WASHINGTON D.C.

The Obama and McCain campaigns have agreed to an informal format for the four final nationally televised debates. The four debates will focus on foreign policy issues kicked off President George W. Bush and the Republican National Convention in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Democratic Senator Barack Obama will win on those issues. Republican John McCain plans to hold a three-hour meeting and take a short nap. But the exchange between the presidential candidates will also be anything but relaxed.

The debaters are Presidential Candidates, which is sponsoring the forum, expects the exchange to be among the most important presidential debates in history.

With the nation's financial crisis in mind, the forum will feature the Black dashboard presentation for a conversation on economic responsibility, consumption, consumer confidence, planning, housing crisis, something to do, and giving black pride. Street, Obama and McCain will face off on stage without the presence of advisors. The forum will be open to the public, and the audience will consist of people of all races.

Dr. Pauline Jones Dr. James McCordas

The event begins at 6 p.m. at the Orange Grove Room, 689 South E Street, San Bernardino. It will last a social hour followed by a dinner at 7 p.m. The event will feature a keynote speech by former Senator Barack Obama, which will be followed by the presentation of the Humanitarian Award.

The Humanitarian Award recognizes the person who is the definition of a humanitarian. It is a prestigious honor that is given to the person who demonstrates the qualities of a true humanitarian.

Last week I gave you my new choice for president and this week I am focusing on congressional and local offices. In the past several years the increasing INCREDIBLE corruption and increasing lack of ethical behavior has convinced many to vote for the opposition candidate in the next election. I urge you to support the candidates most committed to the principles of efficiency, ethical behavior, and truth in government. It is critical that we vote for candidates who are committed to the values of honesty, integrity, and respect for the law. This includes voting for candidates who are committed to the values of honesty, integrity, and respect for the law.
Record Attendance Expected At Annual California Native American Day Celebration

James Ramos

Since 1999, nearly 35,000 students and teachers have participated in the CICAC, a working forum offering a variety of educational activities about Native American indigenous peoples in California, through workshops, educational resources and informative discussions by tribal members and academics.

Over five days of this year's conference, nearly 1,500 students and teachers will be scheduled to participate in events such as handwriting, ball singing and pottery classes. All students and teacher activities are held in the San Manuel Samoan Union Society.

Senator Pelosi (D-San Francisco) said of the Republicans. The dollar figure shown is staggering, amounting in 7% of the nation's gross domestic product. But the most disturbing aspect of the item is the extent to which it would allow Treasury to alter national policy. Directly or indirectly, could not be over a court or administrative agency and was not the temporary legislature. The administration contended that the 270 billion dollars must go through a legislative process and would not be subject to Congress' traditional power of the purse.

The administration contends that an emergency case with an administrative, not legislative, status on tap, and is expected to complete by the end of the year. The result is that the government could now be able to fund the $25 billion in the initial rescue package, which may not be as bold a figure as the 700 billion dollars that was expected to be needed.

The operation is far more difficult, but the administration is likely to continue as it did with the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP) and other initiatives. The government is expected to continue to work with Congress to pass legislation to avoid the need for a rescue package.

BRIARWOOD MANSIONS

The residents of Briarwood Mansions, a senior housing complex in San Bernardino, are facing an uncertain future after the complex was placed in receivership by a court. The Residents Association has been trying to negotiate with the owner, a private equity firm, to prevent the sale of the property. The association has been working with local elected officials to find a solution to the crisis.

The residents of Briarwood Mansions are concerned about the potential loss of their homes and the impact it could have on their lives. They have been seeking legal advice and consulting with local officials to explore their options. The Residents Association is also working with community organizations to raise awareness about the situation.

The complex was built in the 1970s and has been home to many seniors for over 40 years. The residents have formed a strong community and are dedicated to staying in their homes. They are concerned about the uncertainty of the situation and the potential loss of their homes.

The Residents Association is working with local elected officials to find a solution to the crisis. They are exploring options such as negotiating with the owner to keep the property in the community or working with other community organizations to find a new owner.

The residents of Briarwood Mansions are facing a difficult time and are seeking support from the community. They are hopeful that their efforts will result in a positive outcome and that they will be able to stay in their homes.

Inspiration Comes to the Inland Empire

In an era so far away from the generation before, in fact, if you know closely enough you can count just outside the outside sounds of eighteen year old Andrew DeBarge of Riverside, California.

He began on the Snark,新闻网, Shawn DeBarge, Great Royal, Michigan, Trinny Poverty, Drug dealers, Chart breakers, Cheers and Crimes. Horton Ricard that surpassed your typical.

This was DeBARGE's environment, but it would not become his reality. Andrew, son of April and Tommy DeBarge, the bass player of the American R&B group "DeBarge," was born into a musical family whose career was still not a success, but it would not become his reality.

My daughter Audrey and I shared our recipes with my granddaughter Bea and my new granddaughter-in-law, Trice. That’s how we welcome someone into the family.

When Bea and Trice got married at Big Bear Lake, they signed their marriage certificate and jumped the broom. Then we all sat down together to eat—as a family.

That day I told Bea and Trice what I always told Audrey, as she was growing up:

“If you fall, I’ll be there; if you rise, I’ll be there. Whatever support I can give you, I’ll give you.” Bea and Trice know they can count on me.

A PART OF OUR CONTINUED COVERAGE ON THE LABOR MOVEMENT, ONE LOCAL ORGANIZING CAMPAIGN DISCUSS THE IMPORTANCE OF UNION DUES.

From the AFL-CIO Communications Team

Union membership helps raise workers’ pay and narrow the income gap that disadvantages minorities and women. Union workers earn 30 percent more than nonunion workers, according to the U.S. Department of Labor’s Bureau of Labor Statistics. Their median weekly earnings for full-time work and salary work were $583 in 2007, compared with $465 for their nonunion counterparts.

The union wage benefit is even greater for minorities and women. Union women earn 33 percent more than nonunion women. African American union members earn 37 percent more than their nonunion counterparts, for Latino workers, the main advantage equals 51 percent and for Asian American workers, the union advantage is 4 percent.

Union members in low-wage occupations on average earn a great deal more than nonunion workers in the same occupations, often lifting their earnings above the official poverty level. For example, union cashiers in 2006 earned an average of $11.87—46 percent more than nonunion workers in the same occupation. Over a year’s time, having a union card could translate into more than $7,800 in additional pay for such a low wage worker. While the nonunion cashier’s earnings, on average, leave a worker $3,746 below the poverty line for a family of four, the union cashier’s earnings on average, bring the worker $4,075 above the poverty line for a family of four.

According to Professor Harold Saunders of the University of California-Berkeley [1] unions are associated with higher productivity, lower employee turnover, improved workplace communication, and a better-trained workforce.

According to Brown and Medoff, “unions help workers escape their conditions short of ‘exiting.’” For example, the sum of the union’s collective bargaining agreement s that require employers to provide training; and finally, unions often conduct their own training.

Turnover

Professor Saunders also finds that unions reduce turnover. He cites Freeman and Medoff’s finding that “about one fifth of the union productivity effect stemmed from lower worker turnover.” Unions improve communication channels giving workers the ability to improve their conditions short of “exiting.”

According to a recent survey of 73 independent studies on unions and productivity, “The available evidence points to a positive and statistically significant association between unions and productivity in the U.S. manufacturing and education sectors, of around 10 and 7 percent, respectively.” Some scholars have found an even larger positive relationship between unions and productivity. According to Brown and Medoff, “unions and unionism are about 22 percent more productive than those that are not.”

Training

Several studies in have found a positive association between union membership and the overall quality of workplace training. Unionized establishments are more likely to offer formal training. This is especially true for small firms. There are a number of reasons for this: less turnover among union workers, making the employer more likely to offer training; collective bargaining agreements that require employers to

Miracle at St. Anna, honoring the historical "Buffalo Soldiers" of 1944

By Ashley A. Jones

Miracle at St. Anna, directed by Spike Lee, is an inspirational drama that depicts a true story about four Black American soldiers who are members of the 92nd "Buffalo Soldiers" Division in Tuscani, Italy during World War II.

They reside in a Tuscan village and ultimately overcome cultural barriers and develop relationships in spite of race and class in hopes of forming an alliance against the Nazis. Miracle at St. Anna is derived from the novel of the same title written by James McBride. McBride, a former journalist of the Wilmington News-Journal, The Boston Globe, People Magazine, and the Washington Post has also authored the award-winning memoir titled "The Color of Water".

"The film is definitely more than just a war film," said Lee. According to Lee, Miracle at St. Anna is a lot more spiritual and inspirational than any of his past works. Lee has directed approximately 47 films, produced roughly 43 films and has written 14 screenplays during his 30-year career. Miracle at St. Anna is set to release on Friday, September 26, 2008.
