3 Candidates Vie For First Ward Seat

Robert Castaneda

The following article was written from this publication's files and author's personal knowledge.

Robert Castaneda, First Ward councilperson in the early 80's, has again, cast his candidacy for the First Ward council seat. He previously ran for the seat in 1989 and was defeated by the current councilperson, Esther Estrada, who has opted to run for the office of mayor in this election. There are three candidates who are vying for the first ward seat.

Mr. Castaneda and his wife Trini are long-time residents of the Westside of San Bernardino. He retired from Norton Air Force Base after a 30-year tenure.

David Lara

David Lara, a resident of the Westside of San Bernardino, announced his official candidacy for the First Ward in the March 2, municipal elections.

"I am a native son of the First Ward, our family members have been residents of this area since 1901. Being a long-time Westside resident has exposed me to the problems in our area. And at this time in my life, I have made a decision to serve my community and put forth my energies and assertively apply my business experiences to improve our First Ward Community," he stated in an interview.

Dear Editor:

The year just passed, 1992, was hailed as the "Year of the Woman" as more women than ever before were elected to the U.S. Senate and House and to state legislative posts. Here in San Bernardino County, 1993 has the potential to continue the trend on 1992, with amendment to "Year of the Latino Woman."

Tuesday night's vote (January 5) selecting Judy Valles Smith to fill Joe Baca's unexpired term on the San Bernardino Community College Board of Trustees showed the good, common sense people can demonstrate when asked to choose the most qualified candidate for a position. I applaud Judy's appointment and know that she brings an unparalleled experience and judgment to the College Board.

Voters in the City of San Bernardino will have the opportunity on March 2, 1993 to use good, common sense and select the most qualified individual for the job of Mayor. One candidate, a Latina, brings the depth of experience and the good judgement needed in that office - Esther Estrada.

Sincerely,
Ellisa S. Gutierrez

Supports Estrada

Dear Editor,

The removal of councilwoman Esther Estrada was a bad move on the mayor's part and Ralph Hernandez.

Both seemed to me as if they were trying to destroy Estrada's credibility. In this attempt, Holcomb only made himself look like the dictator he was when he banged his gavel down demanding the council to shut up during a council meeting, at a time when he was arguing with Penman.

Hernandez just seems to want credibility and respect so much that he too went along with the mayor's plan to get on the IDVA.

Credibility and respect cannot be won by a mere vote taken in council chambers, it must be gained through leadership shown in one's community.

Sincerely,
Ignacio Reynoso

Mr. Lara, a graduate of Aquinas High School, attended San Bernardino Valley College, with an emphasis on business administration. He has been involved in the real estate business for 16 years and currently is an Associate Vice President for Schneider Commercial Real Estate.

Realizing the downside of the economy and closure of Santa Fe and Norton Air Force, both major employers in the Inland Empire (and in the First Ward), Mr. Lara stressed the importance of a regional approach in working with the federal, state and local agencies in the development of an economic base and generation of highly skilled jobs.

"It is of utmost importance to enhance the financial package to bring the Pentagon's accounting agency to Norton and I support this effort," he said.

Reviewing the needs of the First Ward, Mr. Lara stressed the continuation of the current gang intervention program in the Westside, "This program is beginning to have a positive effect on gang members and it is essential that sufficient funding be appropriated in order that it be successful."

Other priorities in which he said he intends to work if elected is the Mount Vernon district. He feels that business persons should be encouraged to build businesses on Mount Vernon and he will work very closely with the San Bernardino Redevelopment Agency to implement the new plan developed for the area which will eventually create jobs.

Other services which he feels should be more fully provided in the Westside are social, health and economic services, either from the county or city agencies.

Mr. Lara has been involved with the JAYCEES, Toastmasters, Mental Health Association and Eagles Lodge. He is currently a member of the National Association of Real Estate Appraisers, National Association of Review Appraisers and Mortgage Appraisers and National and California Association of Realtors.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Lara said, "As we near the year 2000, we must have innovative approaches to our problems, whether social, economic or crime-related. We must utilize our resources more effectively, especially with the acute recession and diminishing tax revenue. We cannot perform in a business-as-usual pattern. If elected, I intend to use my experiences and the experiences of others to alleviate the many social and economic challenges which we are currently confronted with. My youth and energies are my best weapons. I intend to communicate with my constituents and encourage their involvement in the political and governmental processes. I sincerely accept the challenges of this office to serve my people in the First Ward."

Register & Vote in Municipal Elections
WASHINGTON, DC, December 15, 1992 - Americans of Mexican, Puerto Rican, and Cuban origin share a common agenda on a range of domestic issues but most do not identify themselves as part of a larger "Latino" political community, according to the findings of the Latino National Political Survey (LNPS), released in Washington this week.

The LNPS, the first nationwide examination of the political values, attitudes, and behavior of U.S. Latinos, challenges many widely held assumptions about this rapidly growing segment of the population and provides previously unavailable data on the diverse nature of Hispanics in America today. The multi-university research project was funded jointly by the Ford Foundation and the Pew,Welker, Spencer, and Tinker foundations.

Among the survey's many unexpected findings:

- Most "Hispanics" think of themselves as neither Hispanic or Latino. They prefer instead to be identified by their country of origin;

- Most U.S.-born Hispanics use English as their primary language;

- Contrary to popular stereotypes, a majority of U.S. Latinos do not support traditional roles for women;

- Most do not have a particular interest in Latin America and do not support increased immigration; and

- The overwhelming majority of Latino citizens expresses a high degree of patriotism toward the United States.

"Our findings challenge the notion of a distinct U.S.A. Hispanic community with shared cultural, political, and economic interests," says LNPS research director Rodolfo O. de la Garza. What emerges instead is a portrait of the nation's more than 21 million Hispanics as a diverse group of individuals who are entering the mainstream of American society, optimistic about prospects for the future, yet still troubled by the perception of widespread discrimination against Latinos in the United States.

"While the results suggest that there may be a basis for a national Latino political community, they also make it clear that it will not spring primarily from a shared cultural heritage," observes de la Garza, who is Mike Hogg Professor of Community Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin.

The survey also makes it clear that the heated debates in intellectual and political circles over the use of "Latino" versus "Hispanic" have little relevance for the individuals surveyed, a majority of whom prefer to be identified by national origin.

Most Latinos, including Puerto Ricans and Cubans, report little interaction across national-origin groups and do not believe they have very much in common with each other. While most Latinos place themselves in the moderate to conservative range of the political spectrum, they favor increased government spending in a range of domestic policy areas and look to government to solve the problems that most concern them, suggesting the basis of shared liberal agendas. Yet, voters prefer "hot button" issues such welfare, abortion, affirmative action, and the death penalty, views are mixed and consensus elusive.

"Both political parties claim to have lock on certain segments of the Latino vote and advertise their clout attracting "Hispanic market," yet scant information exists about the vital needs and concerns of these Americans," says William A. Diaz, Program Officer in the Ford Foundation's Governance and Public Policy Program.

"By providing comprehensive and reliable data on U.S. Hispanics, the landmark Latino National Political Survey fills a critical knowledge gap to keep policy makers and the U.S. public better informed," says Diaz.

In addition to Professor de la Garza, other members of the multi-university LNPS research team are Angelo Falcon, President of the Institute for Puerto Rican Policy in New York City, P. Chris Garcia, Professor of Political Science at the University of New Mexico, and John A. Garcia, Associate Professor and Chair of Political Science at the University of Arizona.

The LNPS was conducted between August 1989 and April 1990 and is notable both for its comprehensiveness and its targeting of specific national-origin groups. The sample consists of 1,546 Mexicans, 516 Puerto Ricans and 602 Cubans in 60 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas, representing 91 percent of the U.S. population of these groups. Also interviewed were 598 non-Latinos, including 456 non-Latinos of Hispanic origin; 64 percent of Cubans say they are Republicans. Significant portions of the Mexicans and Cubans who identified themselves as Republicans are former Democrats.

The complete findings of the Latino National Political Survey have been compiled in a databook entitled, "Latino Voices: Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban Perspectives on American Politics." For a more detailed summary of findings of the LNPS, or for information on obtaining a copy of Latino votes, please contact Lynn Peebles at 212-481-7000.

Childcare Cancer Support Group

A new Childhood Cancer Support Group has been established by the Riverside Medical Clinic Foundation, working in cooperation with Dr. Ramy Saleh, a pediatric oncologist with the Riverside Medical Clinic. The group, which plans to meet monthly, is intended to provide mutual support and friendship for parents and families of childhood cancer patients. Membership in the group is free.

"We want to create a mutual support system for families of children who have cancer," said Dr. Saleh. "We believe the group can provide empathy, ease frustration, overcome loneliness and end social isolation."

Dave Lee, the foundation's executive director, noted that by creating an atmosphere of friendship the group can provide a non-threatening setting where parents and their children can just relax knowing that others in the group have had similar experiences.

The group meets at 6:30 p.m., the second Monday of each month, at the Riverside Y.W.C.A., 8172 Magnolia. Anyone wishing additional information may contact the Foundation office 682-2753.

Child Care help may be on the way

Do you need help in paying for child care while you work, are in training or are looking for a job? Don't despair. Help could be on the way.

The San Bernardino County Department of Public Social Services has money available in several child care assistance programs all designed to help families with qualifying income meet those child care costs.

For instance, you could be a family of four with a monthly income of $2,387 or less and qualify for this help.

"The need for child care has never been more acute," said Pat Wolff, the department's community relations officer.

Wolff attributes this to the growing numbers of one-parent families and the economic reality that in order to survive today most two-parent families find it necessary for both parents to work.

There are programs designed to assist both single and two-parent families, as well as families with special needs, with children from birth to three years; three to five years; and five to 13 years.

For more information on any of these programs, call (909) 387-5135.

New 1993 Code Changes

California motorists must adjust to nearly 400 vehicle code changes in the coming year. Following are a few of the most important of these as compiled by the Automobile Club, the CHP, and the DMV:

- The most well-publicized change is in the use of seat belts. Officers next month will be able to stop a car for suspected violations and may issue citations to persons not wearing seat belts. Currently the law allows the officer to write a citation for not using a seat belt but only after stopping the vehicle for some other violation. After Jan. 1, 1993 the officer may stop any motorist if there is suspicion that the motorist is not wearing a seat belt.

- After Jan. 1, car dealers will be prohibited from selling any used passenger car made between 1972 and 1990 unless it has both shoulder and lap harnesses for front and back seats.

- The Freeway Service Patrol Act passed this year will take effect in 1993. It has both shoulder and lap harnesses also have amber warning light systems.

- AB 408 details a comprehensive plan to make parking violations a civil rather than a criminal offense. A civil process will handle violations, not the courts, although appeals still will go through the court system. Failure to pay a parking penalty will be forwarded to the DMV and that agency will place a hold on vehicle registration until parking tickets are cleared. The plan becomes operative next July 1.

Oscar, the Emmy, the Grammy and the Tony. She has, in fact, won the Emmy twice - in 1977 for a variety appearance on The Muppets, and in 1973 for a dramatic appearance on The Rockford Files. The Oscar was for her performance as "Anita" in the 1962 motion picture, West Side Story, the Tony was for her 1975 triumph on Broadway as "Googie Gomez" in The Rita and the Grammy was for her 1972 performance on Company Album. Another way she also picked up dozens of other show business awards, notably the "Golden Apple" Cue Award and the 1968 "Joseph Jefferson Award" as best actress in Chicago's theatrical season that year. In 1985 she repeated her Chicago triumph and was awarded the prestigious "Sarah Siddons Award" for her portrayal of "Olive Madison" in the female version of "The Odd Couple." Having thus "done it all" in so many facets of show business, Ms. Moreno, early in 1978 turned her attention for the first time to live performances, creating an act which has attracted outstanding critical acclaim.

Rita Moreno was born Rosa Delores Alveria in Humaco, a small town near the famous rain forest in Puerto Rico. When she was five years old, she and her mother moved to New York and the following year she started her dancing lessons. At age thirteen she had made her Broadway debut in Skydrift which starred Eli Wallach. Then in the true traditions of Hollywood, a talent scout arranged a meeting for seventeen-year-old Miss Moreno with Louis B. Mayer and she was signed to a contract with MGM. Since then her career has advanced steadily. She made some twenty-five films early in her career but was cast in too many as a "Mexican Spitfire" or an "Indian Maiden." Among the films she made during this period was Unamused, "Seven Cities of Gold," *The Lieutenant Wore Skirts," "Gardens of Evil," and was featured as "Tuptim" in The King and I. It was only after she won an Oscar for her performance as 'Anita' in West Side Story, which gained international acclaim, that she was finally recognized as a major talent.

In 1962 she moved to London where she was featured in Hal Prince's productions of "She Loves Me" and then returned to New York to star in Lorraine Hansberry's "The Sign in Sidney Barstine's Window." On Broadway she has also appeared as the female lead with Robert Shaw in the Broadway production of Gantry. She was also cast opposite Jimmy Coco in The Last of the Red Hot Lovers, and in an award-winning role in The National Health. Ms. Moreno then starred in "The Rita" for which she received the Tony Award. In 1981 she returned to Broadway once again opposite Jimmy Coco in Wally's Cafe, where she was seen on Broadway as the lead in the female version of "The Odd Couple."

In 1967 Ms. Moreno resumed her career playing opposite Marlon Brando in "The Night Of The Following Day," then with James Garner in Marlowe, as Alan Arkin's girlfriend in "Popi" and in Mike Nichol's production of "Carnal Knowledge." She then starred in the film version of "The Rita," where she repeated the outrageous character "Googie Gomez," a lady of little talent and great courage. Her most recent film was with Alan Alda and Carol Burnett entitled "The Four Seasons."

Rita Moreno is a member of the Board of Directors of Third World Cinema, a company which is interested in creating opportunities for the minority groups and has served as a member of the Theatre Panel of the Board of Directors of the Alvin Alley Dance Company, as well as many other worthwhile organizations. Ms. Moreno is at present a member of the very prestigious Presidential Fellowship Committee.
