the so-called "sensitive" equipment.

Obviously, there is little concern over the amount of money spent to repair these machines when memory is lost due to excessive heat. But, hey, if a few students pass out it's O.K., you're saving money on the electric bill.

Please, consider us students slaving away in this dungeon-like basement. If not to salvage the much-needed equipment, then at least to save us from the humiliation of passing out from the heat, in front of our peers. Turn down the HEAT, and turn on the AIR-CONDI-

RECALL?

I am writing you this letter to inform you (and the rest of the students at California State University, San Bernardino) that in Fall 1991, I am going to initiate a recall campaign against Michele Miller and the ASI officers left over from the Cooney administration.

These recently elected officers, who counted on the apathy of the student body, were elected by such an insignificant number of students they can hardly claim to have any kind of mandate for their position.

Having become aware of the scandalous activity that has taken place in ASI, only after the election, I am determined that the initiators of such behavior have no place in student government.

Could it be that there are career politicians in University politics? Alas, Horatio, I fear it be so. Except for the furthering of their own interests, there is no other reason for those recently elected to desire their positions.

If the "elected" feel that students would have voted if they really cared, I ask them to recall the farcical computerized voting where it took at the minimum fifteen minutes to vote. Fifteen minutes to a commuter is an eternity. To someone late for a job, it's their next raise. So don't belittle the commuters, they make up the majority of your constituency.

Who did vote for you? Your friends, and their friends, that's who. Oh, don't forget the extension students at the College of the Desert. Students who are removed from the daily machinations of this campus. How many of your votes were from them?

Well, they have no business deciding how the ASI should be run. More importantly, they have no business deciding how ASI money should be spent.

Recall elections are anomalies. Anomalies get attention. Attention sparks interest. Interest inspires close inspection. Close inspection will expose their true colors. Their true colors will inspire a new election.

See you in the Fall.

GREEK "ROW"

Why are there no fraternity or sorority houses on this campus? NOW is the time for this issue to be addressed.

People may say that the Greeks should be left to fend for themselves. Why should the student body be concerned with a group that is relatively small in size?

I've seen problems with Greek housing at other campuses. Problems that rise from the fact that Greeks are denied University property on which to establish their houses. Because of this, they're forced to seek housing in residential areas.

We all know that the behavior of University students contrasts with that of your typical homeowner. There are times when University students like to PARTY or have rituals and other events that don't go well in an area zoned R-1.

CSUSB's main campus is comprised of almost 450 acres and there is ample room for the trustees to set aside ten or twelve acres to be designated "Fraternity Row." With today's budget woes, selling (or leasing) this land to the Greeks' nationals for the development of such a "Row" would be fiscally sound.

In the long-run, this issue will need to be addressed. Let's deal with it NOW, before it's a problem. You only need to talk to the administrators at Cal State Fullerton or Long Beach State to realize they wish they would have done this when they had the chance.

We have the chance, the chance is NOW.

Coach Christie brings high hopes to CSUSB swimming program

By Audrey Vogel
Staff Writer

John Christie has been the head swimming and diving coach for California State University, San Bernardino since 1988.

He came to CSUSB after being an assistant coach for the University of Kansas City for three years. He has coached high school teams, but his true love for coaching is at the college level and the competitiveness it brings.

Christie received his masters in sports psychology and sports sociology from the University of Kansas City. He feels by obtaining his masters in these fields he has a better understanding of what his team's individual needs are.

The summer before coming to CSUSB, Christie went to Stanford University to help coach their swim team with head coach Richard Quick, who was the 1988 Olympic coach.

He has worked with some of the top names in swimming such as Pablo Morales and Janet Evans. He was in charge of 750 swimmers learning to be competitive at this level of Division

John Christie

I as their counselor for swimming.

CSUSB swim team is moving up to Division II in the 91-92 season and Christie sets the teams goals for all of the team members to go to Nationals rather than just a few. Though both swim teams competed unofficially at the Division II level earlier this year, the men's swim team is small, but is still managed to be ranked third overall in Division II, and the women's swim team is ranked fourth overall. Christie sees the team moving up the competitive ladder as the years follow. He hopes to make a name for CSUSB swimming and he has begun to do so. So far each year he has had a woman from the swim team place and earn All-American status at the Swimming Nationals.

Christie says, "I want to swim schools that will make us better, such as USC (University of Southern California)." The swim team is invited to swim against these teams. "The team leans to swim in a championship format", Christie says.

The team according to Christie is developing a nucleus and the team is getting excited for the next season. Christie loves being in California and being at CSUSB (Division III) can be frustrating sometimes to him but feels it will only make him a better coach.

Coyotes get ready for postseason action

By Richard Sjoroos
Sports Editor

The Cal State San Bernardino baseball team virtually locked up an NCAA Division III play-off birth, thanks in part to splitting a Sunday doubleheader with UC San Diego.

Cal State had a dismal performance in the opener, dropping a 10-4 decision, but rallied to gain a victory in the nightcap, 9-3.

In the first game, the Coyote pitching staff was touched for 15 hits, including three doubles. Meanwhile, the offense could only manage only six singles.

The second game saw the tables turn, as Cal State turned the bats loose, scoring nine runs in the first two innings, and preserved an excellent pitching performance by Rene Aguilar. Aguilar scattered eight hits while picking up the complete-game victory.

However, David Rex stole the spotlight, as he collected his 16th home run of the season, breaking the old record of 15, set by Rich Hanlin in 1989.

Miguel Salazar also homered for the host Coyotes.

In all, Cal State collected 10 hits, five for extra bases.

The split ended the Coyotes regular season at 24-11, the most victories and best winning percentage of any West Regional Team.

Cal State is expected to play Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference champion Redlands when the pairings are released. Redlands finished the season 21-20.

A site is to be determined, but Cal State hopes to be the host for the best 3-of-5 series at the UC Riverside Sports Center.

The winner of the series advances to the NCAA Division III World Series in Battle Creek, Mich., which begins May 23.

American Gladiator tryouts provide worthy challenge

By Richard Sjoroos
Sports Editor

Over 3,000 people lined the streets of Universal Studios, withstanding a lengthy wait and blistering heat to compete in the third annual "American Gladiator" tryouts.

The competition started at 8:00 a.m., and proved to be very fierce with only 75 making it to the final stage. Included in those select finalists was San Bernardino's very own Ann Cordero, the assistant women's softball coach. Cordero thrived at the competition, excelling in every event. Her closest call came in the running ladder, when she crossed the line with .002 seconds to spare.

On the national level, there were 10,000 competitors, with a mere 250 making it through the intense competition.

The first hurdle involved chin-ups. The men had to do 25 in 30 seconds while the females had to lift themselves eight times, respectively. This part of the competition knocked out 80% to 90% of the would-be contenders. While it meant an early exit for most, many still walked away with that look, "I gave it my best shot."

The second stage consisted of the 40-yard dash. Once again, the qualifying time was tough, with the males allowed 5.25 seconds to cross the finish line and the females 6.25 seconds.

The running ladder provided the next obstacle, and it meant the end for many of the competitors. The event consisted of running 10 yards, touch the line, return to the starting line, run 20 yards, touch, and return to the starting line, all in 15 seconds for males, and 17 for females.

For those who made it past the running ladder, the rope climb was the next challenge. The males had to climb 20 feet in ten seconds while the females had to scale ten feet in the same time span.

The final event was powerball. This version entailed each competitor spending 30 seconds on offense and 30 on defense. While on offense, the object was to try to get past the defender and put all three balls in the pod before the time expired. On defense, the competitor was to prove his strength and quickness by keeping the offense from reaching the pod.

For those who made it through all the events, it meant a chance to talk into the T.V. cameras and give a few words of warning to the Gladiators.

For those who didn't make it through the competition, it meant an opportunity to work on a tan while watching a few celebrities on hand (All-pro nose tackle Bob Golic of the Los Angeles Raiders, last years Gladiator champion Rico Constantino, and Gladiators Nitro and Gold).

The 1991-1992 contenders will be announced by the end of May. Anyone interested in obtaining complimentary tickets to watch a filming of "American Gladiators" can do so by calling (213)-473-7029.

Women's tennis is lead with a "K"

By Rich Kontra
Staff Writer

"K" is the first and last letter in women's tennis at California State University, San Bernardino.

Whether you're speaking of #2 singles player Katie Hibbard or #1 singles player Karen Brummitt, "K" stands for King.

Brummitt, a communication major at CSUSB, played two years at the University of Northern Colorado and finished in 1984. After her seven year layoff from tennis she return to form by becoming the #3 singles player at CSUSB. In the middle of the season she surpassed Hibbard and became the #1 player.

Hibbard, after receiving MVP honors two consecutive years at Mt.

Karen Brummitt

San Antonio College, came to CSUSB and concentrated on her consistency.

Hibbard, while the #1 singles player, admitted to feeling pressure as the top ranked Coyote.

Hibbard and Brummitt, while

fierce competitors on the singles circuit, have teamed as doubles partners and compiled a respective 10-5 record. Despite their dominating play as a doubles tandem, they were not invited to the National competition.

Coyote golfers get set for Nationals

By Audrey Vogel
Staff Writer

California State University, San Bernardino's golf team will be traveling to Lincoln, Nebraska, May 18, for the Division III Golfing Nationals. The Nationals will start May 21 and the team will play four cumulative rounds over a four day span.

Five team members will travel to nationals and four have been chosen: Scott Fisher, Greg Wilson, Charles Delorey, and Ryan Smith. The fifth place member of the team is still being battled out between the remaining seven of the CSUSB golf team.

The Cal State squad is ranked second in Division III and will be moving up to Division II next season.

They head into the national competition with a 6-0 record in Division III contests, and a recent sixth place finish at the University of Nevada (Reno) Spring Golf Invitational held at Wildcreek Golf Course in Reno.

Head coach Fred Hanover offers his experience of playing professional golf for the past five years to the team. He hopes his experience allows the team to improve and as Hanover says, "to win" at nationals.

Men's Baseball

The Coyotes improved to 22-8, and improved their chances of earning a second-consecutive playoff berth, thanks to wins over Occidental College (5-3) and Southern California College (8-6).

Junior first baseman David Rex led the offensive attack against Occidental, going 2-for-5 with 3 RBI, including his record tying 15th home run of the season.

Junior lefty Sean Tucker allowed seven hits enroute to a complete-game victory. Tucker struck seven while upping his record to 4-1.

Junior centerfielder Steve Stanfield and senior second baseman Todd Giardina shared the role of hero, as the Coyotes broke a 6-6 tie in the fourth inning and never looked back.

Stanfield walked, stole second, and scored on a single by Giardina.

Freshman Robert Mendoza upped his record to 2-1 with 1 1/3 innings of relief.

Women's Softball

San Bernardino (21-20) suffered its worst beating of the year in game one versus U.C. Riverside last week, taking an 18-1 pounding. The Coyotes also lost the nightcap, dropping a 5-2 decision to the Highlanders. The losses gave UCR a four game sweep over CSUSB this season. The Coyotes rebounded with a doubleheader sweep over U.C. San Diego, 1-0 (10 innings) and 9-6.

Senior Marnie LaFleur upped her record to 11-10 in the opener. LaFleur allowed only two hits into the eighth inning.

Sandy Sturlaugson scored the winning run in the tenth inning on a sacrifice fly by Sherri Williams.

Tanna Cash won game #2 against the Tritons, and also provided some pop and the plate, collecting two doubles and a pair of RBI.

Golf

The Coyote golfers finished sixth last weekend at the University of Nevada (Reno) Spring Golf Invitational held at Wildcreek Golf Course in Reno.

Ryan Smith was Cal State's top finisher tied for 8th place with a three-round total of 225 for the par 71 course. Scott Fisher was the Coyotes' next placer (tie 17th) with a 228 total.
