Time is up for ASI elections

Matthew Taylor
Managing Editor

As the dust settles on the campus, everyone can see that the end is near. But even with the quarter coming to a close there are still some issues that have not been completely settled. The one major element of campus life that hasn't been solved is the future of the Associated Students Incorporated.

Last week the folly of one of ASI's committees actions was exposed and it caused a wave of controversy but at the same time it brought awareness to the campus of what is truly important: the students.

The resulting actions of the Review Board have brought about the circulation of a petition for a re-election. The only problem now is that even with the petition being circulated there is now no time left to do anything with it. When the initiative was brought up about the petition it was stipulated that there would be a needed ten percent of the student population, was needed about 1600 students, to sign the petition.

On May 23 it was stipulated that the petition would be out and then turned in complete by May 28 and on May 29 all the signatures would begin to be checked for validity. May 30 would be used to publicize the initiative vote, which allows for the actual reelection. Then on May 31 and June 3 there be the initiative votes and after that on June 4 there would be the initial counting of those votes. Leaving June 5 as the only day for voting. June 6 would be used to count the votes of the actual reelection and then finally, if necessary, there would be a run-off on June 7.

Even with this primary timeline the problem of time still existed. According to an email sent by ASI President Luis Portillo "We [had] a serious lack of time in two areas 1) the time remaining in the quarter in which to conduct all of this, and 2) The time in which the individuals responsible will have available." Portillo continued on about this time constraint about the work, "The majority of this work will take place a week before

CUP swimming in controversy

CUP held an open information session for all campus members on May 23 in the Commons; but, in attendance there were only fellows, two students and the rest were CUP staff.

No time, moreover, was allotted at the end of the forum for audience questions concerning the director, considering that past issues and recent questions about CUP are unresolved.

The CUP matter is like unpeeling an onion with many layers.

First, there is CUP's own account of itself at the forum. Director Robert Eberst led off with CUP's mission and five long-term goals—advancing culture, arts, workforces, health, economics, family, community.

"If CUP is successful in pursuing these priorities, the affluence, health, safety and general well-being of the people in our service

A fire began around 11:45 am and burned in the hills behind CSUSB Friday, sparking the interest of the students. No residents were evacuated, however Old Waterman Canyon Road, State Route 18 was closed. No injuries were reported, however several structures were damaged. Amongst these was the west wing of the Arrowhead Springs Hotel and destroyed a bathhouse and three other maintenance buildings nearby.

Ambassadors Needed

The Student Ambassadors Society (SAS) is searching for students to be nominated to represent CSUSB.

The SAS is looking for qualified students to help increase the awareness and appreciation for CSUSB. Those chosen for the program will work closely with the President, the Alumni Association and the University Advancement staff, representing CSUSB at various event and meetings involving alumni, donors, legislators, business and education leader, and other visitors to the campus.

Students considered for the program need to be in good academic standing, have leadership potential and are passionate about CSUSB.

To nominate a student to represent CSUSB, please contact the Alumni Office at Ext. 5008. Please provide SAS with the student's full name and email address or phone number where they can be reached.

CSUSB places 3rd in college bowl

For the second year in a row, graduate students in Health Service Administration in the Department of Health and Science and Human Ecology gained third place honors in the annual college Bowl sponsored by Health Care Executives of Southern California.

The event, held on April 25 at Loma Linda University, matched teams from many graduate programs in Health Services Administration throughout Southern California in a rigorous "Weakest Link" type contest with rapid-fire questions and answers. In the first round, CSUSB defeated Loma Linda University to proceed to the semi-finals where the team lost in a close contest to the University of Southern California. The team from UCLA ultimately defeated USC to take honors, the CSUSB team placed ahead of Cal State Los Angeles, Cal State Long Beach, Cal State Northridge, and Loma Linda University.

The team from CSUSB was composed of team Captain Mobe Montesa, Linda Sroda, Priya Suresh, and alternate Dionne Livingston who are all members of the Student Chapter of the American College of Healthcare Executives, a national organization of healthcare leaders. Coach for the CSUSB team was Dan Fahey, DPA, Associate Professor in Health Science and Human Ecology.

American families spending more for education

Cynthia Heaton
Staff Writer

Today 84% of the American Public believes that having a college degree is important if you want to get ahead, and most families are seeing a larger percentage of their income go to pay for that college degree.

A study prepared by the National Center for Public Policy and Higher Education indicates; even in the face of these rising costs more families than ever are sending their children to college. But, while a majority of Americans still believe that colleges are doing a pretty good job of preparing students for the work world, only 47% think the $7,000 to $18,000 a year price tag is justified.

In 1980 families falling into the lowest income bracket spent 13% of the family income on tuition at public 4-year colleges and universities. The same tuition in 2000 took 25% of their income. Middle-income families are now spending 11% of their total income; this figure up from 6%. It is only families falling into the top income bracket that continue to pay 2% percent of their total income for college.

Families and students are managing these rising costs in numerous ways; more students are working and working longer hours; some are taking fewer classes increasing the time to graduate; and others are choosing less expensive colleges.

However, the most common way people are dealing with these rising costs is to borrow more money to help pay for their college education. In 1980 loans accounted for 45% and grants for 52% for federal student financial aid. In 2000 loans represented 58% of federal student financial aid and grants represented 41%.

While state and federal aid for college bound students has increased over time, the rate of increase has not been enough to meet the demands of rising tuition. During the economic woes of the early 90's, appropriations for higher education could not keep pace with the rising costs, and similar trends are being seen in the current recession. The long-term consequences of repaying these loans means students may have to delay saving for retirement or buying a home. But the cost to society may be even greater. As students seek to get out from under debt, they may avoid lower paying careers such as teaching and social services.

COMPARISON OF COLLEGE TUITION BETWEEN 1980 AND 2000

area will be measurably improved over time," he said.

Among projects he mentioned were efforts to retain nurses in the San Bernardino service area to offset severe shortages at St. Bernardino and San Bernardino Community Hospital. He also stated that CUP has "succeeded at 60+ accomplishments." These include assistance and funding to the College of Business and Administration, as well as inventorying at that College, the planning of two more inventories for the Colleges of Natural Sciences and Arts and Letters.

He also mentioned that CUP has "generated successful publications" and awarded 53 fellowships to various colleges on campus. Close to the end of the formally presented forum, CUP's Associate Director Lee Hanson stated that, "20 years from now the Inland Empire will be a better place and CUP wants people to recognize that the change is partially because of CSUSB."

But then under that onion layer is the firing of Service Learning Director Michelle Golden late in the fall quarter of 2001. She was asked to resign but when she refused to do so, she was allegedly fired for an unclear mixture of personal and political reasons.

Faulty Colleagues met with Provost Louis Fernandez to oppose her dismissal. Allegedly one outcome was that the Provost encouraged her to apply for a tenure-track sociology position, but she chose not to do so. Golden continued the academic year as an adjunct professor in The Women's Studies department as well as the Sociology department.

When her former program assistant, student Angelic Navarro, wrote Provost Louis Fernandez out of her concern about her firing and then met with him later, he asked her few questions about Golden's performance, and thanked her for her time. Navarro feels as though her input and experiences with the office of Service learning and CUP were not valued because she was a student.

Later, according to Navarro, the Provost allegedly told an ASI representative who had worked with Golden and was told that her termination was a personnel matter. In a letter Golden wrote to the Provost on Dec. 3 that was given to the Chronicle by one of her supporters, she stated in its first paragraph that she had a number of substantial concerns about CUP.

"I believe that Dr. Richard

"organizational pattern of carelessness, inaccuracy and/or deception in CUP."

Then there is the onion layer of who should succeed Golden. This issue has remained up in the air since her firing in early December 2001. At the Forum on May 23 one outsider asked whether candidates for her position would be publicly interviewed. The answer was that, because it was not officially a faculty position but instead a staff position, CUP was not mandated to open it to the campus, but subsequently they did it.

However, since the forum, CUP has announced that the candidates will make public presentations, this was posted on the campus-wide network as of May 29.

Then there is the third onion-layer, which is the resolution that the Faculty Senate introduced in early May, proposing changes in the CSUSB administration's policy regarding "ancillary units" such as CUP and other institutes on campus.

The policy was not approved in a vote by the Faculty Senate's Executive Council that went 12 to 12, with the president abstaining.

The following justifications for changing the policy had appeared in an e-mail on the campus e-mail network prior to the vote.

"1. President Karnig asked EPRC to review the current policy on Institutes and Centers. Specifically, he asked the committee to: consider whether the distinction between 'Institutes' and 'Centers' was useful, to evaluate the effectiveness of the three-year review cycle, and to consider whether the different review process for 'Institutes' and 'Centers' was useful. This revised policy addresses these concerns by:

o Eliminating the distinction between 'Institutes' and 'Centers' and re-classifying all of these organizations as 'Ancillary Units.'

o Distinguishing between probationary and active Ancillary Units while also creating a means to terminate an Ancillary Unit. The latter brings the policy into compliance with Executive Order 751.

o Changing the time between reviews to depend upon the status of the Ancillary Unit: probationary Ancillary Units will undergo close scrutiny (3 years) while active Ancillary Units will be reviewed every 5 years.

2. The current policy is sufficiently vague as to allow for differing interpretations of the procedures. The revised policy gives more specific information regarding:

o The qualifications of the Ancillary Unit Executive director(s) who must be tenure-track faculty and the Director of Operations who may be a staff appointment
o The designation of an evaluator for the Director of Operations
o The duties and membership of the Executive Council

o The duties and membership of Advisory Boards

o The appropriate allocation of monies to Ancillary Units which have not yet been approved

o The content of the proposal for the Ancillary Unit

o The approval process

o The content and due date for the annual report

o The composition of the Review committee

o The review process

A transitional period to allow current Ancillary Units to (a) make the necessary changes, (b) be reviewed, and (c) have their status as "probationary" or "active" determined.

The next presentation will be in PL 241a on June 4 from 11:30-12:30

Eberst's comments in my six-month evaluation and the related recommendations for termination were not a fair and honest response to my job performance as CSUSB's Director of Service-Learning," she wrote. "Instead, I view Dr. Eberst's actions and recommendations—particularly given his collaboration with Dr. Lee Hanson on this matter—as an unethical reaction to my critical questions about CUP's practices and my related commitment to high-quality and solid work."

finals and it is also a very busy time of the quarter. With this in mind we had to make sacrifices and chose to only allow one day of voting in each election and save Monday the 10th of June as a day in which we can take care of any business that may unexpectedly arise." (A side note in regards to the timeline status, according to Portillo with him making the timeline is that the) University informed him that it did not want the elections to interfere with the finals week because that is one of the most stressful times and they feel that the students should be relieved of any unnecessary stress.

After that initial timeline the spearhead of the reelection, Ezekial Bonillas, went to Luis Portillo with a portion of the signatures and then asked for a minor extension of about a day. The extension would already be putting a strain on the election itself because the timeline was eliminating important days and would be running into finals week. So Portillo informed Bonillas of the problem and extended it one more day until the Wednesday, May 29. The petition was still not completed and it no longer was feasible to try and attempt an election. There was a proposal that was brought up that wanted to do the two sets of voting at the same time. In that election there would be the initial vote for the reelection of candidates and then also there would be the candidates on the ballot that you could also vote for. Portillo and some University Officials agreed that because this would be confusing. It also would be putting some candidates at an unfair advantage because you are giving the public an opportunity to vote on something that may not even be passed and during the campaigning the students may be coerced into voting yes for a candidate and not for a reelection.

Another point that was brought up about the petition was whether or not Portillo could have done more. According to the by-laws of the ASI he did fulfill his duties. If he had been given a completed petition then he would have been able to call a special election in which the items on the timeline could be carried out. When asked about his authority with the Review Board and whether or not he could have overturned their decisions Portillo answered, "No, I cant do anything about them because they are like the supreme court and even according to our by-laws their decisions are final."

A fact is that the petition was not turned in and so now there is no way to have another reelection vote this quarter. That leaves the people seeking a reelection with only one option, that a recall could happen once the newly elected officers take office. When asked about that option Bonillas said "I could do that in the fall but my main concern is the students and a vital part of the transition of office takes place during the summer and I don't feel that it would be fair to the students."

Air show presents pieces of history

Sean Halbert
Staff Writer

Celebrating the alliance between Great Britain and the United States that has stood since before the First World War, the Chino Planes of Fame Air Museum held it's annual air show at Chino airport. Over 60 World War II aircraft were on display, as well as several current military fighters.

The air show's main focus was American and British aircraft during World War II. Aircraft on display included the P-51 Mustang, P-38 lightening, Hawker Sea Fury and the Hurricane. Over 30 of the aircraft on display were flying at one point in the show, giving the crowd a thrill as they thundered overhead. During the show, several dogfights were reenacted, as well as ground attacks.

Aside from the vintage military aircraft that were taking part in the show, there were also professional aerobatics pilots like Rob Harrison. Harrison has been performing aerobatics at air shows for over 10 years, and is one of just over one hundred people in the nation certified by the FAA (Federal Aviation Association) to perform many of the stunts he specializes in. When asked why he chose to fly air shows, he replied "Air show flying is the cutting edge of aviation. Many people say that what I do with my airplane is crazy or impossible, it's just nice to stick it in there eye."

Also performing at the air show was one of the few wing walkers in the country, Margaret Stivers. She has been performing wing-walking aerobatics for more than ten years. During part of her routine, she climbs out of her airplane, and up onto the top of the wings, where she straps herself in and rides as the airplane loops and dives. Stivers felt that the air show was important because if it's historical significance. "It's a living history, a legacy from World War II, that many people don't know about. Seeing these airplanes here today flying is an experience that not many people get. The younger generations need to see and know about these airplanes before they are all gone."

In drastic contrast to the older aircraft, were the Air Force A-10 Thunderbolt II, one of the Air Force's premiere ground attack aircraft. This airplane was used extensively in the Persian Gulf War, Kosovo, and most recently in Afghanistan. With the reputation of the world most effective tank killer, the A-10 took to the sky and gave a great demonstration of today's air power.

Mark Foster, who was one of the coordinators from the Planes of Fame Air Museum, had this to say about the show. "This air show is designed to display air power from the Second World War, and celebrate the alliance between the United States, and Great Britain. Most importantly, we want to recognize the British as our biggest allies. People who come to this show get to see the best Great Britain and we had to offer during W.W. II. These Airplanes all have there own story, and each one in some way helped to win the war"

CSUSB will be missing Messing.

Sometimes you find special students that are very diligent and dedicated who just want to make a difference in the world. CSUSB student Jill Messing is one of them. Messing has accomplished a great deal during her three and a half years here at Cal State. With a double major in psychology and sociology, Messing is getting ready for graduation in June, and then going off to UC Berkeley for graduate school in the fall.

Moving here from Washington D.C., Messing came here to California and took care of business immediately as a student. While here she has won the Phi Kappa Phi Honors Society National Award, and she also won Outstanding Undergraduate for the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences. To even be qualified for these awards, one must apply for the award, and have recommendations for their professors. For the outstanding undergraduate award she had to be nominated. She also has just taken the honors for best undergrad paper at the Social Sciences Student Research Conference.

Hoping to get her Ph.D. in social welfare, Messing wants to continue in research and work with foster children after school.

"I want to help change the institutions of social welfare and social care," she says.

Messing believes her success as a student is due to the help of her professors and a supportive faculty. Also staying driven and goal-oriented, staying busy is a big help too she says.

"I believe in working hard, and paying attention, and I also just enjoy school," she

CLUB COYOTE GIVES IT STRAIGHT UP

By Susie Medina
The Scene Editor

Friday night walking into Student Union, where students usually relax and pass through in between classes, was packed with students who stayed late to attend Club Coyote. Except instead of students walking around with sodas and pizzas, there were virgin margaritas and chicken wings; instead of books and papers in their arms, there were pamphlets of alcohol awareness and drinking.

The Alcohol Advisory Council (AAC) along with Student Union Program Board and ASI to name a few put on the event.

"We wanted to show students that you can have fun without drinking, there has been $50,000 given by the Chancellor of CSU and President Karnig to create an awareness on campus for drinking," said Howard Wang, Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs and Chair for AAC.

The theme was a club scene, with loud music played by a disc jockey in the Fireplace Lounge, virgin mixed drinks or mocktails being served, and games of pool, arcades and NBA basketball being watched. The walls of Student Union were pounding with excitement from the intense game and the social atmosphere of the party-like amusement.

Going along with alcohol awareness in mind, faculty from the health science departments played games where students had to walk around with 'drunk goggles.' The pair of glasses distorted the vision of the sober student prove coordination changes with drinking, and even more so when driving.

"It was my favorite part was that obstacle thing I just did. That was so much fun! I didn't realize the glasses would impair the walking, which was interesting," said student Haedei Chrey.

Students that attended received everything for free: drinks, food, and games. All they needed to do was visit any one of the four tables with information pamphlets, pick one up, and they'd receive a blue ticket. The blue ticket, when presented at any bar or drink station, gave a virgin mixed drink of choice or two appetizer items. Also, anyone who took the time to fill out a questionnaire, received a raffle ticket to enter a drawing where the prizes were one quarter's tuition or a big screen television.

It was worth coming whether you were concerned with alcoholism or not. Student Rommel Davinagracia believes "people need to be aware of their bodies and their limit and events like this remind them of it."

Some students were only there for the pool and chess tournaments though, like Omar Sanchez who was here "to make money."

Api Neru Lealofi was here to represent his resident hall Tokay "because I'm an R.A. and want to show my residents that I'm involved with my community."

Whatever the reason for people showing up, all that did were reminded of the dangers of drinking and got to have a good time without it, which was the goal of the whole event.

This was the first year doing this type of event but there is much research that is to be going into drinking behavior that should be emphasized next year. Its information that, much like this years, will not be sugarcoated but given straight up.

Column for the graduating senior

"Useless Clichés and Some Friendly Advice"

By Jorgie Salazar
Staff Writer

Well, it is finally that time of year. Moreover, if you are part of the lucky ones to be graduating, I salute you. Look back on all of your experiences, good and bad, those might have been the greatest years of your life. Whether you made the most of your days or just going through the motions, you made it. Just make sure you learned enough to get a job after college. Fingers crossed.

All of this is stuff you've probably all heard before. But the difference is that months after graduation when you are working full time and don't have so much free time to just hang out with your friends, that's when you want to sit around and reminence about those good times. You won't know what you have until it's gone. So relax and cherish the time you have right now. Consider it the calm before the storm.

If you don't already have every step of your own transition planned out, don't worry. All the planning in the world cannot act in response with the obstacles that arise in life. You can plan a pretty picnic, but you can't predict the weather. Don't break your neck in order to put things in together. Regardless of what you do, life goes on. You can put it on hold and fix things and resume where you left off. It's just going to happen. It is like jumping from a diving board, just worry about not belly-flopping, gravity will take care of the dive.

Let's keep this between us; I have discovered the secret of life. Life is not the things you do, it's what happens to you and how you react to them.

Also, don't be in a hurry. Life is a marathon not a sprint. Don't feel as if you have to be established and successful in the first few months after graduation. Pace yourself and work hard, persevere and there is nothing you can't achieve. As my Mom used to tell me in grade school, "You have to work hard for anything good, now go study."

When you do get that ultimate job, remember that you need to go through a transition. No longer can you go to work in a dirty T-shirt and jeans. There is a lot of growing up to do in the next few years. This is probably the last thing of your minds but enjoy the here and now, because later on you'll have to straighten out and fly straight.

To recap, enjoy the things you have going on right now, in the near future it will barely slightly resemble anything you've known. Plan ahead, but don't map out every step. Work hard and persevere. Because later on things will be different.

Enjoy your successes, but don't rest on you laurels. So go, you're on to the next thing.

Understanding Islam through knowledge

By Jason Kauffin
Staff Writer

The word Jihad has become infamous with terror. Can you believe the word means to struggle for a better life?

Over 10,000 American Troops are Muslim. In the United States there are close to a million muslims currently living here.

The name California even has Arabic Origins. Fear recently heightened with the tragedy in New York, on 911, has caused a growth of negative propaganda towards the Islamic faith.

But is this religion really a local recruiting center for the fanatical and the aggressive terrorist? Is Islam so distant from American culture that war is almost inevitable?

The truth about the customs and the practice of the Islamic religion was the topic at an open discussion hosted by the University Diversity committee, department of foreign languages and literatures, department of history, ISLAMicity.com, and the human assistance and development international.

The purpose of this event was to educate the general public on what the Islamic religion was about and the contributions that Islamic people have made to the world.

Guest speaker was Ahmad H. Sakir Ph.D held in the Pine room located in the lower commons who gave a slide presentation on the different disciplines that are practiced from someone who is of the Islamic Faith?

Dr. Sakir is currently the director of the Islamic Education in Walnut and is Preident for the foundation of Islamic Knowledge. He discussed in detail the different holy cities of worship. They were Mecca, the mosque of the prophet in Medina, and the Dome of The Rock. He commented that the Dome is held currently under Israeli control.

Another point brought up was that he had been to many Muslim cities such as Tim Buck.

Dr. Sakir stated that people of all races lived peacefully and with no crime, and were rich in mathematics and the sciences, until contact with Christian Europeans in the mid 1400's. He also pointed out important medical advancements that were developed by Muslims during the Middle Ages that are still in use today.

He pointed out many different obligations of someone who was of the Islamic like, diet, which consisted of no flesh of a carnivore, and a minimal supply of dairy products. The use of drugs and alcohol are strictly forbidden as is premarital.

A Muslim must practice the five pillars of Islman that act as a basic code of morality for their faith.

The five pillars are Creed =Shadhada, Prayers =(Salat) fasting =(Siyam), Purifying Tax =(Zakat), Pilgrimage=(Hajj.)

During the presentation he pointed out that Muslims must be respectful of all religions and human life. He also brought a copy of the Korran and had Baklavah available the audience.

The practice of Islam is very disciplined and peaceful religion, that has a great number of diverse followers and can be perverted like any other religion.

Students take stand against tobacco

Special to the Chronicle

Smoking is a public's health issue. Everyone has the right to breathe clean air when in public, on campus and at work.

Secondhand smoke contains 4,000 substances of which 40 are known to cause cancer, including carbon monoxide, ammonia, arsenic, formaldehyde, and cyanide, which make its harmful and deadly to those who inhale it.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, estimates that 53,000 Americans die each year from exposure to secondhand smoke from preventable illnesses, such as heart disease, lung cancer, and many other respiratory illnesses, including asthma.

In an effort to protect the health of the communities, San Bernardino Valley College MeCHA members and the Associated Students, MeCHA de Riverside Community College and Ballet Folklorico de UCR took a "stand to stop pollution and agenda of the Tobacco Industry and committed themselves to provide a smoke-free environment during their on/off campus events."

According to the Journal of the American Medical Association (Aug. 9, 2000), less than one-third of American college students are current smokers, leaving nearly 70% to be nonsmokers. Students, professors, and administrators have the right to conduct activities in a healthy environment void of secondhand smoke.

Therefore, college and universities have the responsibility to protect the health of students and faculty from deadly and poisonous toxic substances found in secondhand smoke.

19th Amendement is Passed giving women the right to vote

The 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, guaranteeing women the right to vote, is passed by Congress and sent to the states for ratification. The women's suffrage movement was founded in the mid-19th century by women who had become politically active through their work in the abolitionist and temperance movements.

In July 1848, 240 woman suffragists, including Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott, met in Seneca Falls, New York, to assert the right of women to vote. Female enfranchisement was still largely opposed by most Americans, and the distraction of the North-South conflict and subsequent Civil War precluded further discussion.

During the Reconstruction Era, the 15th Amendment was adopted, granting African American men the right to vote, but the Republican-dominate Congress failed to expand its progressive radicalism into the sphere of gender.

In 1869, the National Woman Suffrage Association, led by Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, was formed to push for an amendment to the U.S.

Constitution. Another organization, the American Woman Suffrage Association, led by Lucy Stone, was organized in the same year to work through the state legislatures. In 1890, these two societies were united as the National American Woman Suffrage Association. That year, Wyoming became the first state to grant women the right to vote.

By the beginning of the 20th century, the role of women in American society was changing drastically; women were working more, receiving a better education, bearing fewer children, and several

Battle of the rocks: A Greek just wants their space

By Tiffany Rolland
Staff Writer

Should we be made to turn our backs on what and who we are? How can one show that they are proud of who they are? Colors, symbols, signs, and echoing calls are used to signify what we belong to and where we belong.

If you consider yourself to be a brother or sister to a fraternity or sorority this may seem all too familiar.

Phi Beta Sigma and the Omegas take pride in self and their school. They followed the necessary procedures to ensure the accessibility of campus ground for displaying their colors and letters.

The Director of Student Leadership Development, Kristin Hansen, in charge of making sure the proper procedures are taken when groups are active on campus, was not available for comments.

We did not know that this would cause a problem. This school sits on 400+ acres. The ground that is occupied by these two groups is kept nice and clean. (Cal State official with inside knowledge).

The Omegas used purple and gold rocks to display their colors and the Phi Beta Sigmas used potted flowers to display their name within secure settings.

These two fraternities obtain two ideal spots for their plots. It was said that some may be jealous and that could be the reason for the uproar. People pass by and ask who gave you permission to do a plot. Some think that all of this was done without any okay said, Regionald Ross.

Juan Luna of the Delta Sigma Phi stated, "I have no problem with what the Omegas and Phi Beta Sigmas did. It looks nice and it is not hurting anyone. As long as they receive permission they should have access to do what they want."

The president of Phi Beta Sigma, Warren Carey, stated, "the two Greek organizations were reprimanded. Thereafter, a meeting was set up with officials of Student Leadership Development to derive a policy for any type of display on campus from now on.

Black Greek organizations uplift their communities. The rocks and flowers are not here just for color or to make the ground look nice. This causes people to ask questions about the organizations and to get to know the ones behind these symbols of unity. Country, a member of Phi Beta Sigma,

It is the thoughts of these organizations that Cal State would like to induce school pride and an atmosphere where people can feel comfortable.

The Omegas and Phi Beta Sigmas support Cal State in doing so. They are not looking for fairness but justice for all.

Cal State offers future educators opportunity to teach in Mexico

Dean Patricia Arlin led a group of professors (Ruth Norton, Kathy Weed, Enrique Murillo, and Rosalie Giacchino-Baker) to Hermosillo, Mexico from Oct. 7-10, 2001, to sign a formal memorandum of understanding with the Instituto Mexicano Americano de Relaciones Culturales (IMARC). Founded in 1964 as a binational center, this private school now has two campuses, which operate as a non-profit organization governed by an advisory board under the leadership of Patricia Arias, Executive Director.

During the past year and one-half, CSUSB's College of Education has placed a total of three student teachers at IMARC, a bilingual elementary school whose dual language program is a model for developing students' competencies in Spanish and English. This type of program is advocated by the State of California as one of that supports bilingual/bicultural development for all. At IMARC, children spend the first two years (kindergarten and pre-first grade) immersed in English. In grades 1-6, they spend half the day studying in Spanish and the other half in English. In addition to the regular elementary program, IMARC also provides English instruction to children, teenagers, and adults in the afternoon and evenings.

IMARC, located in Hermosillo, the capital of the State of Sonora and a city of about 700,000 people, is approximately four hours south of Tucson, Arizona. While there, CSUSB students live with Mexican families who provide most meals.

A 11 CSUSB elementary credential candidates who have successfully completed the first of their two-quarter student teaching requirement are eligible to teach at IMARC. For candidates working toward a crosscultural, language and academic development (CLAD) credential, no Spanish skills are necessary to teach in the program. For those working toward a bilingual CLAD credential, teaching is done in both English and Spanish.

For information about the program, please contact Rosalie Giacchino-Baker, Enrique Murillo, or Ruth Norton.

The year retires with 'Desire'

By Susie Medina
Scene Editor

A Streetcar Named Desire opened up last Friday evening with a sold out show. The Show seemed to please the audience, drawing out gasps and sneers in response.

The play is set in a New Orleans apartment where a married Stella and Stanley Kowalski reside. Stella's sister Blanche DuBois comes in town to visit with a haunted past of a suicidal lover, and ends up stirring trouble with her neurotic and flighty Southern pompous arrogance mixed with Stanley's brutish, chauvenistic ways.

The audience gets wrapped in the harsh and captivating moments in the play when Stanley, played by Jason Maddy, goes into his violent outburst, causing his feeble, pregnant wife Stella, played by Alyson Florey to curl up and cry.

Stella's character is innocent and trusting. She wins the sympathy of the viewers but at the same time disappoints them as she continually puts up with Stanley's barbaric ways. There are many scenes where he yells in her face, yanks her by the arm, and even slapped her face on one drunken occasion. Maddy does an exquisite job in riling up the audience with his rough gestures and loud voice.

"The actors in this play are very intense," says viewer Sheila Straight. The most intense relationship being between Blanche and Stanley. The two are always at duals with Blanche building herself up with lies of being so refined and attractive, and Stanley being street-smart and untrustworthy or his sister-in-laws motives. The two end up having an episode of adultery, showing that neither respect each other in any way and have no regard for the naïve Stella.

The play, while being dramatic, also had its funny and romantic moments. But Mitch's clumsy ways of dating and Stanley's hunger for Stella's affection could only go so far, some audience members felt otherwise.

"The play was a lot heavier than I expected it to be- it's got a lot of dark tones to it- abuse and death," said James Clark. Because of Blanche's troubled past, there are many times where voices and soft songs play into the background, conveying to the audience that she is falling into visions of her past and becoming lost in a surreal world. It is often brought on by the sound of a train, or streetcar, and change of colors in the lights.

The play did successfully well on its first night with no mistakes or misunderstood dialogue. It was simple to follow along just watching the actors as their faces told more of their characters than words.

The show will play again June 6, 7, 8 at 8pm and June 2, 9 at 2pm. Tickets are $4 for students and $8 for faculty and staff, and includes a three hour show and light refreshments.

Student performers blow the top off the Musical Melting Pot

By Shareena C. Clark
A&E Editor

The Musical Melting Pot was a noontime performance held in front of the Event centers last week. This event was truly a cornucopia of culture and talent. The event was sponsored by the student union, and put on by the CSUSB music department.

Many of the artists that day were performing for the first time, but it seemed as if they'd been doing it for years. All of the music and routines were original products of students at CSUSB. The professionalism of the show was impressive. I was hard to believe that they were all amateur performers.

"The music department decided we wanted to have fun and show the campus our talent, and we wanted to show that the campus is full of talent. This was experimental, but there will be more events like this coming up." Explained David 'Dah-oo Ausaru' Johnson, one of the poets.

The crowd enjoyed the show just as much as the performers. There were video cameras documenting the event, as well as a group of children watching intently. During all of the performances, the artists were supporting each other with whoops and hollers.

Alex 'Wizard' Solano one of the artists has been into music for seven years, this was his first time performing in front of a crowd, but surely won't be his last. "I wasn't involved in high school activities, I took it upon myself to learn music. Reggae music is essential. It's a life long journey and occupation. Compared to the big shots, I'm an amateur. The UCLA Reggae Festival inspired me a lot." Explained Alex.

The Musical Melting Pot was just one of many events that are to come from the music department. There is no doubt that the performers at this program will go somewhere in the entertainment world. Good luck!

The greatest show in America comes to California

By Shareena C. Clark
A&E Editor

In a small Northern California city, the number one touring band in America put on another sold out show at The Shoreline Amphitheater.

The Dave Matthews Band has out sold every performer touring the United States including The Rolling Stones, N*Sync and Paul McCartney for the second year in a row. Even after the release of 'Everyday', (an album which a majority of the band's "hard core" fans think is a little more pop than any other DMB release) they have still sold out every Northern American venue excluding one in Canada, and another in Texas.

The DMB has been together and touring since 1990. They began in Virginia playing in small clubs, and eventually moved on to playing in huge well known venues such as Giants Stadium in New York, Red Rocks in Colorado, Shoreline Amphitheater in Northern California, Dodger Stadium in Southern California, George Amphitheater in Washington and many others.

The 2002 tour is in support of their new album 'Busted Stuff', which is due out on July 16. The new album consists mostly of remade songs from the bootlegged 'Lillywhite Sessions', an album that was replaced last year with 'Everyday'. The 'Lillywhite Sessions' was named after the long time producer of the DMB, who produced earlier Grammy nominated and winning releases such as 'Under The Table And Dreaming', 'Crash', and 'Before These Crowded Streets'. Lillywhite was replaced with Glen Ballard for their fourth studio release 'Everyday'. As soon as that news hit the street, bootlegging of the 'Lillywhite Sessions' exploded. Although the 'Everyday' album was written in nine days, it still lacked the raw complicated rhythms, and kick ass solos that the Lillywhite albums had.

At the concert, the crowd was eager to hear the remade songs that have been long due for an official release. There had to be thousands upon thousands of people at the venue. The entire lawn and about eighty percent of the seats were filled by the middle of the opening band Government Mule. In between the opening and headlining acts, people passed time by making beer and food runs. There were signs on the way to the gates explaining what you could bring into the venue and marijuana was not on the list. That probably explains all of the pot that was smoked in the crowd. In fact, if I were to make an estimate, I would say one out of every twenty people had a little Mary Jane.

When the band came on stage, the crowd went daft. Their set included 'Crush', 'Bartender', 'Everyday/#36' and many others. They gave an explosive encore that was much appreciated by the fans that seemed to not get enough. One fan even threw out a bag of tortillas, which made it form one side of the venue to the other. Trying to put a DMB concert into words is a task equivalent to out drinking Def Leopard. The DMB summer tour is truly an event that should not be missed if one can help it.

Pacino) state of insomnia. The film puts you in his shoes magnificently throughout his corrupt journey of bargaining with the young girl's killer.

Marcos: I felt exactly the same way as Ivan did. But I was falling asleep because the movie totally sucked "pelotas." JUST KIDDING! This movie kicked butt. Nolan, Pacino, Williams and Swank (the girl from The Next Karate Kid, ha ha), I have two words to say to you all: GREAT CASTING!

Ivan: Within the first five minutes of his appearance, Robin Williams shatters his typecasting as Walter Finch, the murderer (keep in mind this is not a spoiler, you find this out early in the film. This movie is not a mystery). You will not think of him as the Genie from "Aladdin" or as the crazy doctor in "Parch Adams." Instead, you will be very convinced that he didn't try to kill the young girl as pleads to Dormer. Williams has never been better and probably never will be, so go see this now before he loses his acting ability.

Marcos: The first thing that popped into my mind as I walked out of the theater was "Dang, what will Nolan direct next?" Williams did do a good job but I feel that he did an ever better job in "Good Will Hunting."

Ivan: You mean that movie with Mork from "Orc" in it?

Marcos: Yeah, but Affleck was the bomb in "Phantoms!" Anyway, Williams' hunting season is definitely not over. Christopher Nolan definitely gives you good idea of what it would be like if you could not sleep. I love, which to me is his trademark, the quick flashes of imagery that he shoots out in the middle of a scene. He used them well in "Memento" and once again succeeds in "Insomnia." SEE THIS MOVIE!

Ivan: Once again, keep in mind that "Insomnia" is not a mystery thriller. It's, as Nolan put it, one of the old police morality tales of yesteryear. Ivan & Marcos vote: Snootch to the Motherf@$in Nootch!!

Guitar magic

By Stephen Stalker
Staff Writer

Music filled the night on the 21st as the CSUSB Guitar Studio took the stage. With stunning performances under the direction of Stewart Green, the musicians displayed their mastership of the classical guitar. Performers Todd Haemmerle, Matt Cahow, Hsiao-Li Tu, Haralambos Bozonelos, and Nicholas Lambson each picked out their own pieces to perform for the recital. The pieces included compositions from Italy and Venezuela, and in the case of Matt and Todd, their arrangements of a few religious children's songs. "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands" was one such song played by Matt and Todd, using paperclips and bottlecaps as a part of the performance. They played the piece as it would sound in various parts of the world such as Hawaii, Asia, and Spain in addition to traditional American folk, causing the audience the succumb to a severe fit of laughter. Antonio Lauro's "El Niño" and "Valse Criollo" touched Voice major Alex Solano. "It ties so much with my culture... It was just very well performed" said Solano, the lack of attendees was dissapointing, less twenty people took the opportunity to see such great musical talent. Cal State's Guitar Studio proves that the concerts on campus are not events to miss.

The Curious Coyote: Bush: the Mickey Mouse of the Fourth Reich

By Jesse Henderson
Staff Writer

While President Bush shows his lack of knowledge and immaturity abroad, Incompetence of governmental agencies has resulted in our civil liberties coming once again under assault. So I am left feeling like this administration has done nothing to make this country safer, instead it has done everything in its power to make free thinkers uneasy, and in eager anticipation for this nightmare to end.

Many, including myself, are not so easily swayed by the obvious propaganda being forced fed to us on a daily basis in mainstream media. In my search for accuracy I have read overseas newspapers that do not sugarcoat accounts to keep in line with American civility. For example, I read in the popular German paper, Der Spiegel, about President Bush's witty nature when he visited Brazil. During a conversation with the President of Brazil, Fernando Henrique Cardoso, Bush asked Cardoso, "Do you have blacks, too?"

National security adviser, Condoleezza Rice noticing the bewildered Cardoso played damage control and told our great leader, "Mr. President, Brazil probably has more blacks than the USA. Some say it's the Country with the most blacks outside of Africa." How embarrassing, the man has Yale and Harvard education, and he doesn't know there are black people in Brazil. The Brazilian president commented that in regard to Latin America, Bush was still in his "learning phase."

On to France, where Bush threw a hissy fit because a NBC reporter asked a question in French to the French President Jacques Chirac. NBC reporter David Gregory asked a question that regarded European feelings about American Imperialism and ended his question by asking Chirac in French if he would like to comment on that. Bush remarked by saying "Very Good, The guy memorizes four words, he plays like he's intercontinental." Gregory said, "I could go on." Bush then countered by saying, "I'm impressed --que bueno. Now I'm iterate in two languages."

I guess you just can't take the president anywhere. I am tired of the public relations aspect that our country is focusing on. I do not want to hear everything is o.k in a polite way, if it is a lie, and I don't want to be assaulted by unnecessary fear tactics if it is just to distract me from being inquisitive. Furthermore, I don't want to wake up one day in the American version of Nazi Germany.

Maybe you are wondering why I bring up Nazi Germany. I see the similarity. The FBI is easing the constrictions on the agency's ability to engage in domestic spying for the sake of preventing future terrorist acts. That is their job, a l l under the present laws we have in place. I mean they are the Federal Bureau of Investigation right? Investigate already! Why do they have to change the laws so that they are able to target churches, political organizations, libraries, and Americans, including the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., whose private life was subjected to electronic surveillance" the Associated Press reported last week. It is these guidelines, which will be thrown out the door for the sake of preventing terrorism.

Rep. John Conyers, the top Democrat on the House Judiciary Committee, is in opposition to the FBI expansion of power. Conyers in a written statement stated "The administration's continued defiance of constitutional safeguards seems to have no end in sight." He asserts that the administration should "immediately halt any efforts to unilaterally expand surveillance authority" and they should consult congress "before implementing further intrusions on our civil liberties."

You may feel that I exhibit unneeded cautioning, but read this quote and see if you notice something familiar:

"Why of course the people don't want war. Why should some poor slob on a farm want to risk his life in a war when the best he can get out of it is to come back to his farm in one piece? Naturally the common people don't want war neither in Russia, nor in England, nor for that matter in Germany. That is understood. But, after all, it is the leaders of the country who determine the policy and it is always a simple matter to drag the people along, whether it is a democracy, or a fascist dictatorship, or a parliament, or a communist dictatorship. Voice or no voice, the people can always be brought to the bidding of the leaders. That is easy. All you have to do is tell them they are being attacked, and denounce the peacemakers for lack of patriotism and exposing the country to danger. It works the same in any country."

—Herman Goering, Commander-in-Chief of the Luftwaffe, President of the Reichstag, Prime Minister of Prussia and, as Hitler's designated successor, the second man in the Third Reich.

My belief is that to blame President Bush for the entire mess is like trying to blame Mickey Mouse for the negative aspects and actions of Disney. There is more to this issue and it is about time to investigate and clear the air. I don't believe we should be further punished for actions we never took part in, it wasn't the private citizens incompetence that led to problem, but it just might have to be the private citizens who have to find the solution.

First they came for the Communists and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, but by that time, no one was left to speak up.

Internet sites? I am not looking forward to a technologically advanced Gestapo.

Muslim Americans will most definitely feel the repercussions of this act. This change might lead non-Muslims, and others not directly affected, to be complacent at this point because the new assault on civil liberties does not strike them as pertaining to them. However, I see that these laws can be used on everybody for whatever reason, very similar to the way the three strikes law was supposed to be for violent offenders. It doesn't bother you, till it affects you. Why wait? In Germany many non-Jewish citizens were complacent to what was happening to the Jews until it started affecting them directly.

A fond Farewell: From Luis Portillo, ASI President

Fellow Students,

It's the 10th week of classes and we are about to be done with the school year. For some of you it may be the end of your college experience, as you are graduating and going onto bigger and better things. For others like myself its only be a break until we come back to school in the fall for another and final year. The end of this quarter will also mark my final quarter as ASI President.

I started in ASI 4 years ago as the student at-large representative to the ASI Board of Directors. When I first joined I wasn't quite sure of the full responsibilities that I was about to take on, all I knew was that I wanted to make a difference at this university and make it better.

ASI is made up of many students, the majority of which volunteer their time to make our campus better. When looking back over the last 4 years, I think of what ASI has accomplished and the opportunity that I had to be a part of it. We worked to make the student voice one that is respected and taken seriously at the university. We increased support to clubs and organizations, put on leadership conferences, put on activities, all to enhance campus life. We looked to the future and helped pass a referendum that continues to change the face of our campus and we spearheaded a statewide grassroots campaign to protect the CSU budget. I believe we accomplished a number of things, however there is always more that could be done.

At its heart the main purpose of ASI, is to represent the student voice in the decision making process of the university. For the last two years I have been charged with being the official spokesperson of the students. I did my job to the best of my abilities and hope I represented you well.

I thank you for the privilege, which you provided me in allowing me to represent you over these last 4 years. Its been a great experience.

Sincerely,
Luis Portillo, ASI President

CHRONICLES PARTING WORDS:

By Karla Buchanan
News Editor

Walking into the Chronicle office for the first time in the beginning of Winter quarter, I had no idea the range of emotions that I would experience. Stress, joy, annoyance, pride, and, most importantly, friendship.

I would not change a thing from the past two quarters if given the opportunity. I have grown as a person, a leader, a writer and have acquired a group of friends I wouldn't trade for anything.

I'd like to thank everyone in the Chronicle for their support and guidance. Without them I would not have survived the whirl-wind last two quarters, jumping from a volunteer staff writer to news editor.

Good luck to everyone on staff who must move on - you will be missed, and I can't wait to start fresh next year with everyone who is staying. Once again, thanks to everyone and I love you all!!

By Susie Medina
Scene Editor

There was a girl I remember who started the Chronicle this fall quarter. She came into that messy basement office with dark hair glasses and a bright smile. She had no experience in journalistic writing, interviewing skills, PageMaker programs, or editorial planning. She just thought it would be fun to contribute her writing and ideas to the school newspaper. Boy, was she in for a shock.

Being an editor is hard work; it's not just a title- it comes with a territory. In my case it was the Scene. That territory or section becomes your responsibility- your child, if you will. Those three pages with the heading The Scene written across it, have endlessly been filled with stories that I have either written or assigned to a staff writer. Everything that goes in there, all information, misprints, spelling errors, dates, has my name claiming its validity.

I've often got through my nights with pots of coffee and shots of diligence. What is it that I love about this job; finding out the happenings on campus, convincing a staff writer to cover an event, take pictures, make it 300 words get three quotes, and its due Thursday before 4pm, and after that's done, editing the story, modifying it some, contacting people to make sure the information is correct and then placing the story and pictures on PageMaker- our newspapers skeleton, in hopes that it will fit its designated space. I'll tell you what it is. Its at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, picking up the newspaper, fresh from the receiving bulks and looking at my sweat blood and tears in print alongside my name. Its building relationships with some of the best, smartest hardworking people I'll ever know, and getting to know different people at school.

As editor of the Scene, I've had to stay on top of events going on campus and have met so many impressive people. The ones who stick out in my mind are those who have been featured in our Faculty/Student Spotlights, all of the over-qualified candidates for this year's ASI elections, philanthropic Greek brothers and sisters, and fun students interviewed for the Roving Reporter.

The experience has been fun and has changed me. While I still am the same clumsy girl who walked into the office earlier this year, I have matured more and have come a few steps closer to deciding my niche in life.

Next quarter I will no longer be the Scene editor, but will be promoted to Multi-Cultural editor, which will satisfy another concern of mine. I have enjoyed being the Scene editor and will still hold it very close to me. I hope my work here has been as impressionable to you as it has to me.

Thank you readers, for allowing me to be your student voice for 2001-02, I'll see you next fall.

By Jake Zylman
Multi Cultural Editor

Alright, goodbyes are always hard. This one is softened with the knowledge that I get to come back and do it all over next year. Hopefully.

I won't lie, this year has been a bit of a mixed blessing that has made me grow in all aspects of my life. I can only hope that my blood, sweat, tears, and lack of sleep may have changed the way you see the world. I'm not talking lifestyle-altering, see the world through new eyes type of change. I only hope that something you read in the multicultural section has enlightened in some way that might have been just out of the reach of your thought process.

Writing on culture is very difficult. It is hard to be an accurate, detailed account of a group of people in a weekly publication because of the time constraints. We've done our bests to reflect the diverse community at Cal State, San Bernardino that demands tolerance and understanding.

I'd like to give a loud thank you to everyone involved with the paper. That group, from editors to staff writers, is truly one of the most diverse and funny bunches I have ever seen. I hope that sense of fun transferred over to the reader. Good times.

To all:

Sometimes I feel like I'm falling- fall back again- oh life it seems a struggle between- what we think what we see- I'm not going to change my ways- just to please you or appease you- inside a crowd five billion proud- willing to punch it out- right wrong weak strong- ashes to ashes we all fall down- look around this round about- merry go round around- if at all God's gaze upon us fall- his mischievous grin look at him-

Forget about the reasons- and the treason's we are seeking- forget about the notion that our emotions can be swept away- forget about being guilty- we are all innocent instead- for soon we will all find our lives swept away-

Sit a while with TV's hungry child- big belly swelled- oh for the price of a coke or a smoke- keep alive those hungry eyes- take a look at me- what you see in me- mirror look at me- face it all face it all again-

Forget about the reasons and the treason's we are seeking- forget about the notion that our emotions can be swept away kept at bay- forget about being guilty- I am innocent instead- for soon we will all find our lives swept away-

You seek up on emotion- and our cup is overflowing- you seek up on emotion- sometimes your well is dry- you seek up a big monster- for him to fight your wars for you- but when he finds his way to you the devil's not home-

Look at me in my fancy car and my bank account- oh how I wish I could take it all down to my grave- I'd save and save- take a look again- take a look again- everyday things change- basically they stay the same-

Forget about the reasons and the treason's that we are seeking- forget about the notion that our emotions can be swept away- intentions are not wicked don't be tricked into thinking so- soon we will all find our lives swept away-

You seek up an emotion and your cup is overflowing- you seek up an emotion sometimes your well is dry- you seek up a big monster for him to fight your battles for you- but when he finds his way to you the devil's not going- fall back again- David J. Matthews

I had a great time the last two quarters being and ad representative for the Coyote Chronicle.

I appreciated getting to know the members of the chronicle and the rest of the staff and students of CSUSB that I encountered during my time here.

I hope that next year I am able to come back and continue to be involved in the growing success that we have achieved this past year. I encourage all students to try and be involved with the Chronicle, it is a great way to get to know new people and be involved in school activities at the same time.

Have a great summer everyone and see you next year!

The final pages have finally been turned or better yet been published for the 2001-02 Coyote Chronicle.

My opportunity to become the sports editor came during the winter quarter after having a good friend relinquish his title.

Fortunately for me, it was a blessing in disguise. If it wasn't for the opportunity to become the editor, I would have never met an entire Chronicle staff that I would gladly like to admit has become much more than co-workers - but friends.

Yes, my heartfelt appreciation goes out to those who I went to battle every Friday trying to make the best newspaper, possible. Thanks to Robin Larsen for the inspiration and motivation that eventually influenced my decision to accept the sports editor position.

Thanks to Matt "can't say or spell his last name" Schoenman, Matt Taylor for the listening ears, Jake "the snake" Zylman for the manly-man hugs, Susie "always smiling" Medina for the girly jokes, Steve "the man" Shelton for all the food, Kermi "Kermi" Boyd for being a great assistant, Shareena "outrageous" Clark for the laughs, Karla "the not so innocent" Buchanan for the surprises, and John Eddy for the work he gave to the paper.

By Matt Schoenmann
Executive Editor

What a long strange trip it's been. In the two years I've been with the Chronicle I've witnessed it transform from a 12-page newsletter to the voice of the students that it is now.

Unfortunately, this is my final issue with the paper, but thankfully I can be confident that this year was just the beginning of great things to come. I cannot say enough great things about the Editors that are in place now and I thank them for helping me become the editor/manager/ friend that I am today.

When I entered this year as A&E editor I was an introverted hippie who was happy just being in my own little world. I had no idea how much I would learn in the three-quarters that were to follow. When I took over as managing editor, and then executive editor, I began to understand how important it is to be able to interact with people from all different backgrounds.

I can honestly say that in the future, when I look back at this year of my life, I will see one of the most productive and beneficial years in my life. I would like to thank all of our readers and staff for making this year as memorable as it was.

By Mathew Taylor
Managing Editor

The Past, Present, and The Future. These three things have been constantly on my mind as I have been a writer a section editor and now as The Managing editor. One thing that I have begun and I hopefully can continue is the continuity and fluidity between transitions of office.

I believe that right now we, as the media source for this campus are of a higher caliber and that in fact we are trying to bring forth the quality of coverage that the campus has needed for so long. Ofcourse we have fallen under the strong arm of criticism but at the same time we have felt the loving arms of compliments. We have been praised by different entities on campus from individual programs all the way up to the Presidents office.

I feel grateful to the wonderful staff that we constantly have as well as to some of the members passed. I want to thank John Eddy for seeing in me that I might come into this Organization and handle the News. I want to thank Matt Schoenmann for knowing that I could take over as managing editor and help to continue the success and legacy of what we know as The Chronicle.

Now as I sit here rambling on about all the things I'm thankful for I want to make it known that the one thing I am truly grateful for is the readers out there who have listen my words and know that we are here for them. That as institution with a University we do truly care about giving you what really matters and that's the facts just the facts. I will see you all in the fall and I know that we will continue our success and even improve.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

Hypocrisy or Democracy

THE RAW DEAL

This Letter is in regards to an article in the Coyote Chronicle's May 20, 2002 edition entitled "Fallis wins because of ASI Folly." This article is incomplete, irresponsible, and unethical.

It attempts to delineate the events leading up to the announcement of Erik Fallis as 2002-2003 ASI President. In doing so, it mentions the disqualified slate of Ezekial Bonillas, Ricardo Meraz and Shahab Ghalambor; and explores some of the details of Fermin Ramirez's removal. The author shows no attempt to contact any of the candidates besides Mr. Ramirez; in general, only the board's official ruling is discussed. While this is irresponsible and incomplete journalism, it is not as troubling as the editorial slant that courses through the article.

Starting with the headline, it is obvious that those responsible for the article do not believe Mr. Fallis should be the next President. The headline implies that the review board either acted in an irresponsible fashion, or misinterpreted the election code. The article's only example of this is an off-hand comparison between Mr. Ramirez's case and "actual legal cases." This fails to note that the review board does not fall under the same legal system as our criminal courts, nor does it reveal if the actions were in accordance with established code.

As the article progresses, the author claims that the multiple disqualification's left the campus with "no real selection" for president. What of Erik Fallis, the only candidate not disqualified for breaking the election code? Apparently, the author does not find this candidate or his ethical qualifications relevant. The only mention of this candidate is in a listing of the vote count. By marginalizing Mr. Fallis and casting the review board's actions in an unfavorable light, the future President's mandate is put into question. No other articles in the edition discuss the election in any manner, so the reader is left with a sense of illegitimacy about Mr. Fallis' upcoming term. This is furthered by the placement of Mr. Ramirez's picture next to the raw results for President- a position reserved for the winning candidate in each other candidate in each category.

Since this newspaper is the only media outlet serving the school, its responsibility to report is an accurate, unbiased and complete manner as possible is even greater than normal. It is the duty of the newspaper and its staff to represent the school, and to uphold the established laws and codes. If this means pointing out inaccuracies between those regulations and subsequent actions, then the Chronicle should investigate and print the results. However, if there are no such discrepancies, the newspaper should uphold the sanctity of ASI, the school, and its respective bodies and policies. The Coyote Chronicle has failed in this respect. This is not the level of journalism that one would strive report on a collegiate level for a change.

THE BROKEN RULE

Dear Editor,

I recently read a letter that was addressed to students and staff about an "insignificant rule" which was cited to affirm the removal of ASI candidates Ezekial Bonillas, et al. However I cannot be persuaded to believe that a "rule" can be "insignificant" in this context. Another point, which I would like to address, is the removal of the candidates in accordance with the "insignificant rule."

First, I would like to address the issue of removal of all the candidates. All the candidates were disqualified for breaking a rule, which by the standards of "reasonableness," is an understandable procedural guideline as established by ASI, and codified again this year by a board of directors that included Mr. Bonillas. The "rule" in question, which reads that "any" use of ASI or Student Union facilities will be deemed a level four violation and is the only section in the Policy and Procedures which has a sanction of immediate qualification, was an admitted violation by said election ticket. If the student union and ASI facilities are paid for by the student population and a candidate uses "just a table" to campaign, are they not then using the facilities that "I" pay for to further their campaign needs? Is this justified? As I understand, no; after all it is my money as much as it is one of my neighbors in a course lecture. Who is to say that "I" support those individuals? Do the candidates? By the actions of the candidates, I would assume that they either fail to understand the rules they assisted in affirming this year, or they blatantly disregard the tenements they would be bound to as officers of the student government. I think neither reflects favorably on their conduct. According to the policy and procedure of ASI campaigning, no candidate should use these facilities. Should they have then been removed for breaking an "insignificant rule?" I say yes. I never gave them permission to use my money to further their campaign, so why break a rule that strictly forbids the use of such materials?

Further, I do not understand how this rule can be "insignificant." A rule by definition is a guide or principle for government action. In this case, it is a way for candidates to conduct themselves civilly during an election. Adherence to the "rule" is mandated because it provides that the candidates do not have an advantage over other candidates. By conducting themselves honorably they should adhere to the "policy" and "procedure." Policy, which means a course of action to guide decisions and a procedure, is a way of doing something. Conversely, something that is "insignificant" is unimportant or irrelevant to the present circumstance. I cannot place "insignificant" and "rule" in the same context at the present case. Rather, I feel it is fundamentally important to note that the candidates who were campaigning for student government exhibited an U. I repentant attitude toward their admitted violation, with complete disregard for the set of rules which may have placed them in office.

Furthermore, I assert my point that this rule cannot be deemed "insignificant," and the removal of the candidates under the cited rule is in accordance with the ASI election policy and procedure guidelines.

--Madison J. Hamilton

SPEAK OUT

I would like some clarification from your staff. Your article on page 7 by David Chadwick says "One candidate even had free burritos to off students to add to their campaign" and yet, the unidentified candidate does not seem to be in violation of "Under posting policies there are only two items that are automatically deemed a level 4 violation which results in removal from election: 1) the use of ASI and Student Union equipment and supplies and 2) Giving money or things that can be exchanged as money and this includes, pencils, lollipops, and food" as found on page 2.

Why did your staff not identify the student who became ineligible by that act of offering burritos? Your staff should do their civic duty and reveal this person. As a voter, I think all infractions should be openly addressed and then appropriate action taken. If this would cause the disqualification of any candidate so be it. Your staff's responsibility is not to help any candidate, by withholding important information.

Additional observations:

From the very manner of the candidates approaching students for their votes, to the lack of secret ballot voting, and finally to the manner in which the disqualification of candidates was handled, this election was farcical.

First, many students were ignored by ASI candidates handing out election material and meeting and greeting the public, because the candidates determined the students did not fit their intended audience.

A young Hispanic man walking with me was stopped to solicit his vote, while myself an older Caucasian female was ignored. I found this disconcerting and so I watched the solicitation process for ten minutes and the candidates consistently addressed students who appeared to be "young minority students" and ignored another population of older students and still another population of "Caucasian students". This made me wonder if the candidates were really going to represent the entire student body's interests.

Second I was required to sign my name and the last four social security numbers to a ballot, thus violating a social expectation to a secret ballot voting process. Not one other election I have ever participated in has required this type of identification; in over 27 years, I have voted in several college elections in several states and dozens of union elections, besides city, state, and national elections.

Third, when students are informed not vote for a disqualified candidate, the election results become askew. A student voting on Wednesday did not have the same opportunity as a student voting on Thursday. By urging students to choose from two remaining candidates for several positions, there will be students who voted for a second choice giving those remaining candidates an unfair election return count because the third choice was eliminated.

The elections must be re-held to ensure an honest and fair chance for all students to have the same opportunity to vote.

Before this can happen, however, the staff members of the Coyote Chronicle must reveal the student candidate who violated the rules so that the equal weight of the regulations is applied.

Furthermore, the outgoing ASI President Portillo's actions constitute an inferred endorsement and should be viewed as such. This type of action can not be tolerated and Mr. Portillo should apologize for his actions.

Final comment: CSUSB student body members, Are these candidates really the ones, you want to entrust with making important decisions for you, when they can't abide by simple election rules?

THE REBUTTAL

Hypocrisy or Democracy, I feel that there are no better words than those to describe the current situations being dealt with by The Associated Students Incorporated. I do not challenge that organization because they represent me as a student but what I do challenge is the irresponsibility by some of the entities encompassed by this organization.

I think that to begin I should respond to some of the claims or charges brought against me in my coverage of the election process. In covering this I want the students to know that my purpose in writing these stories is to inform the campus of what is truly going on. There was a misconception that said I did not contact anyone, when in reality I tried to contact almost everyone and all I got was a runaround.

I don't know if this is where I am supposed to blame some person or even just the situation itself because there were people put into place and they were ready or just didn't understand their entire duties as being a fair and unbiased process.

I also am not questioning the qualifications that Mr. Fallis may have for his presidency. Although I do feel that the students have spoken by giving him only 221 votes and maybe he won this election because he was unlike the other candidates whom were out there in the fields constantly trying to get votes while he sat back and did the minimal amount of campaigning. In the Fall there maybe a stigma added to his term of office because he won as default and I think that he can get rid of this stigma by becoming more visible as this representative of the students.

So maybe the more direct question is whether or not I feel that he can do the job. I think that it is possible because he has had the experience of leadership but I can not say that I feel that he was the direct choice made by the campus. It is a commendable thing that he was not seen visually to break any rules but what about beneath the surface. Has he been completely guilt free? There were allegations that he played both slates by telling each side when the other made a violation, thereby causing a quarrel between the slates.

As I sit here writing, the words 'Hypocrisy or Democracy' constantly float around in my mind because I feel that through this election there has been another question about the slates and that is: Which is the lesser of the two evils? I think that from my past articles we see that there was a problem within the process that the campus took, but what now? Do we just sit here, stuck with the fact that we now have a president that we didn't choose (and how close to the national elections is that?) or do we do something about it?

Students Sought for National Conference

The scenic Rocky Mountains are the backdrop to the 16th annual Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities (HACU) conference, and Associated Students, Inc. (ASI) is accepting applications to send at least six students there.

The conference provides students with the opportunity to meet federal employment recruiters as well as many college and university recruiters. It attracts hundreds of academic, corporate, federal, public policy and community leaders.

This year's national conference theme is "Hispanic Empowerment: America's Key to Prosperity," and serves as a forum for sharing information and ideas to enhance educational success. HACU represents more than 315 colleges and universities with high Hispanic student enrollment rates in the United States and abroad.

Student participants can expect to engage in discussion dealing with national and international issues of interest to Hispanic-Serve Institutions (HSIs), such as Cal State, San Bernardino, which in fall 2001 had a recorded Hispanic enrollment of 4,307, or 30.3 percent of the 14,225 identified students. Additionally, the conference is geared toward establishing or strengthening partnerships and developing collegial networks among faculty, administrators, and federal and corporate representatives.

Sending students to the annual national conference is a goal of Juan Delgado, professor of English. He is trying to identify sources of funding at the local, state and national levels to sponsor Cal State, San Bernardino students to attend the conference.

"We haven't had good representation in the past," Delgado said. "We're trying to find funding in all places."

Delgado said that representatives of the U.S. Department of Agriculture have agreed to sponsor two students. But he is hopeful that other organizations will provide financial support.

ASI is among the various organizations allocating funding toward travel, lodging and conference fees. Its contribution of $6,000 covers all fees and expenses for at least six students.

Luis Portillo, ASI president, said the conference offers unique opportunities to students.

"The conference will enable access to career and educational opportunities as well as some of the biggest governmental employers, some of which students on the West Coast might overlook," Portillo said.

The conference runs from Oct. 26 to 29 in Denver, Colo. Applications to the conference are available in the ASI office, located in SU-144, to all those students who will achieve junior and senior status in the 2002-2003 academic year. For information, call (909) 880-5932.

Scholarships through HACU are also available. For more information, visit the HACU website at www.hacu.net.

CIGARETTE BUTTS IN THE STREET POLLUTE MORE THAN THE PAVEMENT.

Maybe you didn't notice, but the cigarettes you drop on the sidewalk get into storm drains, contaminating rivers, lakes and local beaches. They degrade local waterways, threaten wildlife and pose a public health risk.

Wherever you live in San Bernardino County, this pollution is a problem. The answer? Drop your cigarette in an ashtray or the trash not the street, to prevent pollution and protect our health. It's in your hands.

When you think of a clutch performer you think of Michael Jordan, but think of a clutch performer at Cal State San Bernardino? Stumped, well if so just go to the men's Coyote basketball team.

Perhaps, the player that stood out, as a clutch performer among a group of athletes that provided their respective teams with excellent play was Glenn Summerall for the men's basketball team.

A clutch performance is often times defined as a player's ability to perform for their team in the face of adversity.

There is an alternative definition of a clutch performer, a clutch player, is an athlete who pours out every ounce of sweat on whatever playing field that might be on.

But most importantly, a clutch player has the unique capability to execute "for all the marbles."

Summerall, a senior, was one of the Coyotes' most consistent players all season and displayed the aforementioned definition.

When the games were big, and when he was needed, he came through and executed in the clutch. He averaged 12.6 points per game and 4.3 rebounds per game and had nine blocks, and Summerall was also named to the All-CCAA first team.

But, Summerall may be remembered for his extraordinary performance in the NCAA West Regional tournament.

In the championship game, Summerall displayed the clutch, by pouring in 24 points and snatching 10 rebounds, which landed him as the tournaments most outstanding player and first team honors.

Summerall played big against big teams, for instance, on January 5 versus UC Davis; Summerall made a key block late in the game that ignited his team, and nailed a jumper with 25 seconds remaining in the game to clinch the win for his squad.

By and large, Summerall demonstrated his clutch player ability through his noteworthy execution on the court on a nightly basis, and performed in the clutch when called upon.

Cal State San Bernardino basketball team experienced a season and placed a record that some Division I schools dream about.

This feat was accomplished only through dedicated coaches and players that performed night in and night out.

Coyotes record a year of success

By Michael Murphy
Sports Information Director

The athletic program boast of three CCAA championships — the most titles in any one year; one West Regional title and one trip to a national championship tournament. CSUSB now has five CCAA titles in three years after winning just one (men's soccer in 1991) before 1999-2000.

Four sports produced a record total of six athletic All-Americans: sophomores Kim Ford and Kim Morohunfola and senior Amy Pope in volleyball; Bobby Burries in basketball; Tracie Schioppi in softball; Amanda Wells in water polo.

Volleyball Coach Kim Cherniss was named the CCAA and American Volleyball Coaches Association Pacific Region "Coach of the Year."

Former men's basketball coach Larry Reynolds was named the CCAA "Coach of the Year" for an unprecedented fourth straight year, leading the Coyotes to their third straight conference title, a West Region title and the quarterfinals of the Elite Eight.

The baseball team won its first CCAA title since joining the conference in 1991-92. The team won a school-record 34 games, including four straight to take the CCAA title in the post-season tournament.

Sophomore Chris McAllen was named the "Outstanding Player of the Tournament" and was an All-West Region first team pick. Seniors Adam Rabusin and Tony Evans were also selected to the all-region team.

The men's soccer team rebounded from a forgettable 1-18-1 record in 2000 to finish 9-10-1 — the third-best turnaround among NCAA D-II men's teams in 2001.

Sophomore James Nordberg was first-team All-CCAA and first-team All-Far West Region as a defender. Most of the team returns in 2002.

The women's softball team, won 32 games (second highest total in school history), finished among the top 10 teams in the West Region, and posted the team's first winning season ever in CCAA play (17-15).

The team improved from 13-43 in 2001 to 32-31 in 2002, a turnaround of 19 wins, one of the biggest, if not the biggest, one-season improvements in D-II. Schioppi was the CCAA player of the year, a first for the Coyotes.

The women's tennis team, posted the first winning record for the program since 1991 when the school was in Division III.

The Coyotes were 9-7 in dual matches and 3-5 in regular-season CCAA dual matches (4-7 if the conference tournament is included). Their sixth-place finish was the highest-ever.

The women's soccer team flirted with a high regional ranking before winding up No. 7 in the West Region, but missing a play-off berth in posting an 11-8-1 record.

Senior midfielder Lisa Ament was a first-team All-CCAA and first-team All-Far West Region selection. She led the team in scoring with 28 points and ended her four-year career as No. 3 on the all-time Coyote points list.

The golf team improved with the addition of community college transfers J.R. Reyes and Frank Firman but were unable to break into the top five in the highly-competitive CCAA.

However, Reyes did qualify for the NCAA West Regional where he finished 26th in the individual competition.

The women's basketball team closed out the regular season with a rush to post a 14-13 record despite injuries that sidelined three starters and limited the effectiveness of a fourth during the season.

Sharee Brown came on strong at the end to earn CCAA Player of the Week and second-team All-CCAA honors.

Men's basketball, led by nine seniors and a junior, posted a 28-2 record and set team records for consecutive wins to start a season (17), consecutive wins at home (22) and went 21-1 in the CCAA. The team will be reloading for 2002-03 under Interim Head Coach Jeff Oliver.

The Chronicle First Team All-Star selection could have easily gone to a 10-member roster; however, to really acknowledge just how well these five athletes performed during the year — the Chronicle opted for five roster spots.

Considering Amy Pope was a candidate for just about every Chronicle award, the Chronicle placed Pope on the First Team for the simple fact, she had to compete with Kim Ford, who had an outstanding year, offensively, for the Coyotes.

Pope was the centralized leader on the floor — setting up several of Ford's attacks.

In addition, Pope became the Coyotes first CCAA Player of the Year.

Righthander Tony Evans boosted the baseball team's lowest Earned Run Average (ERA) en route a school record.

Evans was selected on the CCAA First Team and also landed on the All-Regional Second Team.

Despite being injured for a portion of the season, two-time All-American Kim Morohunfol recovered from her left knee sprain to help the Coyotes to the West Regional title match.

Morohunfol was No.1 on the team in hitting percentage (.473),

No.2 in kills (411) and No.3 in blocks with 102.

The stolen base king, Adam Rabusin could not have closed his senior campaign better than the way he did this year.

"Rab" batted .321 while collecting 17 stolen bases and knocking 36 RBIs to the plate. He also was nominated on the All-Regional and CCAA Team.

Rounding the Chronicle First Team is sophomore sensation Amanda Wells, who starred as the goalkeeper for the successful water polo crew.

Wells garnered 247 blocks, 62 steals stopped 61 percent of her opponents shots. She was also nominated an All-American.

Chronicle Second Team

The talent level between the Chronicle's First and Second Team could be less than a margin of a dot considering all five of these Second Team All-Stars were leaders for their respective team.

Standout senior Lisa Ament was the big force for the women's soccer team. She was the CCAA's leading scorer with 28 points on 11 goals and six assists.

Redshirt sophomore J.R. Reyes made his CCAA debut on borrowed clubs and also managed to qualify for his first Regional Tournament in Arizona after leading his Coyote golf squad in strokes per average. Reyes topped his Coyote debut as the lone Coyote qualifier for the Regionals.

The leader on the court, Sharee Brown excelled as the go-to-lady for the women's basketball team. Brown averaged 11.9 points and 5.2 rebounds per game.

Another force on the court was James Taylor, who provided 11 points and four rebounds per game. He was an All-CCAA member for the Coyotes.

James Nordberg gave the men's soccer team plenty of defense and also landed himself on the All-Regional team.

The Coyotes drew a record crowd of 4,297 for a game against Cal Poly Pomona, a Coussoulis Arena record and set a single-season home attendance record with 28,609 in 16 games, an average of 1,788 per game.

The team achieved a No. 1 ranking in the national poll for the first time in school history and finished No. 3 in the poll.

The women's cross country team moved up slightly in the competitive CCAA with the addition of sophomore Hannah Knight and freshman Krysta Cochrane.

The team finished eighth in the CCAA championships and 17th in the West Regional. The team also earned NCAA Div. II Cross-Country Coaches Association Academic All-America honors with a combined 3.35 grade point average.

Women's water polo posted its second straight winning season with a 25-8 record and a sixth-place finish in the Western Water Polo Association tournament.

Along the way they posted wins over Division I foes like C.S. Northridge, Arizona State and Santa Clara Univ. and came closer to beating Collegiate III national champion Univ. of Redlands than ever before.

Women's volleyball set a school record for wins in a single season (29), captured the CCAA title with a 20-2 record and came within two match points of winning the Pacific Regional at home and earning a trip to the Elite Eight championship.

Setter Amy Pope was voted the CCAA Player of the Year, a first for the Coyotes.

Chronicle: All-Sport All-Star Selection

By John D. Halcon
Sports Editor

Let's just forget that the Chronicle Male and Female Athletes of the Year will be returning for another year of action.

Junior Bobby Burries, who gained heavy recognition as an All-American and CCAA's Most Valuable Player during his sophomore campaign, continued where he left leading his men's basketball team to the Elite Eight finale against eventually NCAA Division II champions Metro State.

After the season, Burries was selected on three different All-American teams including the National Association Coaches-Pontiac Second Team, Basketball Times Third Team, and Division II Honorable Mention.

Burries averaged 13.8 points per game and dished out 4.3 assists per contest.

In addition, Burries was selected on the All-CCAA Team and celebrated the Coyotes West Regional title by being on the All-West Regional squad.

Kim Ford didn't grab as many All-American honors as Burries did; however, the sophomore became an All-American for her first time after helping the volleyball team to its first CCAA title.

Ford was the most dominant outside attacker and offensive weapon when Kim Morohunfola was sidelined with her knee injury.

Yet, when Morohunfola came back, Ford didn't lose a beat from her routine, dominating game, as she garnered a team-high 525 kills.

The 5-foot-11 Etiwanda High School graduate, also contributed on defense with 375 digs.

Ford was also mentioned by the Sports Illustrated issue of Whose Who Amongst Athletes.

Big Batters Swing For All The Marbles

John D. Halcon/Chronicle

By John D. Halcon
Sports Editor

There's no question junior Tracie Schioppi held the biggest bat on the Coyote softball team.

The catcher was not only tabbed as the CCAA Player of the Year, but she also powered her way to the NCAA Division II All-America First Team.

Schioppi slugged for a .357 batting average, drove in 50 runs, collected 74 hits, scored 32 runs and cleared the fences 11 times.

Yet, her offensive performance weren't the only noteworthy stats, as she also proved to be a sensational catcher throwing out 18-for-41 runners attempting to steal.

Not bad for the former Chaffey Junior College All-American, who also helped turned a softball program that went 13-43 overall last year into an above average 32-31-2 mark this past season.

In addition, Schioppi was also selected on the All-Regional team that featured teammate and designated player Sharmaine Kendrick.

Schioppi led the CCAA in RBIs, total bases (126), tied for the conference lead in home runs and ranked second in hits and doubles (17).

Joining Schioppi as Most Valuable Players is outfielder Chris McAllen, who deservedly earned the Chronicle MVP through his CCAA and season performance.

McAllen starred as the leftfielder for the Coyotes baseball squad after leading the CCAA in seven categories.

He was voted Most Outstanding Player during the Coyotes upset-clinching CCAA tournament title, and also received All-Regional honors.

The sophomore batted .380, collected 81 hits, 21 doubles, 71 putouts while holding an unblemished 1.000 fielding percentage and contributed four assists in leftfield.

He led the team in hits en route to a club-setting record, total bases, doubles, fielding percentage and became the No. 2 hitter behind slugger Keith Haugh, who batted .383 for the Coyotes.

Reynolds takes top vote but shares honor two others

By Kermit R. Boyd
Assistant Sports Editor

Cal State San Bernardino's athletic department saw a wealth of success in practically every sport. This was accompanied by accolades, records, and coaches that executed on an inconsequential yet ample level.

The 2001-2002 year for CSUSB was the best year for Coyote athletics since CSUSB started intercollegiate sports competition in 1984-85.

With three California Collegiate Athletic Conferences championships, one West Regional title, and one trip to a national championship the coaches of the athletic department could gloat of their team's performances this year.

All coaches from the various athletic departments deserve recognition but there are three coaches that truly stick out and deserve admiration for the accomplishments in the 2001-2002 year.

The three coaches selected in the All Sport Awards, where coaches who demonstrated a knack for winning and experienced prosperity in their particular sport.

Coaches Kim Cherniss of volleyball, former coach Larry Reynolds of men's basketball, and Don Parnell of baseball each coached their teams to conference titles while manufacturing records in their respective departments.

Volleyball coach, Kim Cherniss coached her team to a 29-3 season record, the school's first California Collegiate Athletic Association championship, and into the Pacific Regional finals.

Most importantly, coach Cherniss received the highest award since she has been at CSUSB; she was honored as NCAA Division II Pacific Region Coach of the Year.

Also former coach Larry Reynolds of the men's basketball squad had a memorable season, which included "Coach of the Year", a 28-2 record, a conference title, and a West Regional title. Not mention, an appearance in the NCAA Division II Elite Eight Tournament.

In addition, baseball head coach Don Parnell was able to coach his team to CCAA tournament conference title, and also, manufactured a school record 34 wins.

His team also managed to set team records in hits, at bats, triples, stolen bases, and pitching staff earned run average.

The coaches of the Coyote athletic department all tasted success in the 2001-2002 seasons, but the abovementioned coaches, tasted and consumed success on slightly more abundant level.

For all three of the coaches Cherniss, Reynolds, and Parnell, their accumulation of success produced titles, coaches' awards, records, and respect for their teams and themselves if they did not already have it.

Coaches of the Year

John D. Halcon/Chronicle

THE BEST OF THEM — (From top to bottom) Volleyball head coach Kim Cherniss and baseball coach Don Parnell shared the same success this year with former men's basketball coach Larry Reynolds. All three coaches guided their respective squads to a CCAA conference title while Reynolds took his squad all the way to the NCAA Division II Sweet 16 and Elite Eight tournament.
