Police Chief Workshop Held, Five People Attend

District Attorney Grover Trask filed misdemeanor charges against 20 of the estimated 40 police officers who prayed on the Tyisha Miller case last November.

The D.A.'s office said that if filed charges against those officers who could be identified from videotapes and audio recordings by the Riverside Police Department. Police officers also followed and pulled over individuals, in the guise of "routine traffic stops," to obtain the names and addresses of individuals they could not identify. Criminal charges filed against the officers include obstructing access on a state highway and disorderly conduct in a public place. Several officers also received multiple counts involving child endangerment. Although all 20 were in a unified group at the same time, the D.A.'s office divided the activities among officers into 10 different arrangement dates, as an apparent part of a divide and conquer strategy.

In the past year since the death of Tyisha Miller, the black woman was cleared of criminal charges, and the Black Voice News currently covers the issue of legal policies.

Systematic patterns of legal profiling are in many ways another example of racial profiling at its worst. The situation could have been prevented if Dials was not standing in the vestibule not causing any kind of disturbance.

At the BAPAC Mixer last Friday evening, I was fortunate to hear from one of the longest-serving Black Leaders in Governor (Big) Roy. Mr. Jay Schenck gave us much needed data on how K-12 students are impacted by the National Organization to improve our overall racial equity - not just BAPAC but other African American groups. I encourage each of you to send this to anyone who has access to youth in Grades 9-12 whether through your church, the school system or social club. This is an excellent opportunity to secure awards and scholarships.
