Democratic Registration Drive nearing goal of 15,000

The Democratic goal to register 15,000 additional voters prior to October 5, deadline is closer, according to Joe Baca, candidate for the 62nd Assembly District and coordinator for the voter registration drive in the 62nd Assembly District.

"We have registered 12,080 voters to date and our people are working very hard to achieve our goal," he stated during a telephone interview.

According to recent surveys throughout the state, Democratic registration has surpassed the Republican's drive for crucial votes, and not surpris-ingly, in traditional Republican areas. As President Bush's popularity plunges in the polls, new voters have reregistered and a large number of Republican voters have switched party registration, which was reflected in the surveys.

As the economy continues to falter, the unemployment figures continue to rise. The San Bernardino County's current unemployment figures are 8.9% and Riverside County is 11.2% according to the San Bernardino Employment Development Department.

Mr. Baca stated, "Our people will continue to register all citizens until the deadline date. I feel I have a responsibility to the Democratic Party to garner the vote strength necessary to win. This is a very crucial election for our nation. I urge every responsible citizen to register."

At a recent Mexican Independence Day rally in Baldwin Park, Bill Clinton continued to stress for the creation of jobs and greater emphasis on educational opportunities. He addressed approximately 3,000 persons at the gathering which was a strategy to get the Latino vote. Gloria Molina, Los Angeles 1st District Supervisor, who introduced Bill Clinton, stated that the Latino vote provided the winning margin for Ann Richards in the Texas governor race and the Latino vote would be the winning margin for the presidential candidate.

Mr. Baca is given the credit by Bobbi Johnson, Congressman George Brown's campaign manager, for the increase in voter registration. "We are having a registration drive in the Rancho Cucamonga area, and every registered voter is vital to the election," she stated.

Personal Envy Blocks Hispanic Solidarity

By Ruben Navarette Jr.  Hispanic Student USA

The savaging of one by another over individual differences is learned behavior. A friend recalls, with pain in her voice, a certain afternoon, almost 20 summers ago, in a small town in Arizona. Her mother had gone to great expense to buy her a pretty dress for school. When she arrived, she was teased by a group of Mexican children who insulted her attire for being too primp, too proper. "Aw, look at her pretty dress. She must think she's Anglo or something." My friend ran home with tears dripping down her face and onto her blue dress.

As the nation's fastest growing minority group, Mexican-Americans continue to fall behind other ethnic groups economically and politically. Part of the reason may be how they relate to one another personally.

On college campuses, among shelves of Shakespeare and vaulted dining halls, we train our intra-racial assassins. There privileged young Latinos, afraid of being found out as ethnic frauds, sharpen their skills at destroying one another, fueled by hatred and competition and intolerance of personal differences.

A friend remembering seeing an ambitious Mexican-American law student sternly scolded by Chicano classmates. She had announced her intention of pursuing a career in corporate law. Since the Latino Left contingent at the law school had decided that the ethnically correct career path led not to corporate America but to public service in groups like the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, they took it upon themselves to harass the young woman for her error.

And, they are professionals, grown-ups who should know better. A Latino attorney in Beverly Hills, Calif., tells the tale of being an ethnic outcast since he practiced law from what the Latino left considers the wrong side. As a federal prosecutor sending Mexican-Americans to jail, he was unpopular with old buddies.

And Latinos know well the concept of selling out, reserving for it in our collective hearts a special place. A dark moody place. The Latino left considers a sell-out someone who succeeds at the expense of their own cultural integrity. In Spanish, the word for such a person is an insult of particularly vicious bite. We say it with scorn: vendido.

There are more euphemisms. UnTio Taco, a variation of the character of Uncle Tom in Harriet Beecher Stowe's classic: Una Mosca En Leche, referring to a (brown) fly in (white) milk, trying to blend in. A coconut-flavored brown on the outside-where it is seen—white on the inside-where it counts.

A Latino administrator at the University of California, Los Angeles, relies too much on the notion of a group of Chicano undergraduates to a conservative Latino in the Reagan administration. Someone was incensed enough by her remarks to break into her car and deflate on the front seat.

Harsh personal attacks between Mexican-Americans are old and tired remnants of an earlier, darker age. We accuse those fellow Chicanos with whom we disagree on political issues of somehow betraying us on a personal level.

Harsh personal attacks between Mexican-Americans are old and tired remnants of an earlier, darker age. We accuse those fellow Chicanos with whom we disagree on political issues of somehow betraying us on a personal level.

There is yet another obstacle for Latinos to overcome before they may claim that elusive entity called unity. We direct it not at those who have "sold out," but rather at those with whom we would like to trade places. Those of whom we are jealous.. vendida.

In English, the term means "envious," the green-eyed desire to have what another had. With Mexican-Americans, the term assumes a special significance. It is an emotion directed at those who are considered too close to positions of wealth, prestige, influence or power. It is there in the heart of the teen-age girl who resents her girlfriend for being more popular. It is there in the minds of Chicano students at Stanford who wish each other well in securing that summer internship, while hoping their's will be the juiciest plum of all. And it is there, among family (entre familia) who accuse the Harvard man in their ranks of thinking himself "better than the rest of us," and who themselves know better.

Perhaps it is there any time that a member of a disliked community strives to crawl out of the bucket and is rewarded for the effort with snide remarks from those left behind. Too intelligent. Too ambitious. Too good for the lives that others live.

Strange, the one individual whom I have seen generate the greatest amounts of envy has enjoyed the most support from others. In the 1980s, Henry Cisneros, the former mayor of San Antonio, Texas, became the most prominent of Latino political figures.

During a chat with a Chicano Studies professor from the University of California, Berkeley, I cited Cisneros as my choice speaker for a Harvard forum. He made a snide remark about what was then the mayor's admission of racist misdirection—most recently, at the opening of the Republican Convention, there was another such remark following a Cisneros pledge to rally Latino support for Bill Clinton—and it was traced to U.S. Treasurer Catalina Vasquez Villalpando. To appease her party's thirst for infidelity blood, this Latina on the Bush administration offered up the head of one of her own.

In my lifetime, I may see a Latino mayor of Los Angeles or governor of California. What I have not seen, perhaps will not see, are Latino professionals holding raised hands in unity. "You be the candidate this time, I'll go next." Ethnic solidarity, a successful economic and political tool for American Jews and other ethnic groups eludes Latinos.

I had hoped my generation could stop playing these hurtful games and, finally, respect each other's personal and ideological differences. For 50 years, the Old Guard has attributed the stagnation of the Latino population to external forces like racism and discrimination. Yet, there are internal forces at work as well.

For Latinos, there has been little cooperation or camaraderie. And so little progress. Petty competition, personal intolerance and a refusal to let any of our own progress ahead of us make it unlikely that the children of the sun, however numerous, will ever inherit the earth.
Raul Miramontes

Casa De San Bernardino's Board of Directors announced the appointment of Mr. Raul Miramontes as Executive Director of its drug outpatient clinic center.

Casa De San Bernardino, the 20-year-old center, was recently cut in funds as a result of alleged inconsistencies in client treatment and record keeping, in addition to other internal administrative problems, according to San Bernardino County's Office of Alcohol and Drug Programs.

Recommendations submitted by SBCOADP have been implemented by Casa's Board of Directors, including the appointment of a new director.

Mr. Miramontes has had extensive administrative experience in drug and alcohol management programs. He has been director of several alcohol and drug rehabilitation centers in Los Angeles, Orange and Riverside Counties.

A first generation Mexican-American, Mr. Miramontes was raised in the Merced area in a family of six boys and four girls. Graduating from Merced High School in 1969, he joined the Marine Corps, serving in the Vietnam War and discharged in 1973.

While recuperating at a veterans administration hospital, he observed a total distrust Vietnam veterans had toward the overall government system. Additionally, many of the veterans had acute drug and alcohol problems which hampered medical treatment and more importantly, were unable to be fully rehabilitated.

"I decided, there and then, to enter into the career of drug and alcohol rehabilitation," he said in an interview. He received his A.A. from Fresno City College and is presently completing his B.A. from University of California, Riverside, both in Psychology. Continuing his education, Mr. Miramontes has received additional college-level training, being certified as alcoholism counselor, advanced alcohol and drug studies, alcohol management program, alcohol recovery and peace officer orientation and firearm training.

"After a week of orientation, I developed a plan of action at Casa to alleviate the various circumstances which confronted our agency. I am happy to report that as a result of implementation of the plan, SBCOADP has re-evaluated our agency and the probationary period has ended."

"Working with the board of directors and emphasis on client management, counselor training and establishment of new policies and procedures, I am confident that Casa De San Bernardino is now well qualified for outpatient drug services.

"We have restricted our program to serve the need of our client by extending the hours of operation into the evening. Additionally, our bilingual counselors can adequately service the Hispanic community in our area."

150 Yr. Celebration of Agua Mansa

The 150th Anniversary of the New Mexican Settlement of Agua Mansa and the Centennial of the "new" San Salvador Parish will be the subjects of a free lecture at 7:00 P.M. Thursday, October 1, in the Christian R. Harris Memorial Hall behind San Bernardino's Heritage House, located at Eighth and "D" Street in San Bernardino.

The speaker will be Dr. R. Bruce Harley, archivist for the Catholic Diocese of San Bernardino. Dr. Harley has written numerous articles pertaining to the history of the Catholic Church in the San Bernardino Valley.

For more information call Nick Cataldo of the San Bernardino Historical and Pioneer Society at (714) 887-0567.

Diocesan statement clarifies stand on political voter recommendations

In a statement issued today relating to Father Marx's article in St. Francis de Sales, Riverside bulletin, Bishop Straling stated:

The weekend of August 16th, the 20th Sunday of Ordinary Time, an article appeared in the St. Francis de Sales, Riverside, parish bulletin concerning a Catholic incurring a mortal sin through voting for a particular political candidate. In doing so, the article completely misrepresented the position of the Catholic community in relation to electoral politics within the United States.

"We bishops specifically do not seek the formation of a religious voting bloc; nor do we wish to instruct persons on how they should vote by endorsing or opposing candidates."

in the Inland Empire. Its members have developed and implemented outstanding community projects, aided other organizations and individuals, financially or through volunteering efforts. These activities have successfully impacted numerous individuals and organizations throughout the area.

The Kiwanis Club was founded by Allen Browne on January 21, 1915 in Detroit, Michigan, with the Detroit Club #1 receiving the first charter from the state. The Club’s goal was, and continues to be, serve the community and its motto is “We Build.”

Since that time, numerous national and international Kiwanis Clubs have been organized, and is currently known worldwide as the Kiwanis Club International. In 1987, the Kiwanis Club International voted to admit women into their clubs’ membership.

On January 15, 1990, this worldwide community service group celebrated its 75th anniversary.

Although the Kiwanis Clubs are international in scope, each local club forms its own special sense of identity and uniqueness. Kiwanians weave a common thread of purpose which binds them with dedication of service to their community and country which creates a fabric of unity and achievement.

Dr. Tom Rivera, in a recent interview stated that Dr. Ernest Garcia, then Lt. Governor for District 36, and Emmett Bradshaw were instrumental in developing the concept of organizing a Kiwanis Club in the Westside of San Bernardino to more fully provide opportunities for Latinos.

The KCGB installed its officers at Mitla’s Restaurant in December, 1967 with Al Merino, president, Frank Alvarez, vice president, Ben Garza, secretary and Tom Cabrera as treasurer.

Dr. Rivera is the only remaining charter member of KCGB.

In February, 1974, KCGB was incorporated by the California State Department with the following directors: Phil Preciado, Bob Bauerfeld, Frank Gutierrez, Gilbert Lara, Manuel Madrid, E. M. Student and Hiram Diaz.

Mr. Diaz is an active member of the club and has maintained a perfect attendance record, which has accorded him a special chair at the club’s weekly meetings. In addition, Mr. Diaz is a member of a select circle of blood donors with membership in the “Fifteen Gallon Club.” He is presently involved with A1 Merino, president, Frank Gutierrez, Gilbert Lara, Manuel Madrid, E. M. Student and Hiram Diaz.

The San Bernardino Sister City Committee asked the KCGSB for assistance in alleviating serious health conditions in the city of Mexicali. Ray Quinto was appointed to coordinate with the mayor of Mexicali and after a series of meetings, the decision was made to establish a blood bank in that city. Working with the San Bernardino/Riverside Blood Bank and United States Naval Reserve Detachment 719, Mr. Quinto was a Naval Reserve Commander, the necessary equipment was obtained, transported to Mexicali, and installed.

In addition, local medical personnel trained Mexicali citizens in blood bank operations, CPR and ambulance service training.

For successfully completing this project, Mr. Quinto was awarded the United States Congressional Excalibur Award! Another member, Dr. Benito Navas, a dentist, working with Mr. Quinto, was instrumental in the establishment of a dental project which provided services to children at an orphanage in Mexicali. During 1985, 51 orphans were examined, resulting in 104 fillings and 33 extractions.

The KCGSB received the prestigious Kiwanis "District Single Service Award" for the Mexicali dental project. One of the outstanding Kiwanis projects is the brainchild of Dr. Tom Rivera of Cal-State, San Bernardino. Dr. Rivera implemented the Inland Empire Future Leaders Project in 1985, utilizing a model established in Oxnard. The project is a multi-faceted program targeted toward eighth and ninth grade students.

The goals of the IEFLA is to encourage students to (1) stay in school, (2) strive for academic excellence, (3) become involved in school, church and community activities, (4) take college prep courses and (5) enroll in college.

The students spent a week in a mountain retreat where instructors conducted workshops focusing on leadership roles, public speaking, career goal setting, motivation, parliamentary procedures, speech writing and mock trials.

Over 1,000 students have past through the program and approximately 87 percent of those students have enrolled into higher collegiate education. The KCGSB Inland Empire Future Leaders Program was awarded the Kiwanis "District Single Service Award." Dr. Rivera was awarded the "Max Trayer Spiritual Aims Award" in 1989.

UCR PRESENTS "500 Years - Past and Future" Quintennial Symposium

RIVERSE - A one-day symposium examining the meaning and significance of the Quintennial for America's diverse population, will be held from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 8, at the University of California, Riverside in the Commons Terrace.

Sponsored by the UCR Ethnic Studies Department with support from numerous community organizations and businesses, the symposium is titled, "500 Years-Past and Future: We Cannot Change the Past, But We can Determine the Future." The public is invited.

"The Quintennial, the 500th anniversary of Columbus' arrival in the Americas, provides a unique opportunity for a meaningful look at what American society is, has been, and can become, from the perspectives of different cultures," said Clifford Trafzer, chair of the UCR Department of Ethnic Studies.

The UCR event has been organized to promote a greater understanding of the many positive contributions that America's diverse ethnic groups have made toward the formation of American society, said Armando Navarro, assistant professor of ethnic studies and a coordinator of the symposium.

"The main objective is to promote the virtues of cultural diversity," said Navarro. "The gathering emphasizes the importance of creating a process that will lead to greater respect and cooperation between differing peoples and build a working relationship with each other."

Activities will feature addresses by Carlos Cortes, noted historian and authority on human and ethnic relations from UCR, and Alan Heslop, of the Rose Institute of State and Local Government, followed by three panel sessions with representatives from different ethnic backgrounds.

The morning panel session will be devoted to "The Quintennial: 500 Years of What?" The afternoon sessions will be concerned with "America in the Present: The Challenges of Cultural Diversity," and "The Next 500 Years: What Lies Ahead?"

A special panel of university students will also provide a unique perspective.

For reservations and more information, contact Maria Anna Gonzales, at (714) 888-6207, or the UCR Ethnic Studies Department at (714) 784-4577.

Sivaland Child Development Center Begins Fontana Super Services Center

Fontana, California - Sivaland Child Development Center has begun serving families who live/and or work in the Fontana area with the largest center in California. Sivaland Child Development Center (SCDC) employs a "five centers in one" concept combining Infant (6 weeks - 2 years), Toddler (2-3 years), Preschool (3-5 years), School Age Before and After School and Year Round Intersession (5-12 years), and Mildly I 11 (all ages) child care program.

The center located at 10022 Palermo Avenue, Fontana can accommodate 364 children in a program that is tailored made to meet the individual needs and abilities of the child and family. Included in the five centers are Special Needs Inclusions, Private Kindergarten, Baby and Me, Parents and Tots, and Second Shift, Saturday, Drop In Programs.

"By providing a high quality environment, an impressive staff, and services to benefit a significant number of children, Sivaland will have a very positive impact on the child care needs of the Inland areas," said San Bernardino City School Board President, Handy Brown.

Recently, SCDC exceeds state requirements for licensing child care centers in such areas as: health and safety, emergency preparedness, staff ratios and requirements, space requirements and group size.

"Our primary goal at SCDC is to provide comprehensive, high quality child development programs and related family activities that benefit the child, the family, our employees and the community," said Merrell Schexnydre, President of SIVA Consulting Management Group, the founding organization "and we truly believe that SCDC will be a very, very special place for children to grow."

The Sivaland Child Development Center located adjacent to the Kaiser Permanente Facility is open Monday through Friday, 6:00 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Waiting lists for the second shift and Saturday services are available. As part of their services SCDC offers the first Mildly I 11 Child Care Program in San Bernardino and Riverside County. This program office, operates as an alternative when children are too ill to remain in school. After being seen by a physician and being treated, children can recuperate with loving, trained professionals in a warm and safe atmosphere.

For more information please call: Becky Thams, Director, Sivaland Child Development Center, (714) 734-4713.

Wednesday, September 23, 1992
Los Angeles - At a recent press conference, four Latino business groups representing over 5,000 members locally, nationally, and throughout California formally announced their continued support for the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Their announcement comes on the heels of the U.S., Mexico and Canada completing negotiation of the agreement.

Coming together to show their unified endorsement of NAFTA, spokespersons for the California Hispanic Coalition for the North American Free Trade Agreement, the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the California Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Latin Business Association, noted that it is time to create one of the world's largest free trade zones. They also stated that without such an agreement, the United States will continue to lose competitively in the global marketplace.

"We understand that with every business opportunity there are issues to address, however, we believe that NAFTA will create competitive advantages for Hispanic and non-Hispanic business owners," commented Skip Solorzano, executive vice-president of the California Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "This legislation will make all pipelines safer," Brown said. "I am pleased that these safety recommendations have been incorporated into this bill."

Brown is Chairperson of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee. He is a senior member of the Agriculture Committee.

The House passed a bill to improve the safety of pipelines used to transport natural gas and hazardous liquids. The legislation includes safety recommendations developed by the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), in consultation with Congressman George E. Brown Jr., (D-San Bernardino, Ontario, Riverside) following the derailment of a Southern Pacific Freight Train and pipeline explosion on Duffy Street in San Bernardino. Six people died in that accident in May of 1989.

"This bill will prevent tragic accidents like Duffy Street from happening again," Brown said. "These important safety measures, recommended by the NTSB, will be implemented nationwide."

After the Duffy Street explosion, Brown worked with two House committees that have jurisdiction over pipelines to ensure full up on the NTSB's report. "This legislation will make all pipelines that carry natural gas and hazardous liquids safer," Brown said. "I am pleased that these safety recommendations have been incorporated into this bill."

Brown is Chairman of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee. He is a senior member of the Agriculture Committee. The second annual small business conference presented by Chaffey College Center for Economic Development will be held Friday, October 30, 1992, from 7:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. at the Ontario Airport Hilton. "Focus '93: Small Business Conference and Expo" will feature up-to-date demographic and marketing information from the recently completed economic advancement survey of the seven West End cities. Co-sponsors are the U.S. Small Business Administration and the Inland Valley Daily Bulletin. Chambers of Commerce lending support include: Chino, Montclair, Fontana, Ontario, Rancho Cucamonga and Upland.

This is a unique conference that provides training and information to area businesses and also offers exhibit booths that feature services which cater to small businesses. Workshop topics that will be discussed include: Marketing Options; Finance Planning; Advanced Marketing; Sales; Procurement; Generating More and Better Referrals; How to Hire and Interview; Managing and Collecting Your Receivables; Computer and Your Business; Customer Retention; Export; How To Get Financing; Demographics; and Tax Planning/Investment. A special track for startup businesses is planned.

One of the primary goals of Chaffey's Center for Economic Development is to help promote growth for small businesses through coordination and facilitation of training activities within the Chaffey College District's boundaries.
