Coyote Faculty Reachout to Students

By John J. Eddy
Executive Editor

With the bargaining impasse behind them, the Cal. State Faculty eagerly await the published results of the fact-finding committee, which will determine the next course in the dispute between them and the CSU administration. Administration officials differ in their view of the results.

"I believe the 'fact-finding' process will be successful in identifying an acceptable solution to the apparent impasse, and therefore I do not anticipate a strike," said Cal. State San Bernardino President Albert Karnig.

Both CFA and the CSU administration will have to wait and see. The fact-finding committee finished deliberations on Feb. 15, leaving John Caraway, the neutral third party representative, to write the report. After it is finished, the report remains confidential for a ten-day period, at which time it becomes public and the current faculty contract with the CSU system expires, giving the faculty the legal right to strike if a successor agreement is not reached.

The CFA disputes the CSU administration's position on several issues. They argue that the CSU intentionally hires part-time faculty to avoid paying tenure-track teaching positions; that the administration diverts allocated funds from faculty compensation pools back into the administrator's pockets and into a new computer system; that the CSU refuses to give job security to temporary lecturers; that they favor administrators with a raise and improved benefits while rejecting basic health insurance to nearly half the faculty; that they refuse to release money that is budgeted for Service Step Increases to give junior faculty step pay raises; and that the CSU increased the size of classrooms and workload for faculty, which is detrimental to both faculty and student alike. Resolutions to these disputes could be a part of Caraway's report, but only time will tell.

In the meantime, the faculty at Cal. State San Bernardino stepped up their actions by hosting information tables and passing out flyers to students during class breaks. Cal. State San Bernardino administration called for caution.

"Unless students have the time and information necessary to think independently and critically, I don't believe they should be involved. Otherwise, they're apt to be pawns of one side or the other," said Karnig when asked why students should support the CSU's position.

But if students remain stuck in the middle of the debacle, they will have no choice but to respond to one side or the other. While the administration here feels that the issues are best left to the two parties in dispute, Cal. State faculty, staff and students disagree.

"I hope students would take a look at some of the materials and ask themselves if the university they want their younger brothers and sisters to go to is the one that is being created (by the CSU administrators). The biggest thing for students to look at is the increase of temporary faculty who don't have any job security, health insurance or retirement benefits and who sometimes have to teach on three campuses to make a living," said CFA President and CSUSB English Professor Susan Meisenhelder.

"CFA is doing the right thing. We

Library Budget Gets Cut

By Shareena C. Clark
Asst. News Editor

Inflation plus hidden costs are causing the Pfau Library to cut $40,000 from their annual budget. The crafty crew has decided to systematically cut printed periodicals that are duplicated online. Several reasons were given to back this decision. "1: students, faculty, and staff can use Electronics more. We look at the 'hit' rate, which is increasing every year." 2: The printed collection is not increasing at the same rate as the online versions. 3: We have to check in, claim, and bind print journals. If they are lost, we have to replace them. Shelving costs too," explained Michael Burgess, Pfau Library Head.

In every decision there are pros and cons. Although students will not be able to walk into the library and simply photocopy their assignment and go about their business, they will be able to search for the periodicals online and download them on their computers or disks. They can also cut and paste significant quotes straight into their papers, which makes research a little easier. With the electronic database there is no limit on who may use the journals and periodicals, as opposed to waiting for another classmate to finish with the printed versions.

Many of the electronic costs are subsidized by the Chancellor's office. Cutting from the printed journals was necessary to avoid cutting from books. "We're not cutting info, only duplicate titles. Given the fiscal relatives, limited campus funds, and recession we may have to cut across the board. No one knows how deep the cuts may be. I don't particularly want to do it, but we have to because of inflation. The bigger the print section grows, the more we have to cut things. We are trying to make as little an impact on students as possible," said Michael Burgess.

For students who are having technical difficulties, AACM and library staff are available for assistance. They are free to help the students who need help accessing the materials online, but that percentage is steadily declining.

"I'm an old soul who likes to curl up with a book, a real book, in the hour or so before I go to sleep each night. That hasn't kept me from utilizing the numerous resources here in my own research," explained Burgess.

Student Brings Story of Missing Girl to Campus

By Jesse Henderson
Staff Writer

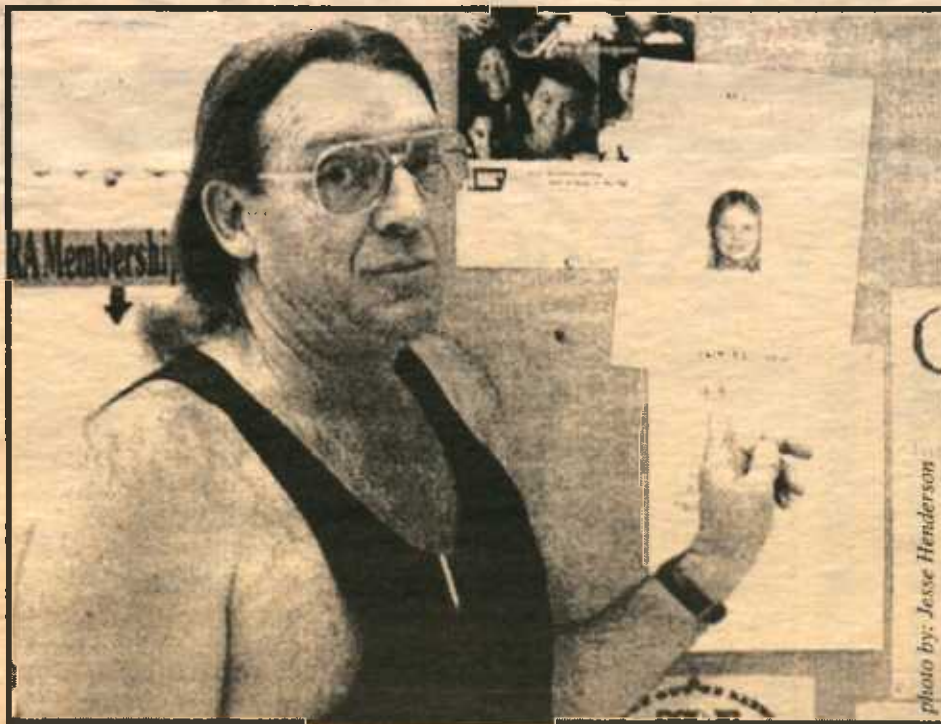

Senior Steven Craig Wilson, or just Wilson, first heard about the missing girl, 7-year old Danielle Van Dam, from San Diego, when reading the newspaper. He felt he could give the time to help find the missing girl.

Wilson, 49, is a transfer student from RCC. He hails from the Salinas Valley where people started calling him "Wilson" because there were too many Steves.

Wilson says there are two reasons why he joined the effort to find Danielle.

One, he has a beautiful granddaughter just shy of two years old. Which means, he thinks if the same horror should visit his family, that a faceless, nameless stranger would step forth and help in any capacity.

Two, he states, "I am an American. I know that sounds trite, but in recent months I have seen, as have we all, this country taking a terrible blow. And I have heard, in media and in the classroom, Americans described as arrogant ethno-centrists whose intent it is to push our lifestyle upon the rest of the world whether they want it or not; and that may be true as far as some people's experiences go. Well, I have lived and worked in five different states and traveled in 30 more and it has been my personal experience that most Americans are giving, compassionate people.

Americans are giving, compassionate people. -Steve Wilson

What I have seen are Americans from all walks of life doing their best; and Americans putting aside their personal time to help others in need has been for me the norm rather than the exception. I believe the fabric of American society is far more kind and gentle than is portrayed in the press and preached from the academic pulpit. Get in your car and drive across this land and see if you don't get a much different picture of who and what we are than what you are told."

Wilson was designated as Team Leader of Search Team #58, which was comprised of himself and four other people. First, each team volunteer must sign a Volunteer Registration Agreement; this form gathers personal information and sets the ground rules for involvement in the search.

Each team member is issued an orange numbered vest; Wilson was 12, with a stick-on nametag for identification purposes, and orange strips of fluorescent plastic to mark any item or area for further investigation.

Each member is also offered a walking stick, which is useful for hiking the rugged, uphill terrain and for moving bushes and other possible areas of concealment.

Before a team heads out to search they must be briefed. Wilson regarded the briefing as "undoubtedly, the most difficult aspect of the experience." At the briefing is where Wilson became aware that he wasn't on a live person search, "one is informed that smell can be important as sight; that's the one that brings it home to you. Dead bodies stink."

The brief gave instructions on how to conduct the search. Volunteers are instructed how to handle any possible evidence so as not to weaken the court proceeding, what areas are common to child abduction cases, and they are encouraged to keep an eye out for one another so as not to lose anybody.

Wilson's team searched for four and half an hour in the La Miramar area. He described the terrain and vegetation as bush steep and rocky, and as being rugged as the Coast Ranges he had trampled through in his home area.

After the search, there was a debriefing, where Wilson had to explain the areas searched including ditches, drainage pipes, trash receptacles and permanent portable bathrooms. Wilson was home foot-sore, sweaty, scratched and with two ticks that he didn't find until after his hour and half drive back to Corona.

Danielle has been missing since the morning of February 2, 2002. Wilson is one of 2,000 people who have already volunteered. The Danielle Missing web site has already received 500,000 hits. On the web site the family asks, "The family asks everyone get out and look around their space and their yards. Look around your neighborhood. Look wherever you can. No matter what part of the country you live in, a trillion eyes are better than 2!"

Van Dam Family is offering a $25,000 reward for information leading to the return of Danielle.

To add to the family statement Wilson asserts, "The amount of time solved by some person who happened to remember seeing a missing persons poster or a news photo in a newspaper are many. I believe anyone may be the person who provides the last bit of information. If it was your child, your sister, cousin, or friend - would you want all eyes open?"

AIDS: The New 'Black Death' for Minorities

By Mathew Taylor
News Editor

In this all to modern world where many diseases have been cured, there is still a hidden threat that most people don't worry about any more.

The Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or AIDS, epidemic has seemed to almost vanish into thin air. Maybe it's because of a general awareness or maybe it's because people have been blind to its existence, thinking it would never happen to them. AIDS is a disease that began to rear its ugly head at the end of the seventies and beginning of the eighties, when most people were still practicing free love and the only worry was pregnancy which could quickly be solved by abortion. Then there was an outbreak of a new cancer, a disease that seemed to only affect gay men. It was GRID, the Gay Related Immune Deficiency, and the heterosexual communities didn't worry because they weren't engaging in homosexual behavior and therefore wouldn't be infected. That idea was not a reality because soon many straight people began to get infected; many people who were leading productive heterosexual lives were becoming a part of the epidemic.

AIDS at that time seemed to be a result of two ways of infection, through gay sex or through blood transfusions. Therefore, AIDS was the disease that was meant for eliminating the gays. To the people who were assumed to have contracted it through blood transfusions, well, they were excused because it wasn't their fault.

AIDS is a disease that doesn't discriminate against anyone or anything, so its major infected groups began to change from gay men to women, young women between the ages of 18 and 24. The focus was still on gay men, but the awareness grew some because of the infected women. As the eighties continued, the public eye began to see many actors come out and expose the fact that they were infected. One of the first to come out and expose his infection was Rock Hudson, the epitome of male sexuality. Hudson not only came out about his infection but also about his homosexuality. It was a shock to the world and even a wakeup call.

Television began to focus its energies into awareness. In 1992, the rap group Salt-N-Pepa did a video "Let's talk about AIDS" which was about self-protection and safe sex. This video signified that even younger groups of people were taking heed of the dangers of this disease that many feared could have been contracted from a kiss. From Public Service announcements like "Let's talk..." and others, the information about the disease and its contraction were out in the public and the general level of fear about AIDS decreased.

So now fast forward to the present. After about 15 years of opposition, Senator Jesse Helms has changed his views about AIDS and its victims. Helms, at a press conference, stated "I am so ashamed that I've done so little," in regards to the epidemic. He has changed his view on this subject, especially now when it seems to be affecting minority communities at an all time high. Helms, although his term is coming to an end, may be the trailblazer and other older Republican Senators may follow him.

According to the Human Rights Campaign, the epidemic of AIDS, which seemed to go away, is back and attacking the minority communities. The epidemic is so great that in the United States alone there are 200,000 to 400,000 people that are unaware of their infection and about 40,000 infected each year.

Last year alone, there was an increase of about 8 percent in new cases and this is having a major impact on communities of color. Also, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention over 50 percent of the new infections occur in African Americans, and Hispanics make up 19 percent of the newly infected.

Worldwide, about 25 million people have died from AIDS since its beginning, and five million of that figure were children. Its predicted that in the future there will be more people to die of AIDS than any war of the 20th century.

With this projection of AIDS and its effects CSUSB will be having two events on campus February 26th Guest Lecturer Cleye Jones will be on campus in Events Center B and C at 6pm. Jones is world renowned for being the founder of the AIDS quilt, and on February 27th there will be a one day conference held in the Events Center that will focus on AIDS in the Latino and African American communities.

"Worldwide about 25 million people have died from AIDS... and five million of that were children."

Takes Tough Anti-Terrorism Stand in State Assembly Bid

He was also an advisor to former California Governor Pete Wilson. Monville currently sits on the Alumni Board and Athletic Association of CSUSB.

As a result of Monville's experience and his tough-stand on terrorism, a host of big-name Republican leaders have lined up behind his State Assembly bid, including Pete Wilson, Congressman Ken Calvert, Riverside County Sheriff Larry Smith and local police and firefighting associations.

Monville's trump card in the March 5th primary elections is that his newly created 64th Assembly District, which stretches from the City of Riverside to Palm Desert, is more than 50% Republican. Therefore, if he wins the Republican primary in two weeks, he's a sure bet to become the Assembly District's first-ever Assemblyman.

The Answer to Traffic Woes

By Peter Tsai
Staff Writer

Question: which area of this country has the fastest growing traffic congestion problems? Answer: San Bernardino/Riverside, according to a recent national study. In fact, the Inland Empire may soon overtake San Diego on the list of most traffic-plagued regions. That is why on March 5th, thousands of San Bernardino county residents are set to vote Yes on California State Proposition 42.

Prop 42, authored by a California State Assemblyman, requires that the gasoline tax that Californians pay every time we fill up our tanks be spent solely on improving our highways and roads, mass transit systems and transportation safety without increasing or adding any new taxes. For a number of reasons, California needs to pass this initiative

now. According to reports by the U.S. Department of Transportation and The Federal Highway Administration, California has the most deteriorated roads in the nation. Moreover, traffic congestion costs Californians a whopping 7.8 million per day in lost time and excess fuel consumption. The average driver here spends the equivalent of two weeks of work stuck in traffic. In addition, traffic delays have doubled since 1992 and will double again by 2020.

If Prop 42 is passed, however, Californians can expect to see improvements in capacity of our highways, public transportation and safety as soon as next year. San Bernardino County in particular is stated for many of these improvements, just to a name a few—the widening of Interstate 10 from Yucaipa to Ford, a carpool lane from Milliken Ave. to the Riverside County Line, upgrades in many freeway interchanges and double-track Metro Link Commuter rail service to San Bernardino, along with new passenger railcars and locomotives.

The benefits of Prop 42 are so numerous, in fact, that a broad-based coalition of interest groups is lined up solidly behind it. Fire, Police and Public Safety officials have joined taxpayer and business organizations, labor unions, city and county governments, parents, seniors and mass transit riders to back this ballot measure which California Governor Gray Davis regards Prop 42 as a boon for the state.

Clearly Prop 42 is a win-win situation for California voters. With increased funding for transportation, this state can successfully overcome the threat of traffic gridlock, rebuild our road-and transit-system in structure, improve safety and save millions of dollars and lost hours for taxpayers, motorists and business statewide.

Does Your Vote Count?

By Rody Rodriguez
Staff Writer

Proposition 43—the Right to Have Vote Counted Legislative Constitutional Amendment—is a measure that would amend the California Constitution to give a voter who voted in an election, done in agreement by the voting laws of California, an assurance that their vote would be counted.

In addition to this measure, Chapter 919, Statutes of 2001, would give county elections officials authority to petition the Superior Court for additional time after an election deadline to authorize the tabulation or recounting of ballots and give power to the courts to grant such a petition. But in order for Chapter 919 to become operational, voters must approve Proposition 43. Currently there is no guarantee that a voter will have their vote counted. This proposition would give a voter an assurance that their vote would be counted.

If this measure becomes law, there would also be no cost to local or state government. This measure would only be an amendment to the present law that is already in affect.

Proponents for Prop 43 do not want a repeat of the 2001 Presidential Election. According to them, this measure would help to ensure that what occurred in Florida—some voters not having their vote counted—would not occur here.

They also mention that thousands of voters in that election did not have their votes counted. By voting yes, a voter would ensure that their vote would be counted, regardless of time or problems that happen after that person has given their vote. This is a way to be "sure that the people's voice is heard."

Moreover, they point out that Prop 43 would not change any laws regarding recounting of ballots or establishing voter intent.

Opponents to Prop 43 feel that this measure would "do more harm than good." They suspect that this measure would bring more lawsuits and litigation that would end up delaying an election for a lengthy period.

Opponents believe that there is "more mistakes... made in casting ballots—than in securing and counting them." In addition, opponents feel the problem lies in the fact that not too many people vote at all in elections. Therefore, this measure would not be worth a vote for yes.

Proposition 43 is definitely a measure worth taking a serious look at. And if this measure is approved, it could resonate all across the country.

Kappa Delta Shamrock Preview

By Susie Medina
The Scene Editor

On March 6, Kappa Delta will have its 12th Annual Kappa Delta Shamrock Project. From 11-2 in the afternoon in front of Pfau Library, the sisters will have an "In N Out" cookout trailer to sell meals for their philanthropy.

The philanthropy project this year will be divided with 80% going to the local community charities and 20% going to National Committee to Prevent Child Abuse. "We will be donating 100% of our profits to this cause and keep nothing," says member Laura Trujillo. According to the average sales of last year, that's an estimated $1000- 2000 alone.

The tickets are $5 and include a hamburger, or cheeseburger, chips and a soda. Besides food, there will also be games and music. "We usually have a radio station come out to help us, but this year we're having our campus radio instead," says Trujillo.

This has been a Kappa Delta tradition since 1990 when the sorority became a chapter. Each member, or sister as they refer to each other, is involved in something to support the event, making it a joint effort. Cal State fraternities will also be supporting the event for their 'sisters' as they will do a contest, much like the Alpha Phi's did, where each frat competes to donate the most money to the cause and the one with the most money wins and gets to pick one of their members to represent them, and accept the honor of being crowned Shamrock King.

With In N Out and a campus full of hungry students, the sale should be a success, right? Doesn't look like rain, or does it? Kappa Delta member Nancy Reyes assures us that the weather will not rain on their parade. "Years before, it rained and we put tents up and moved the location from the front of the library to the front of Student Union." People still bought and ate the food because sales stayed healthy.

The event is taking place on a Wednesday and will last three hours. It is not the first Kappa Delta fundraiser or In N Out's. On the In N Out website, there is a page in which one can donate to their own charity for child abused children.

Kappa Delta suggests that everyone purchase their tickets soon because they have been known to sell fast. Vegetarian burgers available upon request.

Retraction for Alpha Phi's Hearts for Hugs event

By Yazmin Alvarez

It was brought to my attention that in the February 18th issue of the Coyote Chronicle, some information regarding the Hugs for Hearts event was left out and some information was printed incorrectly, such as the Heart Throb winners. The information that was printed in this issue was provided during Alpha Phi's Hugs for Hearts event, and there had not yet been any official results posted at time the article was issued. The information printed at the time was to my knowledge, and to Devyn Grable's knowledge, the President of Alpha Phi, estimation in the amount that was raised due to the event.

It was printed that Eddie Cardenas was crowned Heart Throb, when in fact, he was nominated Ivy Man. The true Heart Throbs were Matt from Tau Kappa Epsilon and Pierce from Sigma Nu. Also, the total amount raised during the event was over $5000.00 in four hours. Approximately $6300.00 of the money raised will go to the support for women's health research and cardiac care which is the Mountainside, on Kendall, and Castle Park, were two of the more appealing places. The rent here for two people starts in the high $700's, but the landscape and recreational services make it very appealing. North Pointe, off Kendall, is also in the high $700's but does not have much recreation going on.

Another thing to consider is your roommate. How many horror stories have you heard about filthy, loud and obnoxious roommates? It's clearly evident that you should try to move in with someone you're most compatible with, because once you've decided to move in, the duration of your time together must meet the standards of your lease.

The majority of students that move into the dorms or apartments around here do it so they can be closer to school and pay more attention to their studies. There are always students who are looking for a roommate here at Cal State. There are signs and flyers on the side of Student Union where you can find potential roomies.

A Few Good Women

By Teresita Sosa
Staff Writer

March celebrates women from that period such as Susan B. Anthony who was arrested for attempting to vote during the presidential election of Ulysses S. Grant. Suffragettes who followed her stirred up enough controversy to cause Congress to pass the nineteenth amendment, giving the right for women to vote in 1920. The wartime also helped women to gain independence as they started to work while the men were away.

Civil Rights Leader Rosa Parks

Harriet Tubman, another woman activist, escaped from slavery in 1849, and dedicated the next ten years of her life to help slaves gain freedom through the Underground Railroad.

Rosa Parks, best known for her refusal to give up her seat in 1955 for a white passenger on an racially segregated bus in Montgomery, Alabama, led a successful African American bus boycott after her arrest.

Dolores Huerta, who helped create better working conditions for migrant workers, helped the legendary Cesar Chavez in 1962 to co-found and lead the United Farm Workers Union.

March, Women's History Month, began as a day to commemorate women's achievements and contributions, but it was the school's who pressured for it to become a week.

Now it's a month's time to reflect how women have changed American society and other parts of the world.

NOT ENOUGH SPACE-IT'S EITHER MY CAR OR YOURS

By Rody Rodriguez
Staff Writer

I'm going to be late! Josh Barnett, a junior attending Cal State, wonders as he arrives on the campus of CSUSB. Driving in his beige Honda Accord, he glides up and down the parking lot scanning for an open parking space. On this cold winter day, with rain steadily coming down, Josh notices a woman in a gray overcoat walking out towards the parking lot.

"Are you leaving or staying? If you're leaving, I'll give you a ride to your car." The woman in the gray overcoat gently shakes her head. Josh was hoping she would be going. As he drives steadily, he continues on his quest to find a parking space. The sound of the rain begins to increase, and the stereo has a respectable competitor. He then observes a man dressed in a soaked-leather jacket walking out to the parking lot. Please, let this man be leaving, Josh hopes to himself.

"Sir, are you leaving?" Josh asks once again. The man in his drenched leather jacket shakes his head. Josh is now starting to get frustrated. He begins desperately glancing everywhere for one open slot that he could place his car. I'm going to be late!

For many CSUSB students this story of Josh's is an everyday event. It seems every quarter, students are constantly facing the increasingly challenge of searching for a parking spot. This has become a thorn in the side for numerous students hoping to get to their class on time and leave in an orderly manner.

Many students feel that not very much is being done to relieve this problem. Some even believe that the school is not addressing the problem at all. With 16,000 students attending CSUSB, but only 6,000 parking slots available, the question that remains on everyone's mind is what is being done now to alleviate this growing problem?

President of CSUSB, Al Karnig, feels that the school is doing all it can to address this growing need. "We already have 250 new parking lots available in the north side of campus. There are also numerous other parking spots open. The problem seems to be in the first two weeks of class. Afterwards, parking seems to be more available. It's more that the students just don't like to walk"

"We do have enough spaces available," said Parking Program Coordinator Patricia Casillas. "There are temporary lots in Lot M. Also, 463 parking spaces have been opened during last fall quarter in parking Lot H, as well as parking on the curbs in Lot B and C."

Mrs. Casillas points out that CSUSB is actually doing well despite the current situation. She notes that CSUSB has a somewhat large area to expand, unlike other CSUs such as Cal State Fullerton. "We have one of the best [parking lots] we've seen. We went all over to see how others are dealing with their parking problems. They just don't have any space to expand at all. We still have room to grow."

President Karnig is aiming towards the future to end this dilemma. With the school expecting to have more than 20,000 students in the next ten years, President Karnig and his colleagues have been looking at numerous possibilities of dealing with the future situations that could occur. These many possibilities the President hopes to bring attention to include; continuing to expand the parking lot, giving students specific parking lot permits and maybe even creating a multi-tiered parking garage.

The school has also hired a contractor, Haku and Associates, to help the school find a better way to end this growing problem. They will be conducting an 18 week study, beginning last week and ending in May, to help the school learn what it can do to help this important issue.

"Everything that will be done in the future will be through this survey," Mrs. Casillas said. "They did a survey for the city of San Bernardino and we know that they will do a good job. This survey will help us be able to create a financial budget to deal with the parking situation and a reasonable means to correct it."

Despite all these possibilities, the school admits that it still needs to "consult with a lot of people" before it can move forward. In addition, most of these would-be plans are expensive and might not ever reach past the brainstorming phase. Lastly, it is not even known if or when the school will begin to end this ongoing concern. Until the school begins to end these problems, Josh Barnett feels, "It's something, I guess, you must deal with. It's something you must become numb to."

Tax Season is Here Again

New tax laws work in favor of students.

By Crystal Vickery
Staff Writer

It's tax season again and you know what that means—or do you? Filing your taxes can be pretty tricky especially with all the new 2002 tax laws. But don't get discouraged: some of the tax laws are beneficial to students.

A new tax deduction for college tuition, applicable for the years 2001 through 2005, can be claimed this year in place of the lifetime learning and Hope Scholarship tax credits, which are beginning to be phased out this year.

Deductions for student loans also have new and better regulations. In the past, students could only claim them during the first 60 months, when students are paying off their loan interest. In 2002, a new law eliminates the 60-month limit. As long as you're paying a loan, you get a tax deduction for it. This change will be a greater help to people who take many years to pay off their student loans.

"Now I can relax on my ten year loan and not stress about paying it off within the first five years to escape inflated interest rates," student, said Jake Zylman

Another new tax law that students who are parents will like is the new, state-sponsored saving plan for their children's college tuition. Before, parents had to pay tax on that money they put away—now it will be tax-free as long so they use the funds to pay for college expenses. "My parents didn't save any money for me because my parents were both in college while I was in high school. With this new law it will help benefit not only my children but my children's children," said student, Jonna St. John.

If you have a single income of more than $7,450, you and everyone else in this income bracket are required to file tax returns with the IRS. But don't fret; CSUSB has Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA). This is a free service for low-income taxpayers in the community and on campus. Every Wednesday until March 13, you can go to Jack Brown Hall, Room 280, from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. and volunteer accounting students will file your taxes for free. No appointments are necessary. If you can't make it on a Wednesday, you can go to the Feldheim Library in San Bernardino on Saturdays from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. through April 13. For more information you can call or e-mail Joan Kritzberg, 880-5714, jkritz@csusb.edu. Your best bet is to get your taxes done early and send them in before April 15. To find out more information online you can go to www.taxplanet.com.

TURNING AWAY FROM HATE

By Desiree Jaques
Staff Writer

"A lot of people think I'm trying to brag about my life. But I am," stated Tom Leyden. With 16 tattoos in 5 states, numerous tattoos in the process of being removed, and scars of hate behind him, Mr. Leyden came to speak to CSUSB students about "Turning Away From Hate".

In an event organized by the Cross Cultural Center, Leyden gave a straightforward presentation about his experiences as a member of a neo-nazi organization and his decision to end that affiliation.

"If we determined anyone was a burden to the 'white race', we'd beat the shit out of them," says Leyden. In graphic detail, he explained his early years as a neo-nazi, claiming that he was desperately seeking acceptance. He pointed out that these groups target kids at an impressionable age, and once they get them, they can keep them.

After numerous run-ins with the police in Fontana and then in Redlands, Leyden decided he needed to get away, and to a place he could spread the groups' message. He enlisted in the United States Marine Corps. "The military made me a better racist, they taught me organizational skills and recruitment techniques that I didn't know before." Being openly racist in the Marines at that time was not any real problem for him. He had racist, neo-nazi paraphernalia in his footlocker and often talked about it with other Marines. Leyden says that the military's policy at the time was that affiliation with these groups was permissible as long as they were "passive members". However, Leyden himself and other members of the "White Nationalist Movement" used the military as a means of spreading the message of "revolution" to others, a message of overthrowing the United States and dividing it into separate nations based on race. Leyden pointed out that men such as Mike Fortier, Terry Nichols, and Timothy McVeigh were all trained by the United States Army.

After receiving an "other than honorable discharge" from the Marine Corps for alcohol abuse and fighting, not for his racist affiliations, Leyden went back to recruiting young kids. He and other members went to junior high schools and passed out pamphlets with hate messages and information on joining what Leyden refers to as "a gang".

However, just as certain events led Tom Leyden to this lifestyle, there were events that led him away from it as well. "My kids are really what kicked me in the head," Leyden says. Years ago, when his two sons were merely 1 and 3 years old, he was watching the Nickelodeon children's show "Gullah Gullah Island" with them. During the middle of the show, his 3-year-old son turned the television off and scolded him for watching a show "with niggers on it".

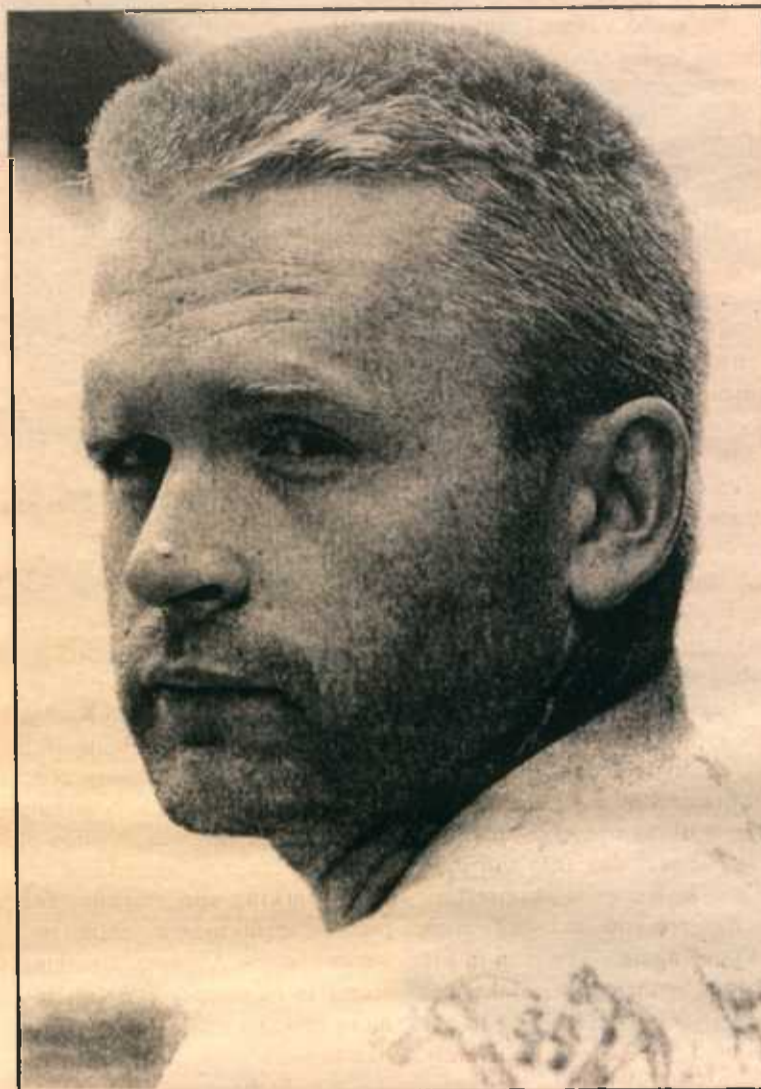

At first, Leyden thought this was great; these kids were so young but already grasped his message. He sat back in awe, just looking at his sons when it dawned on him. "I couldn't see the innocence in their eyes anymore. Kids are so pure; they'll love you no matter who you are or what you look like. But I couldn't see that in them anymore and it scared me." He said he knew then what it was like to truly be afraid, his children were learning how to hate, and they could barely walk.

It was then that he started talking to people of other backgrounds at work, socializing with them and becoming friends with them, as he had never been able to before. He was living a double life and it all came to a head at a white supremacist convention in Idaho, when he stood up and asked, "If there were only white people left, who would we hate?" To that, another member told him to shut up, "or we'll start with hair color next." It was all a big joke to the rest of the group, but to Tom, it meant something else. It was all about hate and blame. "It's those people. It's them. They are what's ruining this country...because they are not we, or us. It's all about division," says Leyden. He says that these organizations work closely with other separatist movements to divide the masses and pit them against each other. Divide and conquer is the strategy.

Tom Leyden has since spoken at numerous locations, including the Weisenthal Museum of Tolerance in Los Angeles. He teaches his children not to make distinctions among people, that we are all Americans and most importantly, we are all human beings. His motivation for speaking is to get the truth out, because most people don't know that skinheads aren't that identifiable anymore. They disguise themselves as the guy next door, while still spreading their message of hate and segregation. Julia, one attendee of the event, said, "I thought this was very good, I learned so much. I really had no idea about the extent of what these organizations could and have done."

Since speaking out about his experiences, several neo-nazi websites have made references to him as "a traitor to the white race, who should be terminated on sight." He currently speaks at middle schools and for branches of the United States Military, stressing the importance of a "no-tolerance" policy toward membership in extremist groups.

"We are all Americans, we have to have solidarity," John Futch, coordinator of the Cross Cultural Center, was very pleased they could schedule Mr. Leyden's appearance. Although the truth is always considered necessary, "Black History Month was an opportune time to schedule this event. CSUSB is a diverse campus, but we still have our problems." Given the late confirmation of the event, proper advertisement could not be done. But Mr. Futch says that the Center hopes to have an events calendar completed by July for the following school year, so they can get the word out to students early to spark more participation.

Leyden urges us to help combat the spread of this hatred, specifically to children, by being mentors and helping with after school programs. By being an active, loving part of a child's life, we can make a difference, and we can surely help shape the people they become.

Women of the Civil Rights Movement: Behind the Black Men were some very Strong Women

By Jake Zylman
Multi-Cultural Editor

History, with the exception of Rosa Parks, highlights the actions and leadership of African American men, predominantly Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., when discussing the civil rights movement that dominated the American landscape during the late 1950's through the '60s.

Behind these men were a core of strong black women that were quietly, and not so quietly, setting the table for the proper conditions that would foster equality for their people.

"Throughout history, African American women have been a driving force behind the advancement of their people in American society," Dr. Joyce Hanson, a history professor at Cal State said during a presentation held in the Sycamore room of the Lower Commons on Thursday, February 21.

Including some examples of resistance of African American women in the time of the slavery the presentation focused on contributions beginning in the 1930's.

Modern African American female involvement began in the 1930's with Mary McCloud Bethune. Although she founded Bethune Bookman College in 1923, possibly her biggest contributions came when she began to serve on national advisory committees and befriended then first lady Eleanor Roosevelt. This connection to the humanitarian first lady was an excellent opportunity to get desegregation into the public eye on the national level.

Another key player in the movement was Septima Clark. Her Highlander Folk School openly taught womens' voting rights but also taught the art of protest. One of her students during the summer of 1955 was Rosa Parks, who coincidentally began the Montgomery Bus Boycott only months after. But was it coincidence? Probably not.

While history simplifies the Rosa Parks action of not giving her seat to a white woman because she was tired, it was actually a situation that had been planned for and set to put into action if the scenario was ever correct.

Jo Ann Gibson-Robinson made leaflets that night so they could be passed out the following morning and begin the boycott.

Women were often better for protests because they had less to lose than men did and were generally in less physical danger. "Black women knew that a man would lose his job and be beaten. But at the same time they realized white politicians would never listen to them," Dr. Hanson said.

Equal Opportunity Entertainment

By Bethany Anderson
Assistant Multi-Cultural Editor

We are at a crucial point in the growing legacy of African Americans in entertainment. African Americans in American cinema have come a long way since the days of Butterfly McQueen in the epic Gone With the Wind, and the comedy routines of Amos & Andy.

Our parents remember watching pioneers like Nat King Cole's fifteen minute of prime time television, and the days of Richard Pryor standing on a stage doing a comedy routine that would forever revolutionize and influence future comics such as Eddie Murphy, Chris Tucker, and Chris Rock.

Slowly African American entertainers are leaving behind the days of stereotypical and token roles of drug dealers and prostitutes in television and film. African Americans with the aid of serious roles portrayed by actors such as Lawrence Fishburne and Angela Basset in What's Love Got to Do With it, Vivica A. Fox Soul Food, and Henry Simmons Jr. on NYPD Blue are setting the stage for the future of African American entertainers.

International film festivals such as Film Fest DC, Acapulco Black Film Festival, Urbanworld Film Festival, to name a handful, are promoting and praising independent African American film makers that are changing the dynamics of what audiences will soon have in their theaters.

Though the optimism is strong for the future of African American entertainers, one gigantic change needs to take place in salary negotiations. Actors such as Brad Pitt who can demand no less than $20 million per picture, do not compare to five-time Academy Award nominee Denzel Washington whose salary begins around $10-15 million per picture. It was only recently that Rush Hour and Rush Hour 2 actor Chris Tucker could now demand $20 million per picture.

African American's contributions to the entertainment industry have overlapped into film, television, music and theater, and countless more to come.

Contributions by African American directors such as John Singleton and Spike Lee have produced movies not just for "black" audiences, as movie studio executives once thought. John Singleton's Boyz n the Hood transcended the racial and ethnic lines to become a huge box office hit and prove movie executives wrong.

Spike Lee's films have never shied away from controversial and once thought taboo subjects such as interracial dating, race relations, and legendary philosophers like Malcolm X.

With the increasing number of African Americans behind the camera, it is certain that African American entertainers will continue to make history.

On February 12, 2002, the 73rd annual Academy Awards announced the nominees for best achievements in motion pictures. The ceremony, which takes place on March 24th, made a nearly unprecedented statement by announcing three actors of African American heritage for Oscars in leading roles.

Why is it an unprecedented statement? The answer lies that in the Academy's seventy-three year history, it has been a total of thirty years since three African Americans were nominated in leading acting roles. In 1972 actor Paul Winfield and Cicely Tyson were nominated for their supporting roles in the motion picture Sounder, and multi-talented singer/actress Diana Ross for her role in Lady Sings the Blues.

This year's best actor in a motion picture includes five time nominee Denzel Washington for his role in Training Day, and first time nominee Will Smith for his dynamic portrayal of boxing legend Muhammad Ali in Ali. Best Actress nominee Halle Berry, for her role in Monster's Ball, is the first black woman to be nominated for Best Actress since Angela Basset's nomination in 1993 for her real life portrayal of Tina Turner in What's Love Got To Do With It.

It was not until 1963 that Sidney Poitier was the first African American man to win an Oscar for his role in Lilies of the Field.

Kwesi Mfume, who is the President of the NAACP, sees the statement made by the nominations as the actors getting recognized for their skill as actors instead of their skin color.

The Founding Sisters of SOUL pose here. SOUL hopes to improve community involvement

By Shareena C. Clark
Assistant News Editor

There is a new group on campus! It is about time we broke monotony! The new organization creatively called SOUL, that is Sisters Of Unity and Love.

SOUL's sole mission is "To promote community involvement by giving community service, giving scholarships, and for women to come together and uplift their communities. We also want to help those who are underprivileged to get to college," said Syreeta Penn, SOUL board member. SOUL has been an official organization since the beginning of the winter quarter, and already have planned a "gong show" (April 10th), and a minority health fair for the spring. Two mentoring programs have also been started up at San Geronio High School, and San Bernardino High School. SOUL is in cahoots with the Cross-Cultural Center, and has many events coming soon enough.

SOUL's officers consist of President Lakeisha Carter, Vice President Danielle Williams, Secretary Myra Womack, and Advisor Missy Livingston. Meetings are held every other Thursday in the Open Lounge (formerly the copy center), and all that are interested are encouraged to attend. "Just show up!" Syreeta exclaimed. There is no initiation fee, no greek letters, no silly hazing rituals, just show up and be apart of Cal State history,

SOUL is a love-based organization that has all the growing potential of a national park redwood. "I hope when I come back in 20 years, people will be here [in the SOUL Organization] doing for the community, and making school a better place to be," explained Syreeta. Indeed, SOUL is an organization that is badly needed at CSUSB, and in the surrounding community. Keep up the superb work, y'all!

KING TACO

Located: Locations throughout Los Angeles
Portions: Average
Price: Average
Service: Good
Taste: Average-Good

King Taco is Mexican food. Let me re-phrase that, the only way you are going to find Mexican food that is more authentic is to drive to Mexico. King Taco is a small chain in Los Angeles, that even movie execs will sit down and enjoy a meal at. HINT: Be prepared to read a Spanish menu and order in Spanish. Taco King is famous for their burritos, and that they should be! The only thing not worth ordering on the menu are the nachos, they are straight out of 7-11. Next time you're in L.A., anytime you're craving Mexican food, King Taco's the place.

CLUB MED

Located: Sunset Blvd, Hollywood
Portions: Good
Price: Good /Expensive
Service: Excellent
Taste: Excellent

Club Med is a posh Mediterranean restaurant that sits overlooking Sunset Blvd. right before you hit Beverly Hills. This is the place to go if you want to sit amongst stars for a mid-afternoon luncheon. The food here is amazing! If you've never tried Mediterranean, this would be the place to find out what it's all about. I recommend the Chicken and Mushroom Sandwich- it comes served on this delicious bread with melted mozzarella and cucumber. I would also suggest trying one of their salads- believe me, unlike like American salads- they are flavorful and very filling. The service at Club Med is outstanding, the only downside is that parking can be a problem (which is always true in LA). Club Med is elegant, yet trendy, but then again, what restaurant isn't in the Hollywood/ Beverly area?

Since 1995, the students in the Communication practicum, Comm 444A, involving television production, have been producing a television program during the fall and winter quarters called Crossline. Faultline Extreme, Aftershock, and Faultline 2000 have been titles for the program in the past. This year will be the show's second season and seems to be coming on strong.

Students in the practicum are responsible for the creation of the show. There are up to 15 students involved in the practicum, and each has a specific task in the production of the program. Positions such as graphics coordinator, line runner, and show producer are each filled by the students.

Every student involved in the practicum must also create his or her own segment for an episode to be aired on Crossline. "This is their show," commented Mike Wichman, instructor of the practicum and main coordinator of Crossline. "They pick their own topics for the show and are responsible for making it happen."

"This is a great stepping stone for them in the professional environment. This experience gives them a taste of the real world." Kico Velarde, student assistant involved with Crossline, hopes to gain experience and knowledge from his participation in the program. "This ties in with what I want to do in life. The experience will help me become a better producer later on," stated Velarde, who has currently been in the process of producing two independent films out of UCLA. The main focus for student involvement with Crossline is to gain this type of knowledge.

The ideas that come about for the topics aired on Crossline range from a variety of issues and are confronted by the students during 3-5 minute segment episodes aired. However, news and controversial topics are the main focus and are also the basis for the show. Issues such as drinking on campus are examples of past items discussed during the program. An upcoming issue that deals with strip clubs leading to prostitution, a topic thought of by the Chronicle's very own A&E editor, and student in the practicum, Melissa Adamson, is said to air along with other issues in coming segments of Crossline.

There on the set, they focus on issues in a laid back atmosphere. The television program has a setting such as The View, where it consists of a main table with the host and interviewed guests. Outside on the patio area on the second level of University Hall, the show has an audience that is able to interact with the host and the guests of the show.

Crossline is said to have a potential of a hundred thousand viewers and is also great exposure to CSUSB and the Communications Department. There is said to be discussions on new outlets and new channels such as PAX for the program to be aired in the future. There is also word out that sometime next year, the campus will have its own channel, channel 3, and CSUSB will have full access of the channel and will continue airing Crossline on that specific station.

Upcoming episodes include topics on pornography, fraternities, college athletics and more. Crossline is currently being aired on KCSB, community access channel, on Tuesday time slots 3 times a week. This Friday, KCSB will even be running an all day marathon of last season's episodes of Crossline. Next time you flick on your television, tune in to Crossline- Badda Bing!

The Rhythm of Life Comes Alive

by Priscilla Thompson
Staff Writer

The jazz band Rhythm of Life performed last week in the court yard of the Student Union, catching everyone's attention, but the majority of the audience were people of the younger generation. Today, more young people aren't only listening to r&b music, but appreciating jazz music as well. Jazz music has been around for many years, ever since the 1920's. Jazz music comes in many categories, from folk to swing to contemporary and so on, and today jazz is heating up the airwaves with many different moods.

The people who watched the performance had nothing but positive things to say about the band. After the performance, students were asked to do a survey about the band, which received great reviews. Many said that they would like to see Rhythm of Life perform on campus again, and others said that they would like to go and see them perform at some of their gigs.

Rhythm of Life have been together for two and a half years and specialize in Jazz and Rhythm and Blues. The band has performed at numerous occasions including basketball games, on campus events, weddings, banquets, special events and special occasions. Last year the band performed at the Epic Entertainment Center, and this year at the end of March, the band will perform at the Black Faculty and Staff Scholarship banquet.

The band has a weekly gig, performing every Friday night from 8:00 PM to midnight, at Jag's Restaurant in Riverside. The address is 1725 Spruce Street off of Chicago for those of you who are interested in seeing Rhythm of Life in action.

For more information regarding the Jazz band or upcoming shows, please contact the Music Department at extension 5483.

OPENS FRIDAY, MARCH 8 IN THEATRES EVERYWHERE

Coyote Movie Ticket

by Ivan Fernandez
& Marcos Landin
Staff Writers

Movies reviewed will be graded on a four-star system ranging from one (terrible) to four (incredible).

However, instead of stars, we will use "Snootchies", like the ones used by Jay & Silent Bob. They go as follows:

One star = Snootch
Two stars = Snootchie
Three stars = Snootchie Bootchie
Four stars = Snootch to the Motherf@#$m Nootch!!

 JOHN Q

A desperate father takes over an emergency room with hostages in order to save his dying son's life.

MARCOS: LEAVE YOUR BABIES AT HOME!! Not because of the content of the film but simply because they cry. Now that I got that out of the way, see this movie. How great of an actor is Denzel? Let me count the ways: 1)Crimson Tide 2) Glory 3) Training Day 4) The Hurricane 5) John Q.

IVAN: How far would you go to save your child? That's the question John Q has to face. And face it, he does. There are nothing but solid performances throughout this well-written and well-directed film.

MARCOS: Well-written indeed. You will find many tension builders throughout the film, which I will not discuss right now because you need to go see it. It would be even better if you were to see it at "Cinema Star" in San Bernardino which has Dolby Digital Sound in every one of its twenty screening rooms.

IVAN: Did you forget to mention the luxury love seats with retractable arms with cup holders? The crotch does not make a good cup holder, I can tell you that.

MARCOS: Any movie that you see when the audience "interacts" with the screen by clapping, you know you've got a great film. Once again, SEE THIS FILM.

IVAN: I wouldn't be surprised to see grown men cry especially fathers. There are many tense and moving moments in the film and even your humble narrator found himself a bit misty-eyed. While I wish the ending would've punched me in the gut more, I can't honestly say that I was disappointed.. SEE THIS FILM!

MARCOS VOTES: Snootch to the Motherf@#$m Nootch!!

IVAN VOTES: Snootchie Bootchies plus 1/2 (I really wanted to give it a four, it came that close).

Before "John Q," we were treated with the proverbial showing of trailers. Here are our impressions of these upcoming films.

TRAILER IMPRESSIONS ON THE HEAT INDEX!

Graded by a "Heat" index:

"See this film" -

MEXICAN HOT SAUCE

"Check Reviews" -

"I don't think so" -

 BLADE II

MARCOS: I want to see it. I want to see it. I want to see it. I want to see it. I want to see it.

IVAN: Lotsa action, lotsa cool shots, lotsa creepy new villains and some hot chicks, ohh gothic la la. Heat Index: MEXICAN HOT SAUCE

PANIC ROOM

MARCOS: I am anxiously anticipating this film, being that David Fincher directed it. If you don't know who he is, he's directed (in chronological order): Alien 3, Seven, The Game, Fight Club and produced BMW films on the web.

IVAN: As much as I want to see this film, if I see this trailer one more time, GOD DAMN IT, I'm going to panic.

Heat Index: MEXICAN HOT SAUCE.

ALL ABOUT THE BEN-JAMIN'S

MARCOS: Looks like a comedy with a twist of action, starring Ice Cube and his cousin from Next Friday.

IVAN: I'm not much for rappers as actors but I could definitely tell that Ice Cube's acting is getting better.

Heat Index: WANNABEE MEXICAN HOT SAUCE

 MADE

NOT the sequel to Swingers! but by the same team, minus the director, and just as funny, if not funnier.

IVAN: Two guys are trying to get it made in the mob, courtesy of one Peter Faulk (Columbo). Vince Vaughn and Jon Favreau keep the laughs and fun going throughout the whole film.

MARCOS: Everyone can relate to this film because everyone has a friend like Vince Vaughn's character. The film wouldn't have been the same without him, being that he is the contributing force for the laughter.

IVAN: Try to keep track of the numerous cameos in the film, including a certain someone from "Saved by the Bell." One question: is it Diddy or Daddy? You'll see what I mean.

MARCOS: I liked Jon Favreau's rough style of directing. He used a lot of handheld shots. It makes you feel like you're watching an independent film which is what you're really watching.

IVAN VOTES: It was good, I enjoyed it- I give this one a Snootchie Bootchie.

MARCOS VOTES: I liked this movie a little more than Ivan, so I'm giving it an enthusiastic score of Snootchie Bootchies plus a half.

It has been an interesting week down here in the dungeon... I was pleased with the verbal feedback I received from a handful of students who both read this editorial column and know me personally. They mentioned that opening up my life in such a public forum was courageous, even ballsy, and I appreciated the compliments on my character, but I had not intended to write to receive accolades or recognition.

I wrote last week for various reasons, both private and public. I hoped to break the ice with some of you out there who are talented writers, to invite you to share your own experiences here at Cal State San Bernardino with the rest of the student body. The Opinion/Editorial section of this paper is open to the views and statements of all students, and I hope that as time progresses, the section will be utilized as a public forum to discuss different sides of campus issues and to generate a loud buzz around campus.

Personally, I wrote out of love, respect and in honor of my parents who have for the past 23 years put their lives on hold to provide for mine. This year has been extremely hard on my family ever since the Administration of the College of Arts and Letters decided to pull the Coyote Chronicle funds and make us work without any compensation at the beginning of the fall quarter.

Collectively, each year we publish 24 issues of the Coyote Chronicle, and for the first 12 issues we worked not only without pay, we worked without a printer, camera or any assistance, motivational or fiscal, from the College of Arts and Letters. The College refused to shell out a hundred or so dollars to repair our original printer, and forced us to take whatever action we could to get the paper finished on time each week. We spent each weekend traveling back and forth between the campus and Kinko's, just so we could print out a copy of the paper to send to the newspaper printers. Luckily, the Communications Department reimbursed us the money we spent at Kinko's, but how can a College reimburse the time we lost on studying for classes, researching and writing term papers, and spending time with our families? We were made to pay for the past Chronicle's years of failure, singled out and put on a short leash, to sacrifice ourselves this year so that we could rebuild the foundation of the new Coyote Chronicle, to set the precedence for continued success for many years to come.

Last week was one of our best. The College of Arts and Letters administration decided at a closed meeting that the staff of the Chronicle would finally be compensated, but remain unsure as to how they are going to do it. We had earned enough money over fall quarter to cover printing costs, build a financial cushion and pay the

In Remembrance of Daniel Pearl

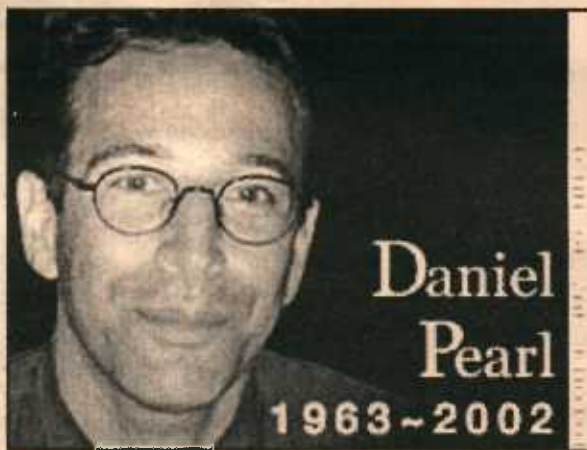

This past Thursday, U.S. officials confirmed the murder of Wall Street journalist Daniel Pearl. According to reports, evidence of Pearl's death was sent in the form of a videocassette that was anonymously delivered to the U.S. Consulate in Karachi, Pakistan.

"Danny's senseless murder lies beyond our comprehension," the family said in an official statement. "Danny was a beloved son, a brother, an uncle, a husband, and a father to a child who will never know him."

The forces of terror took Pearl's life from him and it reminds us just how vulnerable and valuable each one of our own lives is.

We honor Daniel Pearl's courage during his abduction and for paying the ultimate price for freedom. He was a man who was doing his job, reporting news on the War on Terror, hoping to give some insight into the madness. Instead, he became the focus of that madness, as fear and hatred cut him down, taking his last breath of life with no signs of remorse.

We send our condolences to his family and friends throughout the world during these tough and trying times, as they now must learn to cope with a life void of Daniel Pearl, especially his unborn child who will learn of its father through stories, video tapes and his writing, having never had the chance to be held in Daniel's arms. May God above send angels of comfort to Daniel's loved ones and still have it in the heart to show sympathy and compassion to those who were responsible for this heinous, evil act.

Kappa Delta Announces 12th Annual Shamrock Event for Charity

The members of the California State University San Bernardino Chapter of Kappa Delta Sorority are proud to host their 12th Annual Shamrock Event for the prevention of child abuse. In-N-Out will be present for the Shamrock Event in an effort to help Kappa Delta Sorority fundraise. The tickets will be five dollars each and this will include a complete meal from In-N-Out, and also your name will be added into a raffle. This event will be held Wednesday, March 6, 2002 in front of the Pfau Library from 11:00AM - 3:00PM.

Thousands of Kappa Deltas across the country will be working together in the fund-raiser to benefit local affiliates and chapters of Prevent Child Abuse America (PCAA), the sorority's national philanthropy. Eighty percent of the funds collected will remain in Beaumont, California, for the Children's Hospital. The remaining 20 percent will go to the PCAA for nationwide public awareness programs.

Founded in 1897, Kappa Delta Sorority began supporting PCAA in 1981, and began the annual nationwide Shamrock Event in 1983. More than $4.5 million has been raised through the Shamrock event to benefit child abuse prevention efforts across the country.

Cal State San Bernardino Faculty Senate Adopt 'Buck' Resolution

At its February 5, 2002 meeting, the CSU San Bernardino Faculty Senate adopted the following resolution:

Resolution in Support of Professor Vince Buck's Open Letter to Chancellor Reed

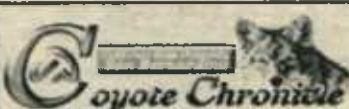

WHEREAS With the strain on state revenues caused by the State of California's purchases of energy during last year's crisis and a continued weakening of the state's economy and the resulting decline in state revenues, the California State University is facing a difficult and challenging time in the coming months and possibly years; and WHEREAS, the State's budget crisis has come at a time when the California State University System is facing a crisis of its own in lack of space and decline in on-track faculty, and just as unusually large enrollment increases each year for the foreseeable future will stretch existing resources to the breaking point; and WHEREAS, it is imperative to maintain access and quality education for increasing numbers of students; and WHEREAS, this crisis for the California State University System calls for new forms of leadership and cooperation, and the Faculty Senate of California State University, San Bernardino agrees with Chancellor Reed's call for unity to have faculty, staff, and administration united speaking with one voice to the Governor, the Legislature, and the voters of the State of California about the budgetary needs of the California State University; and WHEREAS, unity will not be possible until the Chancellor and the Board of Trustees take the first steps to change the faculty perception that the Chancellor and the Board of Trustees distrust and lack respect for the faculty, a perception that gets communicated to the faculty when we are bypassed in decision-making processes and gets communicated to the Governor, the Legislature, and the public in the California State University's extreme and intransigent position in the bargaining process; and

WHEREAS, Without a speedy and agreeable settlement of the contract, such unity will not be possible; therefore be it RESOLVED, That the Faculty Senate of California State University, San Bernardino embraces the message put forth by California State University, Fullerton Professor Vince Buck in his open (e-mail) letter to the California State University Chancellor Charles Reed in which Professor Buck stressed the need for leadership on the part of the Chancellor and the Board of Trustees, the need for professionalism and the respect in communications from the California State University, and the need to involve the California State University faculty earlier in the decision making process; and be it further RESOLVED, That the Faculty Senate of California State University, San Bernardino calls upon Chancellor Reed to provide the leadership necessary to bring contract negotiations to an agreeable conclusion and provide for the unity necessary for the California State University System to fulfill its role and responsibility to the citizens of California, and be it further RESOLVED, That the Chair of the Faculty Senate of California State University, San Bernardino communicate this resolution to Chancellor Charles Reed, to the Chair of the Board of Trustees, to Professor Vince Buck, to the Chair of the System-wide Academic Senate, and to all Academic/Faculty Chairs in the California State University System.

Lambda Theta Phi Fraternity to Host Upcoming Events

On Thursday, February 21, Lambda Theta Phi fraternity will be teaching free latin dance lessons such as salsa and merengue. In the Pine Room from 8pm-10pm, it is open to all students and admission is free. Lessons will be taught by myself and several female friends. Our fraternity will be having our quarterly fundraising party to be held at Carlos 'O Briens in downtown San Bernardino on Wednesday, February 27 from 9pm-2am.

Letter to the Editor:

Mike F. Grad Student, talks about his college experience with the some of the faculty here at Cal. State San Bernardino

In my first quarter here, I was taking a capstone course and most of the students in the class did not like the professor because he was difficult, but I liked the challenge. There were three midterms and before the last midterm, he asked if anyone knew how to whistle. I thought he wanted the students' attention so I yelled to quite the crowd.

He looked at me, made a quirky gesture and used the silence to give instructions to the class. Afterwards, he started to hand out the tests and when he came to me, he said I was brown-nosing and that I would get my test last. I went from zero to full-seethe in about 2 seconds flat. I had to convince myself not to give him his first lesson in Chinese kick-boxing for free.

(Normally I would have given the incident some time and then appropriately confronted the offending party. However, reasoning that if a person who was able to engage in such obviously childish behavior (but who nonetheless held a PHD) was going to evaluate me for a final grade in his course, I couldn't trust him to be objective about my grade, so

I opted not to confront.)

He gave me the test, but I remember very little of the test because I was so angry. I finished it as fast as I could, turned it in and left. As I was walking across campus in the doghouse of life, actually questioning why I was here at all, I thought of an experience I had while here for transfer day some months before. I had the opportunity to sit in on an educational seminar that different departments gave on transfer days. I sat in with the chair of a student friendly department. He explained to me in no uncertain terms that he was here for me and indeed without students, professors do not have jobs. However, he added that unfortunately, not all academic professionals realize this. The professor/student relationship can not be mutually exclusive.

I walked out of his office on top of the world — he had been there for me — both academically and personally — in a significant way. In fact, as a direct result of that conversation, I am now approaching graduation with my Master's Degree, which just goes to show how one seemingly meaningless incident can be anything but.

Life is like that sometimes.

really have a great faculty and staff who are very student-based and they go beyond the call of duty," said ASI P of University Affairs Juan Luna.

"If we care about education then we need the money we spend on our education to be used for education, rather than the growing CSU bureaucracy," said Jill Messing, CSUSB student intern with CFA chapter. "It's not the administrators who are in the classrooms, it's the teachers who don't get benefits or any sense of job security."

Yet some administrators did start out in the classroom. Dr. Karnig stated that he had taught in the classroom at virtually all levels, from introductory courses to honors classes and all the way up to doctoral seminars. "I believe my background makes it quite easy to understand both positions. I am very supportive of many of the CFA's goals. However, I believe the best strategy is to seek additional funding from the state, rather than employing internal reallocations that may significantly impair important missions of the university, including course availability and access."

The internal reallocations mentioned by Karnig remain in the center of the debate. The CFA continue to argue against the redistribution of such allocated funds as the Faculty Early Retirement Program set by the CSU administration. These funds find their way into the growing CSU administration, which increased by nearly 43% since 1995, and the new computer database, the Common Management System.

CFA argues that the savings made off of the retirement program would be sufficient to fund faculty Service

Step Increases, hire more tenure-track faculty rather than temporary lecturers, underwrite lecturer health benefits, provide stipends for department chairs, ensure pay parity for counselors and reduce the workload and improve the quality of education. CFA believes they found the pot of gold, but CSU administrators differ in opinion.

From the official record of the fact-finding committee, the CSU stated its sole reason for refusal to allow the allocated funds to be used toward faculty compensation was that to do so, "would necessitate a reduction in our budgetary expenditure for such items as increased student enrollment." The CSU further stated that they could be forced to deny enrollment to the future students.

Yet it is the future students that the administration is banking on for the prosperity of the CSU system. The Governors office released a proposed budget earlier this year for the 2002-2003 school year in which an increase of 116.9 million, or 4.5%, from the general fund would be allocated to fully fund the projected enrollment increase for an additional 12,030 full-time students expected to enroll next year.

"With the current trends shifting the amount of money dedicated toward education, students should be concerned about the quality of education and whether their degree will mean anything after they graduate," said Messing.

editorial staff what averages out to be about $1.75 per hour, or $50.00 per week. We also received our digital camera and our new printer, courtesy of President Karnig and the Provost's Office.

If it were not for the President and the Provost, we would still be without two pieces of essential equipment absolutely necessary to operate any type of media publication. I can not speculate as to why the College of A & L did not try and help us, all assumptions would be inferences, lacking the factual backing needed to point fingers. What I can say is that we have had to fight an uphill battle this year to earn a smidgen of respect, and it goes no further. To our disappointment, the bastard-child treatment of the Chronicle by Art's and Letters administration continues to this day, this time in the form of negligence.

Next year, the College of A & L will receive funds from the University to purchase new computers for the communication lab in the basement of the University Hall, right next door to our office. The old Macintosh G3's we use in our office were a part of that computer lab before the beginning of the year, but we moved out of the lab for convenience sake and to create a proper newsroom for weekly production and business.

The College of A & L informed us that they would be replacing all of the lab computers, but not the ones in our office. If the College was budgeted to replace all the computers, then why not replace all the computers? What are there reasons for not adding the lab computers in our office onto the total order for Communication lab equipment replacement? Why are they making us raise the money to purchase new equipment for ourselves, when that equipment will end up belonging to the College after we graduate? We are still under the guidance and control of the College of A & L, we are not an independent paper, not yet. Though we are treated as such, without the level of respect due to such an enterprise, we continue to seek the support and blessing of the College, but it is not a

The men's baseball team substituted their bats with whapping sticks, accumulating 14 hits, including a 6th inning two run homer by sophomore catcher Brian Schweiger.

The Coyotes took an early lead by scoring two runs in the first. With the bases loaded, Matt Swayden stroked a single to center field, scoring two runs.

In the second inning, Shaun Rudi scored a run off a hit by Schweiger, lifting the Coyotes to a 3-0 lead. Schweiger showed up again in the bottom of the fifth when he smashed a ball that passed through the rightfielder's glove. Schweiger rounded the bases as if being chased by a rabid Cujo, diving headfirst into third base for a triple. First baseman Matt Swayden was intentionally walked and Marcus Wyatt capitalized on a base hit into center scoring Schweiger. The runners moved up a base after a quick out at first, and were then knocked in by a Shaun Rudi single to centerfield, adding a couple of runs for a 6-1 lead.

The sixth was offensive baseball at its best as the Coyotes scored four runs. Leadoff batter Adam Rabusin walked and later stole second base. Brian Schweiger took his turn at the plate and crushed a homerun that left the park completely. Barreras was then hit by a pitch that summoned Cal Poly Pomona to replace their starting Rawlings announced Cal State San Bernardino women's basketball player Sharee Brown as its Rawlings Player of the Week for February 11-17.

The senior forward-center has been the key weapon for an injury depleted Coyote line-up that lost its starting players in Erica Cronin (broken wrist), Shannon Smith (torn ACL), Shan Tesch (torn meniscus) and Amy Tahiemmen (torn ACL).

Brown, a liberal studies major who has been fighting a stress fracture in her lower left leg, scored 21 points against UC Davis on February 15. Brown then scored a game-high 26 points and grabbed 10 rebounds against Chico State on February 16.

Brown was the first Coyote from the women's basketball team to earn the award this year.

Heather Garay (Bakersfield)

and Lauri McIntosh (Pomona) both lead the conference with three Athlete of the Week honors.

Recreational Sports

Intramural basketball will hit full gear as they head into playoffs and the All-Star contest starting on Tuesday, February 23.

Team Roc, Team T.A.E., TKE

and the Yellow Monkeys all look solid in the intermediate league as Old School is primed yet for another Advance basketball title.

The All-Star contest will begin on February 26, featuring the Stars vs. Stripes for both leagues.

A three-point and a slam dunk competition will also be featured.

Coyotes drop first game of doubleheader against Western New Mexico 4-2 before halting the second contest due to darkness in Friday's contest at the Coyote Diamond.

CSUSB Wire Report

For the second time this season, darkness was a factor in a Cal State San Bernardino women's softball game.

On Friday, the Coyotes and Western New Mexico wound up in a 3-3 deadlock when the umpires called the game after eight innings of the nightcap of the doubleheader due to lack of illumination.

Earlier, Western New Mexico defeated Cal State San Bernardino 4-2 in the opener.

The Coyotes, now 8-13-2 on the season, host Cal State Stanislaus in a CCAA doubleheader at noon Saturday. CSUSB is 2-2 in the CCAA.

In game one Friday, the visiting Mustangs, now 10-3-1 on the season, opened up a 3-0 lead on a solo home run in the sixth inning by Tiffany Mondink which proved to be the winning run.

The Coyotes narrowed the gap to 3-2 in the bottom half of the inning on singles by Letty Gutierrez, and Melissa Clemann followed by an error which loaded the bases. Sharm...ndrick's sacrifice fly brought Gutierrez and...

A Young Dawn is Rising on the Pitcher's Mound

By Danny B. Homaidan
Sports Writer

Sophomore sensation Dawn Onishi strikes fear into the hearts of opponents every time she takes the mound. While only in her second year, Onishi is blossoming into an extraordinarily consistent performer, and has become ace of the Coyote pitching staff for softball head coach Roxanne Berch.

Her main weapon is the use of intense mental pressure to break-down the spirit and will of rivals, who frequently exit the batter's box shaking their heads in total disbelief. Clearly, Onishi's strategy has worked to perfection as she spearheads the 'Yote attack with a remarkable 2.13 earned run average coupled with a team high four complete games thrown.

In addition, she has tossed two shutout games for the Coyotes early in this 2001-2002 CCAA (California Collegiate Athletic Association) season. Her most recent shutout came on February 6 against Chico State when she hurled seven flawless innings of four hit ball.

Even more impressive than the outstanding statistics Onishi has compiled this season is the fact that she still has more than two years to refine her pitching craft. One can only imagine how dominant a pitcher she will be at the end of her 'Yote career as she learns how to better compete and win against the unforgiving CCAA conference teams.

In terms of the team's performance, Onishi is exceptionally pleased with its strong, hard play. "It's a totally different team this year, so I'm really pleased," said Onishi. "We have two catchers this year, last year we had one catcher, so I think we're a lot stronger now."

Onishi also feels that her outstanding play is attributed to her first-rate teammates and her growing experience level. "I have a lot of confidence in us as a team, it makes me more successful being comfortable with the infield, outfield, everything," declared Onishi. "I also have had a year to get used to this conference and college ball."

Finally, she plans to complete her education to pursue a professional career. "I want to get my master's in Kinesiology, possibly doctorate in it," stated Onishi. "To work in occupational therapy and to get certified to become an adapted physical education teacher for mentally handicapped kids."

Yearning for the run: Bob Lien's way of life

By John D. Halcon
Sports Editor

Bob Lien is far from being the same athlete he was during his high school and college years.

Gone by are his explosive legs, his natural running form, and his youthful, intense competitiveness.

However, the 53-year old Sociology professor is no laughing matter when it comes to strapping on his Adidas, and accelerating through 26 miles of pavement.

"The image that people get about running is that someone out there is running by himself," said Lien. "It's like what kind of weird animal would be doing that?"

The former Marquette University (Milwaukee) graduate will be making his fourth appearance in the 17th annual Los Angeles Marathon with a big smile on his face.

To run with all those people in a pack is like a tremendous kick," said Lien. "It's like a party for me."

"People are out there grooving through each other," added Lien. "It's really a lot easier running alongside someone."

That someone for Lien will be his 20-year-old son, Louie. According to Lien, the race will be a good experience for the father and son.

"It'll be a lot of fun," added Lien.

Depth proved to be the difference during Cal State San Bernardino women's tennis matchup against Cal State Los Angeles.

Despite losing the No.1 and No. 2 singles contest, the Coyotes swept the doubles competition en route to a 7-2 California Collegiate Athletic Association victory at Coyote court on Friday, February 22.

The duo of Cassie Sumrow and junior Coral Conley defeated Tammy Encina and Katharina Menzel in tie-breaker fashion, scoring a 9-8 (7-3) match.

Heather Lehman and freshman Jennifer Newman added a second victory after disposing the Golden Eagles' duo of Jessica Scruggs and Brittany Keeler 8-2.

Timetra Hampton and Lisa Duncan kept the Coyotes in the lead, grabbing the No. 3 doubles match away from Michelle Gee and Cheryl Scotten 8-4.

No.2 singles player Lehman dropped her match against Menzel 6-4, 6-0 while No.1 singles player Newman lost decisively to "highly regarded" Encina, who took the match 6-1, 7-5.

However, the Coyotes (2-2 CCAA, 5-2 overall) received the four victories from the rest of the singles players to ice the contest.

"I thought our biggest win came from our No.1 doubles [Sumrow/Conley]," said head coach Thomas Starzyk. "They were down 8-7, and came back to win the tie breaker."

"That was just a huge win," added Starzyk. "Just to come back through the deficit was big."

No.3 singles was dominated by Conley who swept Scruggs 6-4, 6-3 before No.4 singles player Sumrow polished off Keeler in similar fashion 6-4, 6-2.

Danielle Quistgard and Duncan also came away victorious as Quistgard defeated Scotten 6-1, 6-2 and Duncan topped Gee 6-3, 6-0.

Results for Saturday's contest against Cal Poly Pomona were unavailable by press time, however, on March 4, the Coyotes will face Grand Canyon University in Arizona before coming home for a two-game stand against Sonoma State on March 17 and San Francisco State on March 26.

CCAA's defending champions UC Davis made quick work of Cal State San Bernardino after posting a 5-0 victory.

The Aggies were playing two matches that day, which included a rain delay in its first match against UC San Diego. The game did not start on time for the Coyotes thus causing three singles bouts to be halted.

In the matches played, the Coyotes lost all three doubles bouts and also saw its two singles players lose.

Lady Yotes Grab Another Win at Home

By Danny B. Homaidan
Sports Writer

Cal State San Bernardino entered Saturday's game riding the coattails of a three-game winning streak, which has propelled them into a sixth place tie in the CCAA (California Collegiate Athletic Association) with U.C. San Diego.

Facing the cellar-dwelling Grand Canyon University Antelopes, the Lady Coyotes improved their ranking Saturday night with a 69-59 victory in front of 280 thrilled fans.

Yet, the Coyote triumph was no cakewalk as the Antelopes clawed and scraped for every point they earned.

At halftime, the Antelopes took a narrow 29-28 lead into the locker room. Despite this narrow margin, the Lady 'Yotes outscored the Antelopes 41-30 in the second half, thanks to the sixteen point heroics of sophomore guard Leilani Tirona. In the victory the 'Yotes advanced their winning streak to four, but more importantly, they rectified their conference record to a respectable .500-season mark.

The Coyotes came out of the gates charging, grabbing a crowd-pleasing 7-2 lead in the first four minutes of play. With the clock reading 10:12, Coyote point guard Amanda Fitzgerald penetrated to the hoop, connecting on an off-balance runner which tied the game at 13.

However, forward Leah Smith gave the Antelope team its first lead of 24-23 toward the end of the half, on a trey from the top of the circle. The Lady Coyotes ended the half down by one point and were led by Sharee Brown, who tallied seven points.

Top scorer Tirona took over the game in the second half, scoring two of her 16 points on an eighteen-foot jump shot with 9:15 remaining.

Finally, the 'Yotes slammed the door on the Antelopes by taking a commanding 64-54 lead with 1:18 left in the game. Tirona spurred the Coyotes to victory, scoring sixteen of the team's forty-one second half points.

In Friday's match, the Lady Coyotes defeated U.C. San Diego 63-51, thanks to forward Sharee Brown's 19 points and five rebounds.

Pope recalls first game as Broadcaster for Coyotes

By John D. Halcon

Radio's KGGI (99.1 FM) Pope is not only proud he graduated from Cal State San Bernardino, he is also very excited for what the future has in store for his old mater.

Pope, who began his first radio play-by-play broadcasting for Coyotes 14 years ago, came back to CSUSB as the play-by-play announcer during Friday's victory against UC San Diego.

"Actually, this is a flashback when I first started my broadcasting for the basketball team," said Pope. "The game was played, dare I say, 14 years ago, but it was against the same team [UC San Diego]."

According to Pope, it was to keep his Coyote spirit from slipping out of his mouth, but in the overall experience was bracing.

"It was like a homecoming for me," added Pope, who stars as host of the Jeff and The Guy Wake-Up Show for KGGI. "This was just a nice experience for me to come back here [CSUSB] and be able to announce in this kick-ass arena."

A lot has changed since Pope graduated in 1992 from Cal State San Bernardino. For one, Pope never recall having such a big arena, and secondly, he also mentioned that the old label of CSUSB being a "commuter school," has but vanished.

"Our graduation was held at a construction site," said Pope, referring to his glory years as an undergrad. "I mean, the speaker had a hard hat on, but now, it's like this school is running big-time."

"It just blows my mind that this university is becoming a real university," added Pope. "It's only a matter of time before this school can be a Division I college."

In addition, Pope also recognized that he could be returning to another broadcasting the Yotes.

Lights, camera, action, and still unstoppable.

Cal State San Bernardino's basketball team defeated UC San Diego 71-55 Friday while cameras rolled and Jeff Pope of 99.1 commented for the viewers at home.

The No. 3 ranked 'Yotes, who have the No. 1 defense in the California Collegiate Athletic Association, utilized their big-man and inside beef to create turnovers and rebounds that produced major dividends in the victory.

The first half of Friday's contest spelled disaster for the Tritons as the Coyotes jumped out to a 8-0 lead in the first two minutes. Defensively, CSUSB held the Tritons to 37 percent shooting from the field, while the 'Yotes shot 40 percent in the first half.

UCSD, the No.1 three-point shooting team in CCAA, launched the trifectas but got a few "you-bet-cha's." CSUSB defended the arc extremely well, allowing the Tritons to convert 10 out of the 29 threes attempted, which generated a thirty five percent shooting effort.

"They do a good job of shooting the basketball and we were able to defend them inside and not allow easy back doors, which forced them to try to beat us outside, and fortunately they were not able to do so," said Head Coach Larry Reynolds.

The Triton's long balls created long rebounds that produced easy turnovers for the CSUSB guards and wing players. This allowed the Coyotes to out rebound the Tritons 45-to-24.

Glenn Summerall grabbed eight rebounds, Bobby Burries snatched a game-high nine boards, Tellys Knight muscled down eight, and James Taylor cleaned the glass with five rebounds. "They shoot a lot of threes, which allow the guards to grab the ball and run with a lot of rebounds," contended Burries.

Summerall found his stroke Friday night, netting a game high twenty-three points, while UCSD C.J. Duffaut jacked up 18 points. CSUSB's Taylor went for 16, Robert Banks downed eleven points, and Knight contributed five points. Burries was battling the flu during the game, but his numbers seemed to be immune to the ill effects. He had eight points, a game high seven assists, three steals, and one block.

Friday night's victory over UCSD set the Coyotes at 23-1 overall and 18-1 in CCAA conference play.

Just another typical Friday win for the 'Yotes, the only difference being opponents were probably glued to their television sets watching Coach Reynolds' CSUSB squad pound another unwilling team into submission.

In Saturday's game, the Coyotes used some strong offensive performances to rout the Grand Canyon team 97-73 during the CCAA conference battle.

Five different players scored in double figures, with James Taylor leading the way for the Coyotes. Taylor collected 19 points, seven rebounds, and two steals.

Following Taylor was Bobby Burries, who scored 15 points at his normal guard position.

Glenn Summerall, Robert Banks and Lance Ray each scored 10 points apiece, as the Coyotes improved to 18-1 in CCAA and 23-1 overall.

The Coyotes will take its unblemished mark on the road against San Francisco State on March 1, then head to Sonoma State for its final regular-season contest on the following day.

The host of the Western Regional has yet to be announced.
