CSUSB students join nation-wide academic anti-war protest

Cal State University San Bernardino students protested in front of the Pfau library, joining the nationwide academic anti-war protest sending messages to the president and congress, “No Blood for Oil.”

On March 5, at 11 a.m., students from educational institutions across the nation - and across the globe - boycotted classes and joined protests. Some CSUSB students and faculty left classes to protest the war. One student media reported that over 36,000 schools across the nation took part in protesting on this day.

CSUSB student Angelica Navarro says, “The people are doing is murdering people.” comments CSUSB student Rehaib Khouri, one of the coordinator of protest on campus. To exemplify their feeling, organizers had various tombstones placed on the grass with saying such as “War Kills.”

In one CSUSB class the faculty read an e-mail that was received, stating that all patriotic students and faculty should leave class and express their feelings on the war, and the class was cancelled.

At the height of the protest, a combination of nearly 30 students and faculty were present. Some protesters, along with the tombstones and drums, stayed on the lawn for several hours to try and pull student interest.

“You don’t kill fire with fire, you kill fire with water,” states CSUSB sophomore Kwasi Agyakwa on his feeling on the war.

CSUSB student protest organizer Angelic Navarro says that they are planning other rallies in the future to gain more student interest and to express their feelings.

Car burglaries on the rise in CSUSB parking lot D

By Karla Buchanan
News Editor

A student’s only major concern should be getting to class on time, finals and research papers. But at Cal State San Bernardino a new burden has been placed on many students’ minds the fear of their car being broken into or stolen.

In recent months there have been a rash of car burglaries, mainly focused in parking lot D, located in front of University Hall. In incidents of burglary, windows are broken and stereos, CD’s and other personal affects are stolen.

“I am not only concerned as the chief, but as someone who lives in the dorms I take it personal when people come onto campus and steal,” comments CSUSB police chief Patrick McDonald.

According to McDonald, police have begun to increase patrols and have more stakeouts and surveillance to help either catch those responsible for the burglaries or to curb their activities.

Additionally, McDonald makes the following recommendations to students when leaving their cars: lock your car, put CD’s, clothing and anything else of value out of sight, install retractable steering wheel device, and don’t buy expensive stereo because they make easy targets. Finally, know the serial number of your stereo. When stolen stereos are recovered, there is no way to return them to owners without knowing the serial numbers.

McDonald adds that everybody is welcomed to call him at ext. 7359 with questions, to report suspicious activities or to place an anonymous tip.

Campus is under review

Five collegiate faculty members from colleges and universities came this week to Cal State San Bernardino to assess the school as part of the WASC (Western Association of Schools and Colleges) accreditation process.

Over the period of three days that began March 5th, the committee met with faculty, staff and students in order to gauge the effectiveness of CSUSB as a school of higher education, determine the strengths and weaknesses of the institution, and establish what grievances students may hold toward the university.

While the visitation is very important to CSUSB’s administration and WASC officials do not anticipate any major problems regarding the university.

Samuel Smith, President Emeritus of Washington State University was the team chair and led Rachel Lindsey, Dean of Arts and Sciences at Chicago State University; Jerry Campbell, Chief Information Officer and Dean of the University Libraries at University of Southern California, to assess the school.

Driftmier honored

By Bethany Anderson
Staff Writer

Cal State's College of Business and Public Administration honored Don Driftmier with the Arrowhead Distinguished Executive Officer's Award on March 6.

The luncheon was held at Cal State University San Bernardino in the Even Center.

The award recognizes and salutes businesspersons dedicated to leadership, education and community service.

Driftmier is currently the senior partner at the accounting firm of Nava, Rine, Trau, Day, and Co., on the board of directors for the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, vice chair of finance and chairman of the Pomona-based Casa Colina Foundation for Rehabilitation. He was honored by nearly 100 people in attendance.

CSUSB President Al Kasing states Driftmier, "He's been a remarkably effective advocate for our students, helping many to find jobs and hiring many himself. Contributions to his profession, family, country, church, and community have distinguished him as a true leader." During the luncheon a biographical video was shown detailing the life of Driftmier.

College Bowl competes

By Marie Thomson
Staff Writer

The California State University San Bernardino College Bowl team headed off to the regional competition held at California State University Fresno in January. The four members of the team competed for three days against fierce competition.

Schools such as University of California Los Angeles, Stanford, University of Southern California and University of Hawaii at Manoa were in attendance. They were competing for the chance to advance to the national competition.

The CSUSB team consisted of David Adams, Chris Eloriaga, Mike Pickering and Rebecca Mayer. The College Bowl team is sponsored by the Student Union Program Board and is advised by Erika Nunez. Nunez also traveled with the team to the competition as their advisor.

The team was chosen after a series of competitions between 30 students from CSUSB, with the members with the highest scores being chosen to attend the regional competition.

The competition at CSUF was played in a round robin fashion. The teams started off competing at the same time in different rooms with each team having the same set of questions. The team who won each round proceeded to the next level.

The two teams competing against each other were given a question and once one of the teammates recognized they had three seconds to answer. If the answer was correct then a bonus question was given to the team and they then had five seconds to answer, with the captain being the only one able to respond.

After the three days of competition at CSUF the college bowl team from CSUSB finished 11th.

Next year the team hopes to attract more students from CSUSB to participate for the chance to go to the regional competition, which is held once a year.

To join the College Bowl team, or for more information, contact Rebecca Mayer in the Student Union Program Board office at 880-5943.

United Nations Proposes New Iraqi Resolution Deadline
British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw pleaded with the United Nations Friday, March 7, to allow an Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to have a March 17, deadline to disarm his weapons of mass destruction or face military action.

This comes after U.S. President Bush announced to the country that the U.S. would act on its plans to disarm Hussein from using weapons of mass destruction on innocent people before it is too late. The Security Council of the United Nations is openly split on a plan of action to properly handle the situation with disarming Iraq weapons, with France, Russia, China, all requesting more time for the U.N. weapons inspectors to continue a thorough inspection of Iraq's weapons. France and Russia have been openly critical of the United States attempts at disarming Iraq and U.S. threats to use military force if need be.

United Nations weapon inspector Hans Blix told the UN Security Council that their investigation still is unfinished. The UN's Blix Report stated that they have found no evidence of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq and that Iraq has been cooperating. Though Blix admitted that this is largely due to outside pressure.

Sarajevo: War Crimes Fugitive Assets Frozen
International officials have frozen the assets of Bosnian Serb war crimes fugitive Radovan Karadzic this week. Karadzic is wanted after being indicted in 1995 by the United Nations War-Crimes Tribunal for genocide and various other war crimes from 1992-1995. International official member Paddy Ashdown stated that in freezing Karadzic's bank accounts and other sources of money they could better prohibit him from evading arrest. Ashdown has been quoted as saying that "If you want to kill the poisonous tree, you need to go after its roots."

The U.S. government has agreed to blacklist Bosnian companies, MarcCo Oil Co. and Privredna Banka Sarajevo that Karadzic had been linked to the laundering money. Karadzic alleged allies Momcilo Mustic and Milovan Rajevic have had their offices raided in efforts to find direct links with Karadzic's mobility. Bosnian officials have further requested the governments of Greece and Montenegro for cooperation in finally catching Karadzic.

Japan: Suicide Rates Growing
International researchers have found the average of suicide rates for the past year. Japan is one of the highest suicide rates in the world. The nation's economic slow down from the past year has been a major reason for the increase in suicide rates for the second year in a row. Japanese researchers have issued a statement that the suicide rate in Japan is twice the size of the United States.

The nation's bestseller, "I Could Never Say It Was Suicide" compiled by the non-profit organization, Ashinaga has sold 60,000 copies in just the first four months since its debut. The book is a compilation of children, friends, and family members who have submitted their personal stories of how suicide has affected their lives. Proceeds from the book go to family members who are in need of financial aid as a direct result of a loved one's suicide.

Love at first sight, I think not...

By Teresita Sosa
Scene Editor

For most people going on a blind date could seem absolutely nerve-racking. All of a sudden your mind goes blank, you become overwhelmed with making simple decisions like "should I wear my hair up or down?" or "should I have my friend go and check if she's drop dead gorgeous or compulsively dreadful?" and then you make your decision of showing up or paying some Joe off the street to show up and pretend to be you for a couple hours.

And to top it all off you can't find a single thing to wear. These are some of the typical emotions one goes through while getting ready for a blind date. The mere thought of going through this过程 makes people skeptical about the whole idea of going on a blind date. But in reality it could turn out to be a wonderful experience, one that may introduce you to new cultures outside of your own.

Just recently two CSUSB students Adrienne Jouibert and Ramon Martinez met one another at the Arrowhead Bagel Company located in the shopping center of Sylmar on the corner of University and Kendall. Good conversation over a cup of java was the main focus of the evening.

While having never been acquainted with each other before, they seemed to hit it off the moment they met. After the basic introductions they found that they had a lot more in common than they thought, like the fact that both of them were twins.

Although, Jouibert and Martinez enjoyed each other's company, there were no definite sparks flying for any of the two. It was simply an evening of getting to know each other and making a new friend. Surely an experience that neither of them will ever forget.

Here's what they had to say:
1. Were you nervous before going out on the date?
AJ: No
RM: No, I wasn't nervous at all.
2. What did you think of the restaurant? Food?

Eleven Cal State students helped read to America on Monday.

The National Education Association hosted its 6th annual "Read Across America" on the birthday of beloved author Dr. Seuss.

For the past six years, "Read Across America" has been bringing the joy of reading to young children. In schools and day care centers all over the nation, children were enchanted by teachers and volunteers donning Dr. Seuss hats and gloves.

The kids even had red noses and whiskers painted on their faces. They were read favorite stories like "The Cat in the Hat," "Red Fish, Blue Fish" and "Green Eggs and Ham." They even ate a lunch inspired by the book, complete with green eggs and ham! After reading, many of the little ones. Sigma Nu reads to you

The men of Sigma Nu go to local schools to and read to children morning to Grant Elementary School in Colton. Heading up the community service was Alan Conrad. "We want to give back," said Conrad. All were extremely grateful that they were given the opportunity to turn a bleak rainy day into a fun filled adventure with the little ones.

According to the official website, "...motivating children to read is an important factor in student achievement and creating lifelong successful readers. Research has shown that children who are motivated and spend more time reading do better in school."

You can find out all the information you need by visiting www.nea.org/readacross. With pledges made by young readers, activities and more, the website can be a useful tool to any future educator or parent. There's even a countdown to next year's "Read Across America." At the time of print only 361 days till next year! So get out there and read to the little ones.

You just might find yourself wearing a striped hat and gloves, and loving every minute of it.

Sigma Chi gathering is a success

Fraternity invites campus community members to luncheon

By Araianna Valdez
Staff Writer

The aroma of the chicken from Juan Polio permeated through the Events Center. And at the scent settled people were greeted with the enticing menu of chicken, beans, rice, potato salad, and tortillas.

The CSUSB staff and faculty were able to enjoy the flavors on March 6 when Sigma Chi held a luncheon for them. This was the first time that any fraternities put together a luncheon for the staff and faculty.

This event gave the fraternity a chance to introduce themselves and make efforts to enhance their relations with the staff and faculty.

Invitations were hand delivered three weeks prior to the event. Reservations were required and about 30 staff and faculty members made them.

It was an enjoyable event for which Alumni Affairs staff member Crissy Tobianson says, “It was great to visit with the students of Sigma Chi and it’s really nice that these gentlemen are hosting this.”

Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, including CSUSB President Albert Karnig and CSUSB Dean Rob Carlson who were socializing and enjoying their lunch with the Sigma Chi members.

Among the others in attendance was Alumni Affairs staff member Pam Langford who says, “Sigma Chi has had a long standing tradition of supporting different programs and activities at school and out of school. I am really glad that I can come and show my support for them.”

At the event, Sigma Chi had a box open for donations. No real goal was set in terms of how much money was expected to be donated. Sigma Chi was simply appreciative of any help given.

All the money collected at the event went to Mary’s Table, in San Bernardino. This charity gives help to those in need. They have a hot meal program every day except Fridays to feed the homeless, and they give out emergency food bags filled with groceries. Not only does Mary’s Table provide food, but they also offer free showers and have free clothes and toiletries available.

It’s evident that Mary’s Table needs donations to keep providing services to those who are misfortunate, and Sigma Chi says they are honored to be able to help out this organization.

Speaking to the event turnout, Sigma Chi member Amir Salah says, “the Sigma Chi luncheon was a great time for all of our chapter members to get a chance to exchange ideas with the faculty and get an opportunity to better involve ourselves with the campus community.”

This was an event that Sigma Chi was proud to host because it allowed them to see the support they have at school, and at the same time they were able to give that same support to Mary’s Table.

"Remember the Ladies", Abigail Adams wrote to her husband John Adams, just before his nomination for presidency. Abigail Adams foresaw the future of women and their struggle to gain equality.

Women have had significant roles in history, but have lacked the recognition throughout time. The month of March remembers and celebrates women's struggles and triumphs.

The roles women have taken in history's timeline are numerous. From women like Joan of Arc, who commanded an army centuries ago, to women like Antonia Novello, the first woman and first Hispanic to become a doctor, the roles women have taken have been varied.

Women have been silenced and booming with laughter. The essence of Nissa's voice are heard and women were not given the recognition they deserved and given new life to a society that seeks guidance in a time of conflict. No struggle is too great to overcome, and learning from our historical women, future generations can be motivated to not give up in reaching the plateau of success.

"Women have to demand for their success, no one will volunteer it for them," says Dr. Texeira.

In 1848, society at that time demanded that women take a subordinate role to men, but women like Lucy Stone, Elizabeth Stanton, Lucretia Mott and Susan B. Anthony fought off the constricted role women had to portray. Through their hard work, the National American Women Suffrage Association was founded to gain the right for women to vote and soon after the ladies became leaders for their own community.

"It took a lot of guts for them to defy the status quo, but if it wasn't for their hard work, women today would not have a voice. For that I can admire them," says junior Celeste Morales.

During WWII, the economy would have fallen if it were not for the women who proceeded to work in the jobs that the men left behind when they went to war. Civil Rights laws would have taken much of the woman accomplishments of centuries ago can be resurrected and given new life to a society that seeks guidance in a time of conflict. No struggle is too great to overcome, and learning from our historical women, future generations can be motivated to not give up in reaching the plateau of success.

"Women have to demand for their success, no one will volunteer it for them," says Dr. Texeira.

China is one of the largest countries in the world, and is located in the Eastern part of the Asian continent. China's landscape to the west consists mostly of mountains, high plateaus, and deserts; the east consists of plains, deltas, hills and coastlines. With such a variety in its landscape, the climate is also extremely diverse; from tropical in the south to sub arctic in the north.

The differences in climate and landscape contribute to a mixture of natural hazards, such as typhoons, floods, tsunamis, earthquakes and droughts. The national language is Putonghua (the common speech), or Mandarin, but Cantonese is another main dialect used mainly in southern China.

Even though China is a multi-religious country, the religions and philosophies practiced are Buddhism, Taoism, Confucianism and Islam.

China's capital is Beijing, which serves as its main political center. Beijing is also home to many trading and industrial firms as well as provides some of China's best schools of education. This historical city dates back to the Ming dynasty (1462–1730). Beijing has many historical attractions, one of its unique characteristics, and the many Hutongs that it has. The word "Hutong" is said to originate from the Mongolian language, but small lanes. Within these Hutongs (small lanes) are many living quarters of the Beijing citizens.

Beijing offers a wide variety in cultural and historical sites of interest for tourists. Such as Tiansamen square, The Forbidden City, The Imperial Palace and many museums.

Student soldiers on standby

By Janna Preston

As the possibility of war intensifies, U.S. soldiers prepare themselves. Those who currently serve or have loved ones in the armed forces, are more than concerned these days. For many months now, troops have been deploying overseas. Many CSUSB students serve in the Reserves or National Guard and are unsure of when or if they will be called to active duty. Due to uncertainty, they stay informed on the issues with Iraq and North Korea.

So how do students within the armed forces feel about the possibility of going to war?

Mathew Vicknair, a communications major in the reserves, does "not necessarily condone war and would hope for peace before conflict, but despite my feelings on the matter, I will do my duty as a soldier and serve for my country."

Vicknair originally joined the armed forces to serve his country. Vicknair is now a senior and expects to graduate in June, unless his detachment of the 420th movement control battalion is activated. Vicknair joined the army at 17, in which he served one year active and has now been in the reserves for the past five years. He is concerned because he knows that his chances of getting called to active duty are high and most likely to happen within this month.

For Vicknair, this means he will then be sent to Fort Louis, for training and then deployed somewhere overseas, thus postponing his graduation day. Student Beth Bennet also is afraid that deployment will interrupt her school. "Because I'm in the military, there is still a chance that I could be activated in the future. It is unsettling to imagine packing up my apartment and dropping out of school..."

Bennet encourages that even if students don't support the war, we should still support the soldiers fighting for us. With two wars being waged at the same time, soldiers are being stationed everywhere, from Georgia to the Gulf.

This is sending a scare throughout the country not only for the well being of the sons and daughters serving, but the possibility that war is coming closer than ever.

Student Ruben Cruz has fears of both. "For me it's both for the simple fact that I have close friends that are being sent out and that we're going to war. I'm afraid of the intensity of the war with the nuclear weapons that will be involved," he says.

War will depend on the outcome of the ultimatum the U.S. gave Iraq to comply with U.N. sanctions by March 17.

"It is unsettling to imagine packing up my apartment and dropping out of school..."

You Say

a graduate degree costs too much?

Here's a great investment tip: Cal Baptist.

A graduate degree is supposed to pay dividends for a lifetime but not all graduate degrees are created equal. At Cal Baptist, you can count on personalized attention from talented faculty, widely recognized graduate programs and an ethical focus that distinguishes you from the crowd. So don't think of your Cal Baptist graduate degree as money out of pocket. It's more like money in the bank.

Noontime Bands: The student union gets punked

By Alan Vacks
Staff Writer

Last Wednesday, Made on Malice performed an aggressive 45-minute set of loud, energetic, upbeat and thrashing punk rock in the courtyard between the Student Union and the Events Center.

Another "great" turnout for the Noontime Bands was characterized by a scantly contribution by the student body, however Made on Malice provided a stimulating brand of music. Assaaulting lyrics such as "F*ck President Bush" and "F*ck Britanny Spears" and "F*ck President Bush" fronted the resonance of a vicious range of bass tones intertwined with the fierce rhythms of drums and furious tempo of three chord progressions.

The band originated three years ago in Riverside when bassist Matt Vicknair and drummer Jeremy Rosenthal were members of The Bootleggers. They eventually teamed up with cellist performs for First Wednesdays

Ana Maria Maldonado

Yet, after expressing their imagination, they still can figure out the words."

Made on Malice's self-titled LP was produced on their own, while mixing and mastering were done with the help of David Reza. They are working on their new LP and declare that it will rock even harder than the last one.

The band has upcoming shows on March 21, at Angel's Sports Bar and Strip Club in Corona and on March 26, at the Skating Rink in Riverside. For more information on upcoming events and how to buy their LP visit www.madeonmalice.com.

Those of you who read my last article on the Noontime Bands should have noticed that I mentioned the free raffle organized by the Student Union Program Board. Just for showing up and hanging out until the end, the drawing gives you a chance to win a prize such as a certificate for a free dinner. All you have to do is take a free raffle ticket.

Well this week I had a premonition and I told several people that I was going to win the raffle. Low and behold I did win the raffle, representatives of the Student Union awarded to me a 50-dollar gift card from Hot Topic.

It just goes to show that sometimes it does pay to listen to your own advice.

Cellist performs for First Wednesdays

By Jennifer Ward
Staff Writer

First Wednesdays have returned. Presented by the Music Department, First Wednesdays are concerts designed to bring the art of music to students, faculty and the community as a whole.

The most recent performance featured Principal Cellist Ana Maria Maldonado. Assisted on piano by Dr. Kris Carlisle, the performance was comprised of works by four musicians. The evening opened with "Pieces en Concert" composed by Francois Couperin, also known as Francois le Grande.

Before each set Maldonado informed the audience of the original artist, the description of the order of the pieces, the time periods in which they were written and any other information needed in order for guests to fully understand the emotion behind the music.

Before intermission "Sonata Number 2 in G Minor" written by Johannes Brahms and "Segunda Española" by Joaquin Nin were also performed with a combination of elegance and intensity.

The pair of musicians performed superbly together. The evening was totally enjoyable for anyone who attended regardless of whether or not he or she is a Connoisseur of fine music.

The music was moving, as it swept from piece to piece, each note beautifully played in the Performing Arts Recital Hall.

These performances are designed to bring music, culture and passion for the arts to all. With finals just around the corner, a night of exquisite sounds was just what a student need to calm their nerves.

Ana Maria Maldonado currently teaches here on campus, as well as at Cal Poly Pomona and the Claremont Community School of Music. Maldonado has traveled to Thailand to play in the Kennedy String Quartet, and was even able to teach children at the Royal Music Academy in Bangkok.

Germany she performed with the Heidelberg Stadstliches Oper Orchester, and she now currently is a principal cellist with the San Bernardino Symphony Orchestra.

Kris Carlisle, also a professor on campus, is an award-winning musician and has recently been awarded the Martha Fischer-Tye Foundation award to study in Graz, Austria. He is one of the founding members of the Pacific Chamber Artists and has joined with Dina Cancryn to from the Cancryn Carlisle Duo. They just returned serving as Artists in Residence at the Banff Centre for the Arts in Banff, Canada. Also, the two are in the final stages of a recording project of music by African American composers.

The next First Wednesdays will be April 2 at 7:30 p.m. performed by Jeff Clayton with the CSUSB Jazz Ensemble. This night of jazz saxophone students just $4, while admission is $10 for non-CSUSB students. Seniors, faculty and staff are free.

For more information call the box office at 880-7516.

Crash Rocks!

By Heather Hubbard
Special to the Chronicle

In our world of pop, punk and hip hop music, sometimes it's refreshing to hear some classic rock sound. Local band, Crash delivers that classic rock sound whether they're performing a cover song or one of their own creations.
They have performed at the Fender Battle of the Bands at the Fender museum in Corona. The Block at Orange (twice actually) as well as at the Highland Country Fair in Norco.
They've met and are friends with various musicians such as The Dream Police, Don Jovi's band, Def Leppard, Savage Garden, The Answer, Paul Stacey, and tons of others. They have recently recorded a demo which contains two original songs and they are currently writing for an upcoming album. Not too shabby considering the oldest member is only 18.
Crash (Brett-guitar/vocals, Derek-guitar/back-up vocals, Jenny-drums/vocals, and Rachel-bass/vocals) began playing together during the summer of 2001 although each of them began making music long before that as kids.

What's even cooler is that each musician can play something other than what they play in the band. For instance, Brett plays lead guitar for the group, but he's also no stranger to the drums; Jenny is Crash's drummer but she's also been playing the guitar since she was eight.
Even though they've barely been together for two years, their stage presence and sound suggests otherwise. While watching them perform I kept forgetting that the lead singer is only 13 (Brett's vocals and stage-confidence make you ask, "He's really only 13?" and that they're not already an "it" band with some huge record company and big egos.
Their rock, makes-you-want-to-sing-along tune "Take Me Away" shows off the band's writing ability lyrically and musically. They change up the beat throughout and don't fall into the same tiresome sound over and over again (a boring and irritating trap a lot of older, experienced bands seem to fall into).
Crash is a fresh breath of air from all of the other wannabe, adolescent bands out there that screen into their microphones, scream meaningless less chords and make random beats on the drums and call it music. They definitely don't act their age, thank goodness; their talent is rare seen in other young, up & coming bands. Their demo and shows prove that they already have what it takes to be rock stars. More, tell lil' co.

If you're into rock music or just want to check out and support this cool local band, go to their website: www.crashrock.com

Sorry Glass Man

My apology to Paul Brayton for mislabeling his untitled piece as "Day and Night NYC." The photo appeared in last week's issue of the Coyote Chronicle in the article entitled "Warming up the student gallery" and the mishap irks me because I don't want to misrepresent any­body or the work they create. The picture that appeared was a piece done by Paul Brayton, just not the one I intended for the cap­ tive. The picture I intended is a vessel that carries the livelihood of urban life with meticulous detail and illustrates the skewed perception of New York City in all its triumphs and struggles. I take full responsibility for the mistake and hope I have alleviat­ ed any misunderstandings.

All you need is some good dvd

By Ivan Fernandez & Marcos Landin

New & Improved 2003 Rating System:

Excellent Rating: Definitely Watch This Film
Mild Rating: Get A Second Opinion
Poor Rating: Save Your Money
For A Lapdance

SPRING BREAK MOVIES

Ivan: Not all of us are into. Heck, I'm beyond poor. So for those of us who can't afford to take a trip, what else is there to do besides work? The only thing you can do: sink your claws into:

Marcos: I highly recommend getting yourselves a copy of The Ring on DVD (in widescreen, of course).

Ivan: They still release movies in Fullscreen? What a waste of money. Follow Marc's advice and DVD'n.

Marcos: Yes, people still claim they want to see the full picture, so they buy a "Fullscreen" copy. Anyway, the DVD contains two very cool features. One is the actual tape that the people in the movie watch. Two is the deleted scenes in a 15-minute short film put together by Gore Verbinski himself. And it's still scary as hell.

Ivan: Here's a DVD you can sink your claws into: X-Men 1.5. Just in time for the sequel comes this supersize edition of the first film. And who doesn't want more Anna Paquin? groan

Marcos: It's jam-packed with behind-the-scenes footage and a tour of the X2 sound stage. It also has a fairly long X2 trailer. In the actual film, there were no deleted scenes added, but wherever you see the X-Men logo, you pull out and it shows you an in-depth documentary on that scene.

Ivan: Another great film to place in your collection is The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers. Although I didn't think the film was as great as everyone said, it was still one of the better films of last year. What'd you think, Landin?

Marcos: CHUBBY! I mean, come on. A 90-year Old Python Ivy helping out Tom Cruise in the future, what's the hullabaloo in that?

Ivan: When did you change your mind about that film?

MOVIE NEWS

Ivan: The Incredible Hulk star Eric Bana has shown interest in playing John Lennon for a Lennon biopic. "The movie will center on the last 10 years of Lennon's life, partly because I think it would be uneven for me to grow a mop-top at my age, and because those years are generally well-known to the masses and very interesting," said Bana.

Marcos: I know who could play Yoko Ono. Oprah Winfrey. She's an astounding actress and will have no problem tackling this role.

Ivan: And finally, Stephen Sommers' next film will be Van Helsing. According to the film's website, www.vanhelsingmovie.com, the film, set in the late 19th century, "tells Bram Stoker's monster hunter, Van Helsing (Hugh Jackman), summoned to a distant Eastern European land on a quest to vanquish evil."

The great thing about this film is that it will bring back classic Universal Studio monsters such as Dracula, Frankenstein AND The Wolfman, all on the same screen. While typing his paper that's due the next day, Marcos had this to say:

Scrap Metal

By Brian Keathley

Greetings friends!!! Well, gang this is it: the last issue for the quarter. I'm that much closer to graduation. So, for this last installment, here are all the tidbits of info that don't support a full article but need to be mentioned;

First, the 19th of March will be the 21st anniversary of the death of Randy Rhoads. This brilliant guitarist who performed on Ozzy's first two solo albums was killed in a plane crash at the young age of 24. He ranks alongside Hendrix and Springsteen but need to be mentioned;

Second, Kelly Osborne (daughter of the afore mentioned Ozzy) will be online to talk to her fans TODAY, Monday, March 10th log on to www.kellyosbourne.com for the info.

Want to go to Ozzfest for just $10.00? I'll tell you how next quarter so stay tuned.

KISS/AEROSMITH summer tour - coming to your town so start saving for tickets now. Also, a KISS pay per view event "Live from Australia with the Melbourne Symphony" will be on cable and satellite soon.

Metallica will be at the L.A. Coliseum this July!!! I hear they will be focusing on their older material so this should be a great show.

Bon Jovi is in the area for 2 shows the first week of April. One show will be at the Arrowhead Pond and the other at Staples Center.

Grand Funk Railroad guitarist Bruce Kulick will be releasing a full-length solo album in April. Kulick has played previously with KISS and Union. Also, here is one metal Internet radio websites to look at during the break: www.hardradio.com, this is as good as it gets for metal music. By the fans for the fans; no corporate driven play list here, - the way radio was meant to be.
I was extremely offended when I went to the Opinions & Editorials section of the February 24th edition of the Coyote to help the person.

While I know that everyone is entitled to their own opinion and is entitled to voice that opinion, I was also asked to read a good paper that deals with the issues of the students and life here on campus, not an advertisement of underwear.

I found the editorial, "Chonies From Hell" particularly offensive. The author of this editorial obviously has no respect for women and judges them based on appearance rather than what really counts. How does what a woman wear under her clothes affect anyone else's experience at school? Also, this campus is supposed to provide a positive learning experience for all people, both genders.

Students should focus on their education and becoming mature adults, not hurtful and judging fellow students.

Chonies from hell

Instead of reading an editorial about what type of underwear female students should wear, (notice there was not one mention about appropriate underwear for men), I would rather read students' opinions on important issues, such as the impending war with Iraq or even a student's experiences in a certain class or at a certain function.

Dr. is important, especially on a college campus; it is the development of the mind, and college is supposed to aid students in their education and encourage them to learn more and get more involved in the world around them.

Heather Strumman
CSUSB Student

To those whom I've offended.

I apologize to anyone who took my article seriously. However, I am not apologizing for the content within the article. When I wrote "Chonies from hell," I was simply writing a piece that was removed from all the political jargon and was trying to view life from a lighter standpoint. But, I guess it wasn't taken in that sense.

I am not quite sure what it was that made everyone's panties get in a bunch. There were not any demeaning sayings or ideologies about women in the article. It was based on MY opinions and experiences, not how everyone should think or what they should wear.

I was just silly. And not even that. Besides who really advice to them get any- ways.

And another thing, since when have panty issues become more offensive than masturba- tion (Touch your nose, not Iraq)?

As for the comment that was made by Heather Strumman. "The author obviously has no respect for women."

Needless to say, I am a woman and one who is proud to be one. My apolog- es to you in regards to the fact that I cared about whether or not my underwear show and if people see them. Hey, at least my chonies will be cute ones.

Affirmative Action:
What exactly is being opposed?

The readers of this letter, if it does become published, must excuse me. I am sorry if this sub- ject argument seems redundant, but I simply had to voice a response to the letter sent by Robert Norbyhn.

He seemed a bit annoyed by being generalized because he is white. I will be the first to wel- come him to the club. Being a kind person also has its downs as well. Norbyhn I am appalled that you stated that it has, "no place in present society." And how do you propose that it promotes racism.

Equal opportunity is something that is guaranteed to minorities. Established, so that we may compete for any position or credit, beginning from the same standpoint. This applies to educa- tion and employment. Although we are "guaranteed" equal chances, are they really granted to us? Come on! Don't kid yourself and tell me that they are.

In 1996, 55 percent, of California voters approved Proposition 209, which made it unlawful to discriminate in education or employment. It must be based on the appli- cants' merit. Merit is generally profited through the person's didactic environment or condi- tions. So then, perceptivity if the person's "environment" were of unfortunate or underprivileged structure, they would suffer or lack even standard or average "merit."

-Manifest Destiny: Our Destiny-

Each individual is entitled to their own unique opinion, therefore Online Editor, this response's purpose is not to degrade the quality of your beliefs, but to open eyes to the fact that although I disagree with your opinions, I am going to advocate the slaughter of thousands of Iraqi people, at least do it in a more responsible and educated man- ner.

When you state in your article that, "We gotta blow somebody up," it seems as if you don't realize that thousands of Iraqi children have died as a result of US bombard- ments. That "somebody" who you state we have to blow up is someone's mother, father, sister, friend. Aside from the men in the armed forces, the innocent also die and somewhere in the middle east our peers are being killed each day in a virtual war zone. While you sit at home comfortably, and don't have to fear the safety of your family or yourself. The situation is not as black and white as it seems. People have conveniently forgotten that Saddam Hussein was trained years ago by the C.I.A., and put into power by the United States when the former Iraq leader was "dis- posed" of. And when Saddam got tired of being a puppet to the United States, that was when things got ugly.

The American Imperialism which you advocate in your article is the cause of what has unfortunately bred anger in the Middle East, so when you see anti-US protests on television, remember that they too are entitled to their opinion. Imagine the person you love was murdered by a US soldier, you wouldn't be too happy with the American President either.

But enough of my liberal rambling, the bottom line is this; the situation has two sides that people are often afraid to see. And the "teacher" is also a living breathing person. Not an innam- erable object. So please con- sider your opinions and mine twice before advancing a war for the sake of power and oil.

Respectfully from a proud American,

Alexandra Rodriguez
ENVIRONMENTAL-FRIENDLY LEARNING

As our lives become more industry-oriented, the importance of recycling is getting bigger. One way or another, we must learn that we have to recycle more in order to prepare a better living environment for the future.

Then, how well are we informed about recycling? Just a short survey that our team conducted last month revealed that most of our students couldn't even differentiate blue containers from gray ones.

Another interesting point is some of them think that janitors don't do their jobs properly. We received many complaints about recycling containers from gray ones.

It is obvious that our campus community needs some innovative and developing educational programs on recycling.

According to the comments and suggestions that we have, it seems like less motivation brings carelessness and untidy work to our campus.

If you visit the CSUSB Facilities Services web site, you will notice there are many recycling and refuse management programs that are announced for the last six months. However, the real problem is these announcements do not reach to students. What we need in here is instead of arranging some campus-wide recycling programs, we need more student-oriented recycling programs where our students can involve in each program and take an active role in.

To do that, those programs must be advertised strongly and make it sure that each student will be informed about those activities.

Moreover, CSUSB Facilities Services can arrange a recycling seminar, which every student can attend and come up with new and innovative ideas for recycling on campus. Ideally, this seminar must provide some rewards to students who come up with the best idea.

Additionally, in order to increase the level of participation to this seminar, Facilities Services must give some small gifts to each participant.

On the other hand, the location of the recycling containers is essential in collecting high volumes of recyclables. Nowadays, CSUSB Management is planning to install three recycling centers on our campus. Unfortunately, we don't have any information about where they are going to be installed. The first place we thought is parking lots. It is obvious that the most crowded parking lots in our school are E and F, which is in front of Jack Brown Hall.

Perhaps, one of them may be installed there.

Along with our goal, building-recycling centers to or close to the parking lots is a smart idea, because first of all they are the first and the last places that campus community visits every day.

In our opinion, in spite of these recycling centers are built in strategic locations, CSUSB Management still needs to encourage students to recycle more. Perhaps, providing a small rewarding program may solve the participation problem. For instance, at those centers, donors may be provided by a receipt, which they can redeem these receipts while they are paying tuition.

Although, the diversion rate statistics of CSUSB deny this demotivation in recycling, our team still thinks that level of participation in the campus must be increased.

According to the California Public Resource Code 42921, which states that by January 1, 2004, all state and community colleges must divert at least 50% of their solid waste from the landfill, either through reduction, recycling, or composting activities. This rate in our school was 50.5% last year. Due to substantial government cutbacks in the 2003 fiscal year, the administration at CSUSB is keenly interested in meeting this environmental requirement while avoiding additional costs.

It is an undisputed fact that especially in a state university, it is more important to mitigate the financial impact of new investments. However, projects promising great results in the long run must not be avoided easily.

You don't have to unwrap it, unroll it, or worry that it can break.

Depo-Provera is 99.7% effective.
Birth control you think about just 4 x a year.

Of course, using condoms is the only way to protect yourself against HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases, but make sure you're also as protected as possible against pregnancy. That's why more women than ever are choosing Depo-Provera — it's 99.7% effective when administered on time every 3 months.

Remember, Depo-Provera doesn't protect you from HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

Some women using Depo-Provera experience side effects. The most common are irregular periods or spotting.

Many women stop having periods altogether after a few months and some may experience a slight weight gain. You shouldn't use Depo-Provera if you could be pregnant, if you have had any unexplained periods, or if you have a history of breast cancer, blood clots, stroke, or liver disease. When using Depo-Provera, there may be a possible decrease in bone density.

This product is intended to prevent pregnancy, it does not protect against HIV infection AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

What is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection contains the hormone medroxyprogesterone acetate. It stops ovulation by changing the way your body works so it cannot become fertilized by sperm and result in pregnancy. DEPO-PROVERA prevents ovulation for about 3 months. You will need to receive an injection every 3 months (13 weeks) between injections, or longer than 6 weeks after delivery, your health care provider

How effective is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

The effectiveness of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection depends on following the recommended dosage schedule exactly (see "How often do I get my shot of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?""). Your health care provider will help you compare DEPO-PROVERA with either Contraceptive Injection or another contraceptive method. Your health care provider will also discuss other factors that may affect your contraceptive choice. The most common reason people discontinue DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is because they choose not to use it. This is why DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is considered effective.

What if I miss a shot of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is given every 3 months (13 weeks) between injections, or longer than 6 weeks after delivery, your health care provider

Other Benefits of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection

Women usually do not need to use a backup form of contraception while using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection. If you do not want to get pregnant, you can still use birth control methods that are effective and safe for use with DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection. You may talk to your health care provider about using other contraceptive methods while using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection.

Would you ever consider doing this again? (with someone else).

A J: Not sure.

RM: It was a good experience.

Was this a good or bad experience for you?

A J: Neutral.

RM: It was a good experience.

What did you think of the other person's personality?

A J: Very nice person.

RM: I thought she was a nice down to earth person.

10. Was there any chemistry between you and the other person?

A J: I'm not sure.

RM: No, I don't think there was any chemistry between us.

11. Would you ever consider going out with this person again on date as just a friend and why?

A J: Unless.

We had just a friendship thing. Not that I didn't like him or anything.

RM: Maybe as a friend, because there was no chemistry between us.

12. What happened after you left the restaurant? (Did you go home, hook-up, etc.)

A J: Had to go to work at 6 so nothing happened. He just dropped me off.

RM: She gave her a ride to her dorm and we went our separate ways.

13. Would you consider this person to be your friend now?

A J: I'm not sure:

RM: I will say hi to her if I see her on campus.

14. What do you think about Coyote Dating in general?

A J: RM thought it was O.K., but it would be better if more people participated.

They need to work on President Kennedy's vision of an equal America making Federal and State laws creating affirmative action policies in public education, employment and contracting.

A majority of people think affirmative action is a good thing to do because it is a handout. That is quite the opposite. They also assume that merit is ignored and focuses on race and gender. That is false. The myths on affirmative action continue to be used as an original concept into being. It is an equalizer for a disproportionate society.

A hike turned adventure: part II

Last week, I was left out of energy at the bottom of the Grand Canyon. It was a question of whether he would be able to make it out of the canyon alive with my wife. This week we will witness the startling conclusion of the story.

My body was completely out of energy and the hope of returning to the top began dwindling. The canyon was trying to claim another victim and I was slowly succumbing to it.

Continuing to stare at the call box, one thought kept on screaming inside my head. "What should I do now?"

The fear of being stuck at the bottom was overwhelming. As I continued with that thought, I began to realize that there was only one way out of the canyon: I had to climb to the top, no matter how bad I felt and no matter how long it took. I could not give into the nihilism I felt.

I knew I had to muster up all the vigor, all the energy I had within myself. It was an unusual feeling knowing I had no other options. This was it; I had to make it up the canyon.

My wife suggested, "We should eat something to get my energy back before we continue. My wife carried all the food in her backpack. I decided to stop for a moment and ask her to hand me a Power Bar. I did not feel hungry at all because of the blood flowing within me, but I knew I had to eat something in order to get some kind of energy to make it back up.

Now, if you do not know anything about Power Bars, they are hardend, packed material that is supposed to be considered food. They are allegedly what athletes eat when they are participating in a competition. I was hoping that this substance, this material would do its trick and give me the energy I needed to make it back up the canyon. But after taking one bite of it, I began to gag. Actually, each time I took a bite of this nasty meal, I would almost dump everything that was still swimming in my stomach. I could feel the lump of the chewed up Power Bar pushing its way down slowly.

From this moment on, I began to loathe Power Bars as this hatred still reigns in me to this day.

We finally left that sullen place with the call box and continued up. My wife was ahead of me for the first time during the hike. She, despite her blister ravaged feet, was continuing quite well. I thought earlier it would be she that would be struggling to get back up, but it turned out to be me.

I began to finally recover my energy. My body began utilizing those carbohydrates the Power Bar provided. I started to travel faster and started to take fewer rests. Now I knew I would make it up.

Softball back on track

The ten game losing streak is over for CSUSB softball team with a 5-2 win over Cal State at the Coyote Softball field.

The double header high-lighted the dominance of complete game performances from seniors Jaime Killeen and Diana Sutton, both pitched solid complete games. Killeen allowed only two runs on five hits and Sutton gave up one run on six hits.

The Coyotes supplied enough offense with 17 hits, including three solo homers off pitcher Amber Neves during the first game; three of the 12.

The second game had the Coyotes with six runs on the board by the second inning. That would prove to be enough as the Coyotes took the game by the final score of 6-1.

Four days later, the Lady Coyotes welcomed Biola University by taking the first game of a double header with a tie of 7-6. Two unearned runs in the seventh inning with two outs made the difference in score.

Sharmaine Kendrick singled in the tying run after Tamie James reached base on an error and Tracie Schiappi singled. Nicole Gomez then hit a ground ball to Biola's shortstop, who then boobbled the ball for an error and the winning run to advance to home plate.

Biola came back in the second game and scored first in the first inning on a two-run home run from Crystal Roberts off Coyote's pitcher Jaime Killeen.

By the end of the night, Biola was up 7-3 and had 11 hits of the Coyote's pitching.

The Coyotes are now 5-7 in conference and 8-18 overall. The next two games on March 7th and 8th are against Cal State Dominguez Hills and Cal State Bakersfield.

Sport radio at CSUSB

By Robert Marino
Special to the Chronicle

Coyote Radio has just started their very first all sports talk radio show.

One of our star sports journalists, Wesley Collins has taken his views to the airwaves. He can be heard every Thursday at 12-2pm on the Internet at Radio-CSUSB.edu. Collins says of being a double treat with being a sports writer and talk show host, he only replied "Wait till I get my own television show!"

Collins two hours are divided between professional sports, your Coyotes, and a little music. His show has already aired an exclusive Harlem Globetrotter interview with the team captain, local students who have run the LA Marathon, and soon the Universities star players and coaches.

Every week, Collins chooses a player of the week to spotlight and this week it was TK Reid on the Men's Basketball team.

If all goes well, Collins is hoping to have his first live broadcasting from Arena, calling the Men's basketball finals. The sports talk show is broadcast live from the performing arts building.

So if you want to be a guest or debate the "resident know it all", you are more than welcome to bring it on.

Four straight CCAA titles and counting

By Wesley Collins
Staff Writer

Friday and Saturday night the CSUSB men's team were handed two disappointing losses. But more importantly those two losses might prove to be fatal when the Western Regional committee makes a decision on March 10 to determine who host the regional tournament.

Friday night the Coyotes headed to Cal State Bakersfield. Unfortunately, the "Yotes lost in overtime, 74-68.

Junior forward Fabian Pinnock turned into heartache. The "Votes with Cal State Stanislaus also fell, 99-82, and now must wait until Monday for the chance of hosting the regional.

"It's really nice to win the CCAA and be a part of something so special it's very rewarding," says assistant coach Paul Trevor of the team's accomplishment.

"It's a great accomplishment, especially with the strength of this conference and the quality of teams that are in it," says head coach Jeff Oliver who then points to play in the West Region Tournament.

The 21 straight wins have not spots at the end of the season qual­ify to play in the West Region Championship.

The teams in the top eight have not gone through the mountains of San Bernardino, or the tiny village outside of Honolulu or the forested area of Areata in Eureka, Ca.

But one answer is for sure, all answers will be answered March 10.

Waterpolo staying afloat

By Wesley Collins
Staff Writer

The CSUSB Women's Water Polo team has come out of the gate strong this season. They are currently 8-3 and have won five of their last six games.

The Lady Coyotes have achieved a lot in this young 2003 season. They won the CSUSB mini-tournament, which included quality wins against Whittier and Chapman.

They have also enjoyed excellent victories against the University of La Verne, Arizona State and another defeat of Chapman.

The ladies are looking to add to their good fortune in upcoming games and tournaments. Their next two tournaments are at CSUSB and include games against Notre Dame, Whittier and Occidental.

After that tournament the Lady Coyotes will play Iona at CSUSB on March 13 at 4 p.m. and then host the CSUSB Coyote Classic. Both the tournaments are all day events.

The Coyote Classic Tournament, which is played March 15-16, will include other outstanding teams like Notre Dame, Texas, Marist, La Verne and Whittier.

This year's squad has its sights set on the WWPA Regional Championship, which will be hosted by Cal State Bakersfield.

These games and tournaments will be stepping-stones toward the ladies future aspirations of competing in that championship.

All-American Bobby Burries and his teammates will be celebrating their four straight California Collegiate Athletic Association championship.

"When you get to a one-game, do-or-die situation you don't worry about what's ahead of you, you worry about what's right in front of you," says Trevor of his team's focus.

"We don't hang banners for 21-game winning streaks...we try to hang CCAA Championship banners, we try to hang West Region Championship banners and hopefully someday we can hang a National Championship banner," says Oliver of the focus he tries to bring to his team for the remainder of this season.

The question now, is will the Coyotes host the West Regional after a pair of weekend losses? However, there are three possible answers that are for certain. Either the road to the Elite Eight will go through the mountains of San Bernardino, or the tiny village outside of Honolulu or the forested area of Areata in Eureka, CA.

But one answer is for sure, all answers will be answered March 10.

Jeff Oliver has no worries

Coach Oliver will be the full-time head coach for the 2003-04 season after taking over for Larry Reynolds this season.

By Beatriz Barragan

Coming into the 2002-2003 CSUSB basketball season, it was no secret that CSUSB was in need of a new head coach. Larry Reynolds had stepped down after two years as head coach of the Coyotes.

The search for a new head coach was a long and difficult process for the CSUSB administration. They wanted someone who could take the Coyotes to the next level and make them a competitive team in the California Collegiate Athletic Association.

After searching for the right candidate, CSUSB found the perfect fit in Jeff Oliver. Oliver had spent two years as assistant coach at Ventura College and had a proven track record of success.

Oliver has taken over the head coaching position at CSUSB and is already making an impact on the team. He has brought a new energy and enthusiasm to the program, and the players are responding well to his leadership.

There was some initial concern among the fans about the change in coaching staff, but they have quickly warmed up to Oliver's approach. The team has started the season strong and is off to a promising start.

Oliver has a vision for the future of the CSUSB basketball program. He plans to continue what Coach Reynolds had started and take the Coyotes to the next level.

The Coyotes have a bright future under Oliver's leadership, and fans can't wait to see what he will bring to the program. With Oliver at the helm, the CSUSB basketball team is well on its way to achieving success on the court.
