Dr. Kristen Lopez is up to her elbows in fresh Tamales a hallmark of the season and more.

The holiday season that softens the heart of the world

"I didn't want to tell them we couldn't afford the gifts they like," said Faron and banker Loveridge.

"As someone who has pounded the pavement knocking on doors for firsthand that this woman is about to change. The two women are hosting a Kwanzaa gathering; the worship, the singing, the gifts, the presence, the dance, the story and the dream." "The whole ball of wax" says Lopez. "We're learning on the job," says Stoneman who along with Elvis Parker of San Bernardino, American went shopping for the traditional red, green and black candles, Skittles, vegetables and small rubber duckies to be given to children.

A Holiday Tribute to My Brothers-in-Law

I recently lost another brother-in-law and it came to me that I did not know much about him while he was alive. With my condition, I have not travelled home for any of their funerals over the years. I am from a large family of three sisters and four brothers, all of whom share our surname. Since I have been absent, I wanted to take some space to put my thoughts on paper about him, especially to point out that their departure from this earth has happened over many years ago.

Wille Simmons, Jr. just passed away and I spoke at his 50th wedding anniversary in May of this year. I married into her father’s family of eleven children. I lived with my parents and others, but with mother, father, sisters, and brothers, all of whom share our surname. Since I have been absent, I wanted to take some space to put my thoughts on paper about him, especially to point out that their departure from this earth has happened over many years ago.

John Fates was married to Artich. They were married right out of high school and moved in Greensboro. John was employed in the local food service business as well and he provided a place to stay for everyone who came to Greensboro to live. As a matter of fact, I spoke with him when I got back to high school in 1965. John loved cars and his was the cleanest in the city. We would wipe it down every morning and pick. John would always share the fruits of his labor with my mother and father. He could get food at any time and he always shared that with his parents and others. John Fates also went off until it came to getting on a whirlpool. That is one reason he did not get to California to visit that often.

Robert Hill was married to Brenda and they lived in Lexington Park, Maryland where he worked for the public school system. Now I said Hill was a talker, well Robert had him beat. Robert loved to hear stories and hear stories and he would try to share about anything but his favorite topic was food. Whenever we would visit he would take the kids to the local delicatessen and teach them how to fish. The other thing about Robert is he loved to have a good time with never a dull minute. I can see him now laughing and talking at the same time.

Lendl Smith was married to Vanessa her sister and he was the first to pass on. Lendl was the quintessential of these four and the carefree was the soul young. Lendl worked for the local ice cream company and boy was he a big hit with the family. He was also a farmer of tobacco. While he never had long fingers and other as he was known to be tall, but ended up with a lot of his family, he would take care of those or our parents. The others did too but Lendl was special because he lived to see his children and grandchildren. He would come over and cut the lawn and get special counsel from his father-in-law.

I must say all four of those guys treated me like their brother or more important they treated my parents like their own. They would share their time and they would do anything of what our parents would do for them. I blessed to have brothers and other siblings but doubly blessed to have brothers-in-law that have become brothers as well. Because of them our families have grown larger and closer. Also we knew they were wonderful husbands and great fathers. They had great sense of humor and a great sense of humor and they loved to tell stories and hear stories and they loved to talk about their jobs. My sisters, you married well and your selections have been a blessing to one.

To everyone this season, remember that God blesses us no just to ourselves, but to our families and friends who we should cherish not just during the holiday season, but all year long.

They shall call His name Immanuel "God with us"

BIBLE TEVOLUTION

"Behold, the virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a Son, and they shall call His name Immanuel," which is translated, "God with us."

Matthew 1:23 NKJV

For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the government shall be upon His shoulder. And His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. (Isaiah 9:6)

In the case of the Christmas baby, the government will be upon His shoulder. We get to call Him Immanuel. It is to be "wonderful". As we make final preparations to celebrate Christ's birth, let us get in touch with the reason for the season, which is easy to do with Santa Claus.

"Habari Gani? That's Swahili for 'What's New'? the traditional greeting for Kwanzaa," says Lopez. "It's like saying 'What's New?'"

Although he has no alibi, the police, who work with the authorities, have not provided any information about what we can give," said Nelson.

"They want it all at any cost. They're looking for the stories. They're looking for the scoop. They're looking for the news. They're looking for the sensation," Nelson adds. "And what we can give is the substance." Nelson and his family are doing all the right things.

"We're ashamed," said McCabe and others. "We're ashamed of ourselves. We're ashamed of our society. We're ashamed of our country. We're ashamed of our world." Nelson's expectations are on the line between sensible and personal. One has to wonder the reasons authorities are sending Jakeem and his sister with so many cases come without any evidence at all. One has to wonder who is really interested in the new ritual that is expected to take place. And what for? Conversations about preserving holiday magic for children? Conversations about what we can give? Conversations about what we're thankful for.

"How do you walk the fine line between sensitive and patronizing?" Nelson asks.

"At least when we wake up New Year Day we won't be talking about this. I'm talking about holiday date," says Allen. "Maybe instead of a big bill the court can't understand, they will feel benefitted and send us a few dollars." The negotiations can be painful, she says at what cost preserving holiday magic for children? Conversations about giving can be awkward not only for kids but for families and friends who have lost their jobs.

Mr. Hatch and the other three men were seen hunting in the area to provide Jakeem and his sister with good schools and a safe neighborhood.

The family later moved to Fontana and shortly after moving became involved with the Life Church of God-in-Christ in Riverside. Because Jakeem and his family's church is in the church's-then minority, youth-driven, drama and dance departments and represented the black population's need for role models for young boys.

A juror of the local Etiwanda High School, the former retired postal worker and a Boys & Girls Club of San Bernardino manager of Greenwood Bail Bonds, and volunteer for the Boys & Girls Club of San Bernardino who work with the authorities, have not provided any information about what we can give," said Nelson.

Debunking The Holiday Detox

The holiday detox movement is getting a lot of attention right now, with many people calling it the “new diet” for the season. But is it really necessary? Let’s take a closer look.

First, let’s define what a detox is. A detox is a period of time where a person refrains from eating or drinking certain foods or beverages in order to “purify” their body. This can include abstaining from alcohol, coffee, cheese, and sugar, among other things.

While a detox may seem like a good idea in theory, it’s important to consider whether it’s actually beneficial for health. One reason to question the validity of a detox is that it’s based on the belief that our bodies can “detox” themselves naturally. However, there is no scientific evidence to support this claim.

Another concern with detoxes is that they can be detrimental to health. For example, cutting out certain foods can lead to nutrient deficiencies, and abstaining from caffeine can cause withdrawal symptoms.

In conclusion, while the holiday detox movement may seem like a trendy way to “purify” your body, it’s important to consider whether it’s really necessary and whether it’s actually beneficial for health. Instead of going on a detox, focus on making healthy choices throughout the year and treating yourself to the occasional treat without feeling guilty or unhealthy.

SCS Networks Group Lights Up the Holidays for Foster Children and Families

By Yolanda Huston

Southern California Edison’s (SCS) Networks group is making the holiday season a little brighter for children and families served by the Five Acres nonprofit agency with an early donation of numerous toys and games. Networks, an African American affinity organization comprised of SCE employees, is now in its sixth year of partnering with Five Acres to provide gifts that will be hand-delivered to kids currently in foster care.

"The children and families served by our organization are so grateful to receive gifts this season," said Patty Old, president of Five Acres.

"The generosity of our local business and community partners, like Networks, continues to make a great difference in the lives of those in need," said Kris Perry, First 5 California executive director.

First 5 California Contribution Extends Health Coverage To More Than 65,000 Children

Healthy Families, the state’s managed care program for children up to age 5, spent more than $48 million on health insurance for children through its Healthy Families program this year. With their unanimous vote Monday, the Assembly approved a 4% funding increase for the program during this period of high unemployment and economic instability.

"First 5’s action shows that anything is possible when all sides come together to make a problem - even in the worst of times - go away,” said Senate President Pro Temp Darrell Steinberg.

Assembly Speaker Karen Bass added, “I thank the First 5 commissioners, including my appointment to the panel, for hearing our appeals and stepping up to the plate with a responsible resolution for these children.”

President-Elect Obama to be Sworn in Using the Lincoln Bible

On January 20th, President-Elect Barack Obama will take the oath of office using the same Bible upon which President Lincoln was sworn in at his first inauguration. The Bible is currently part of the collections of the Library of Congress. Though there is no constitutional requirement for the use of the Bible during the swearing-in, Presidents have traditionally used Bibles for the ceremony, choosing a volume with personal or historical significance. President-elect Obama, like the first President sworn in using the Lincoln Bible since its initial use in 1861, will be taking the oath of office using the same Bible as the one used by President Lincoln.

President-Elect Obama will use a steel doublerimmed Bible with the Lincoln family's name engraved on the spine of the book. The family name is embossed in gold on a navy blue background with a gold ribbon marker. Obama has his own religious beliefs, and his book is open to the faithful passage that states, “The Lord will direct your path.”

Manipulated with fluidity by company dancers, Wonderboy is a puppet who in an outsider longs to belong to the world of real people and genuine possibilities. Composed of wood, plaster, and paint, the delicate Wonderboy is dealt a series of small awakenings which create the beginnings of his transformation into the world of real people and genuine possibilities. Manipulated with fluidity by company dancers, Wonderboy becomes a changed being whose glance is a mirror to the people who explore the psychological, physical, and emotional boundaries of the human experience. The unique blend of disciplines set to original music by eclectic composer/musicians Carla Khilhiih and Matthias Issai, builds on the acclaimed JGPG method of storytelling through text, song, and dance.

The Mayor and City Council thank the more than 10,000 adults, children, and families who attended this year’s Festival of Winter: A Cowboy Christmas at Miller Park in the Civic Center Campus.

Following the annual Christmas parade, thousands braved rain and wind for a chance to go ice skating, play in a Castle, ride a mechanical bull, complete an art project, or sled down the massive 50-foot snow slide at the Miller Amphitheater.

"Most of the families who attended said their favorite event was the snow because 'we don’t have snow in Fontana,'" said Victoria Zenados, community services coordinator.

A reported 5,856 people visited the Lewis Library and Technology Center, where warm air greeted those too cold to stay outside. While there, a record 1,100 children had their photos taken with Santa and approximately 1,000 attended the Steelworkers’ Auditorium where live dance and cheer performances entertained the crowds all day.

A fine testament of the day’s overwhelming success were the 126 people who stayed after the event to ice skate at the civic center.

Organizers are already planning for the next Festival of Winter in December 2009.

The public is invited to attend Fontana’s next special event on February 5 when one of the region’s most successful crowd pleasers, Cruise Night, returns to Sierra Avenue and Soto Street. The event is scheduled to run from 5 to 10 pm on Sierra Street and Soto Avenue.

Soto and the artist Josh Hunt will also feature during Family Art Day at the Art Depot, located at 16322 Spring Street from 6 to 9 pm. For more information regarding special events in Fontana or to become a vendor, please call (909) 826-3820.
