COLLEGE HAS MISSION, CHANCELLOR SAYS

Cal State, San Bernardino has a real mission in this area, said Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds Monday, as she described the college as "a beautiful rosebud that needs to open and unfold."

In her first official visit to the college, Dr. Reynolds met with faculty, community leaders, administrators and students. She said the college, which has an "unrealized potential" for growth, has never been considered for closure.

Many of the questions addressed to the chancellor involved student fees, funding and the financial situation. Dr. Reynolds urged students to make their plight known to legislators, as she expressed concern about the margin of students who may not be able to afford additional fees. "Let them (the legislators) know that there are students for whom the fee increase is prohibitive."

Dr. Reynolds said that she and her colleagues in higher education are determined that the state's temporary shortfall will not do permanent damage to the educational system. She will be working toward securing equitable fees, based upon cost, so that students might predict what their education will cost rather than be faced with sudden fee increases.

OPEN HOUSE CANCELLED; OTHER EVENTS PLANNED

Although the open house proposed for April 24 has been cancelled, the college continues making plans for the annual health fair, the final day of the Microtechnology for Everybody (ME) Festival and the Alumni Brunch on that day.

As in the past, the health fair will provide free and low-cost testing, as well as health information, in the Student Services Building. Susan Richards, a senior health science major, is site coordinator this year. The event, one of the series throughout southern California, will be sponsored by Chevron Oil, KNBC, Hospital Council of Southern California, American Red Cross and the CSCSB Associated Students.

Several special events are in the planning stages for the final day of the ME Festival, April 22-24, and exhibitors will continue to display the latest in microtechnology.

The Alumni Brunch will begin at 11:30 a.m. in the Upper Commons. All members of the college community are invited to join the alumni in honoring outstanding graduates of the college during this fourth annual event. Reservations must be made by April 15.

Serrano Village also will have special events planned for parents of students living in the residence halls.

ADVERTISING MEMORABILIA
DISPLAYED IN LIBRARY

Through the years, advertisers have concocted imaginative ways to endear their products to consumers. An exhibit in the Pfau Library through April 22 gives an historical picture of advertising with memorabilia dating from the late 1800s.

"I'm the Guy That Put the Saint in St. Louis" or "....Put the Pencil in Pennsylvania" may not bring on the urge to smoke, but buttons carrying such slogans were prizes in packages of Osak cigarettes. In the 1930s, Alka Seltzer tried to win the hearts of America by giving away song books with favorites like "Froggie Went a Courtin'" and "Give Me a Toot on the Tooter, Tommy." Farmers and Merchants National Bank of Los Angeles made its pitch in 1936 with Dionne quintuplet calendars.

Several items in the exhibit, which is coordinated by Johnnie Ralph (Library), are from the Inland Empire. Examples are a 1942 watercolor calendar from Palace Meat Market advertising free delivery, a weight scale from Snyder's Termite Control and a pamphlet on the Neckrometer neck stretcher, "The Greatest Home Health Device for the Entire Family Ever Given to the World Endorsed by Physicians Everywhere."
