MCCARTHY SAYS EDUCATION NEEDS MORE PUBLIC UNDERSTANDING

Although promising to fight for funding for education, Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy repeatedly expressed concern here Tuesday about the lack of public support of higher education in California. "We are going into a very difficult period in the coming decades and we need to develop public understanding," he said during a brief visit with senior administrators, Faculty Senate and Associated Student officers and the PawPrint editor.

McCarthy, who is an attorney, also expressed interest in improving CBEST scores and teacher training programs, in methods of testing student achievement in college, in avenues through which the college can assist with the economic development of growing Inland Empire and in "useful linkages" between Cal State, San Bernardino and UC Riverside or the community colleges.

President Evans and other college officials told of cooperative projects underway with other campuses and of meetings being held with community colleges to develop programs which will increase the number of two-year graduates going into four-year institutions.

McCarthy said he is focusing his efforts, as lieutenant governor, on economic development and education, areas which are intertwined. He serves on the CSU Board of Trustees and the UC Board of Regents by virtue of his elected position.

ENROLLMENT TOPS MAGIC NUMBER

Although the official fall census date enrollment statistics have not yet been processed by the computer, preliminary figures as of Wednesday indicate Cal State, San Bernardino has achieved the final step needed to become a university.

The college must have an official enrollment of 5081 students on census date. The preliminary count as of late Wednesday was a record-setting 5435 students. Afternoon and evening drops will be subtracted by computer.

In order to attain university status, the college must meet four of five criteria established by the Board of Trustees. Cal State now has achieved the necessary four: enrollment, percent of faculty with terminal degrees, number of accredited programs and number of graduates.

The college will now submit the necessary papers to the Chancellor's Office, which will analyze the requirements achieved and forward a report to the CSU Board of Trustees and then to the California Post Secondary Commission. At this point, it is not possible to predict when all reviews will be completed and university status approved.

GRADUATE APPOINTED TO ADVISORY BOARD

Roberto Velasquez, superintendent of the Cucamonga School District, has been appointed to the College Advisory Board by President Anthony H. Evans. Velasquez earned his B.A. here in 1972 and was employed as a tutor in the Educational Opportunity Program on campus while completing his first teaching credential.

A native of Colton, Velasquez worked in his father's service station while attending San Bernardino Valley College and supported himself and his family as a musician during his time at Cal State. He pays tribute to his father, the late Thomas Velasquez, for giving him faith in his ability and the drive to complete his education despite considerable adversity.

Velasquez' son, Robert, and daughter, Kathy, are now students at Cal State. The youngest daughter, Cindy, is in the eighth grade. Velasquez and his wife, Mary Louise, live in Rialto.

The College Advisory Board is a group of business, civic and educational leaders who meet regularly with President Evans to review the needs of the college and the areas which it serves.
