RANCHO CUCAMONGA

Members of one of Southern California's leading Black community groups and political parties were outraged over the staggering sentence of 46 years to life for Keith Stockdale, 35, a former African-American nurse, who was slapped with one of the costliest sentences ever handed down for a youth. Stockdale was convicted for allegedly raping three children.

"This may be another case of a mental and legal tragedy that epitomizes many young Black men," says Earl Olson Hutchins, director of the National Alliance for Positive Action. "This case certainly demonstrates the need for immediate action."

In the bible there is a story of a man standing before a judge for not being able to pay his bill. The judge did not show any mercy and did not put him in jail which the judge had every right to do based on the law. This man being grateful for what the judge had done went out of the courtroom and happened to see a man who owed him less money than he had just been shown mercy for by the judge. The released man demanded his money from the man who could not pay him at the time. The requester then proceeded to fight for his money and wouldn't you know it someone saw this and reported him to the judge. The judge wanted to know who didn't let the man show mercy to his debtor like he had been shown.

This story came to mind when I thought of the situation in San Bernardino County involving all of the corruption that has plagued the county for the past couple of years by top officials. Those in authority used everything within their power to convict Jeff Wright and others who would question their authority or speak out in public meetings. At that time Wright and others were not breaking a law but just being irritating, so the government created a law to limit the amount of time persons could talk became known as the three minute rule. Wright challenged the rule by continuing to talk beyond the time limit. That is how the Black American has recorded the history of the Black American.

In 1998 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 1999.

In 2010 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2010.

In 2014 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2014.

In 2017 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2017.

In 2019 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2019.

In 2021 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2021.

In 2022 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2022.

In 2023 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2023.

In 2024 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2024.

In 2025 the three minute rule was challenged by top officials and those in authority who said that if the rule wasn't enforced the county would go out of business. The three minute rule was upheld by the California Supreme Court in 2025.

Greetings friends, God’s goodness and praise will continue to be on my lips and in my fingertips as I continue to write and share miracles happening in your soul, heart and mind. So whether you are your job, relationship, a home, or a group... be encouraged because every time a door closed, a dream is opened, another dream is found. Sometimes you might get kicked out, you can get kicked up to a higher level of being and working on your goals. Procrastination is a passive action, doing nothing. You have to start taking action, pushing yourself, doing what it takes. Every day counts your blessings, your opportunities, your belief in yourself, your ability to make it happen. Believe everything you tell yourself, so stay self-motivated because it’s easier to stay up than to go up.

I would like to share with you my testimony and send a shout out! Much love and thanks to the brotherfriend from American Airlines that answered my email request seeking last minute action for my son to fly to New York. Thank you Denny and American Airlines for showing us what it means to be a beautiful American Airlines you get my utmost appreciation and endorsement.

Alison Terry

Alison Terry, 26, who captured a golf medal in the World University Games last year, has her sights set on Sydney, where she hopes to become the first African-American swimmer to compete in the Olympic Games.

"The idea of making history is exciting," said Terry, who is the coach of Clairemont High School's boys water polo team.

"I would love to be the first African-American swimmer to make the 2000 team," she said. "Tennis has the Williams sisters (Venus and Serena) and Arthur Ashe. Golf has Tiger Woods. Swimming needs an African-American medalist, too. I need to be that person."

Beach Volleyball Pair Looking for Trip to Sydney

First African-American pair in line for a berth in the Sydney Olympic Games.

By JON D. GAED

SEAL BEACH — When was the last time you drove to one of your gorgeous Southern California beaches? If you haven’t been lately, don’t be surprised to see a temporary stadium erected on the beach.

And beautiful men and women are engaged in volleyball, too.

Seal Beach was the site of the midway tour stop of the Women’s Professional Volleyball Tour. On display this year’s two top players, Jenny Johnson-Jordan (safety) and Annett Buckner-Davis, who just maybe going for the gold in Sydney.

Who are these women? They just happen to be the first two African-American women ever to make the gold medal team of the World Championships of their sport.

Davis and Johnson-Jordan are currently the top-ranked team on the Olympic Qualification Ranking list with 2,574 points. Lisa Masakane and Elaine Youngs are currently second (1,284) followed by Misty May and Holly McPeak (2,090) and Lisa Arce and Barbra Fontana (1,804).

These are two magnificent athletes who will soon compete on the world stage. To see them "tug the hot sand or wave the net" is something to behold. It takes a special ability to leap, dive or rise to their feet and hit the ball over the net with accuracy. They do this many times over within each point of play. To reach the final stage of play, they may have to play ten games.

Once in Sydney, the girls will qualify for the Sydney Games. To see them leap off the hot sand or soar in the Olympic Decathlon at 1960 Games, held in Rome.

Annett Buckner-Davis married former UCLA swimmer Byron Davis who is training for a spot on the Olympic swim team. Annett won the Pac-10 Player of the Year in 1994 and still holds the single season record of 439 kills.

Both Jenny and Annett attended UCLA. Jenny is married to former UCLA football standout receiver Kevin Jordan.

The Klumps Prove Box Office Gold with Opening Weekend

By Reana Haynes

The Klumps is a PG-13 comedy and has grossed over $42 million. Even though this movie is played by mostly one character, the talented Eddie Murphy, he is also joined by Janet Jackson who plays Denise. Shermie (Murphy) has ancient invention that can make history, but of course his old "friend" Buddy Love messes things up because he is still connected to Shermie by one single gene strand. While there's comedy, this movie also has romance. Having been offered a job in Main, Denise discusses it with Shermie and drops him that she will stay for a "special reason." So Shermie asks her to come back to him, and that's when chaos begins. But in order to find out how it turns out, you have to go see the movie yourself.

The Klumps have proven that not all sequels turn out to be flops. This reviewer enjoyed the movie, the story line was excellent and with the room filled top to bottom with laughter bouncing off the walls, it is no surprise the movie made over $42 million and is #1 at the box office.
