FILM ON ANOREXIA SHOWN FREE WEDNESDAY

(Counseling Center) will lead a discussion. Materials will be available for people wishing further information.

A film on anorexia nervosa and bulimia will be shown free at 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m., Wednesday, in Rooms A and B of the Student Union. Following each showing of "I Don't Have to Hide," Dr. Martha Kazlo

The Counseling and Health Centers are sponsoring the film to provide information for the campus community and the public about anorexia. It is estimated that 30 percent of women in college and more than 500,000 women in the United States, most ranging from age 13 to 35, are anorexia victims.

Anorexia nervosa is a psychosomatic syndrome characterized by an obsessive preoccupation with food and an intense desire to be thin. Bulimia, a sub-category of anorexia, is known as the "binge-purge syndrome." Its victims alternate strict dieting with massive food binges, then induce vomiting or take laxatives to rid their bodies of food.

"I Don't Have to Hide" was produced by Anne Fischel, who experienced anorexia and now counsels other anorexic women. The filmmaker recalls her own experience, as does a friend of hers, who is bulimic.
