KEEPING IT REAL

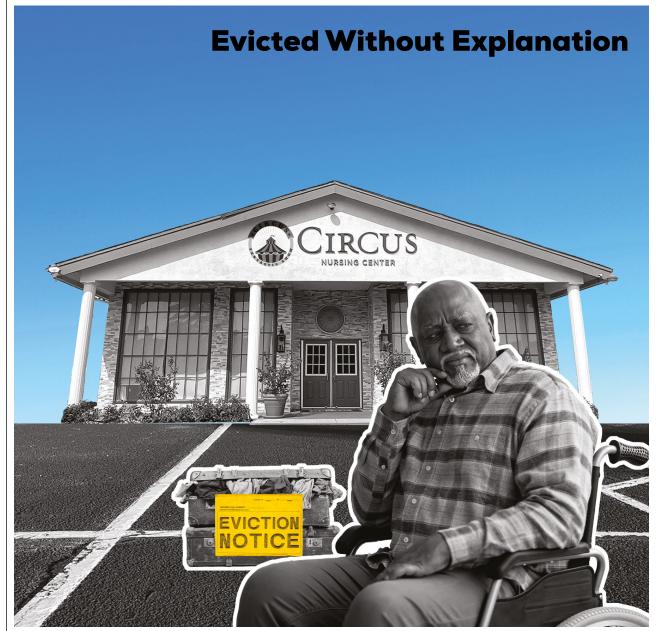

Illustration by Chris Allen, VOICE

Nursing home residents are often evicted when high-rate Medicare payments expire and lower-rate Medi-Cal payments begin. Disturbingly, the evictions can occur with little to no justification to the resident and/or his/her family.

As concerning as this issue is today, unless something is done to mitigate these circumstances, more and more seniors are destined to be impacted as the state's population continues to age.

Although only about 15% of California's total population is 65 years of age or older, it has the highest number of older residents – 5.15 million - in the nation.

In addition, the California Department of Aging (CDA) predicts that those in the population aged over 60 are destined to increase by about 166 percent during the period from 2010 to 2060.

CDA further suggests that more than half the state's 58 counties will see an increase of at least 100 percent in this age group and 24 counties will experience growth rates over 150 percent. Riverside and San Bernardino Counties, on the nsulin producer Eli Lilly and Company announced on Mar. 1 that the company will cap patient out-of-pocket costs at $35 or less per month in an effort to increase access and affordability.

Lilly will cut the costs of Humalog, the company's most commonly prescribed insulin, and another insulin called Humulin by 70% beginning in the fourth quarter which starts in October.

Approximately eight million Americans rely on insulin, but roughly one in five adults - 16.5% — with diabetes, either skipped, delayed or rationed insulin in order to save money in 2021, according to a study published in the Annals of Internal Medicine. The findings in the study were based on data collected in a 2021 National Health Interview Survey (NHIS) conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Insulin is produced by the pancreas and is used by the body to convert food into energy. People who have diabetes cannot produce enough insulin and rely on lab-made insulin.

"While the current healthcare system provides access to insulin for most people with diabetes, it still does not provide affordable insulin for everyone and that needs to change," said David A. Ricks, Lilly's Chair and CEO, in a statement.

A Kaiser Family Foundation report found that among insulin users enrolled in Medicare's prescription drug benefit (Medicare Part D), who do not receive low-income subsidies, spent on average $572 per person for insulin in 2020. The cost of insulin increased by 76% between 2007 and 2020, from $324 to $572, the report noted.

Insulin users often go through several vials of insulin per month. One vial of Humalog is listed with a cost of $275, which Lilly plans to reduce to $66. Lilly also announced that it will reduce the cost of its non-branded insulin, Insulin Lispro Injection, to $25 a vial beginning May 1, 2023. This will make the generic insulin the lowest "list-priced mealtime insulin available."

"For far too long, American families have been crushed by drug costs many times higher than what people in other countries are charged for the same prescriptions. Insulin costs less than $10 to make, but Americans are sometimes forced to pay over $300 for it. It's flat wrong," President Joe Biden said in a statement. "It's a from exicanos — Mexicans with African roots — make up just two percent of Mexico's total population. For hundreds of years, Afromexicans have fought for recognition and in 2020, for the first time, the country's 2020 census counted its Afromexican population of 2.5 million, officially recognizing the underrepresented communities exist across the regions of Oaxaca, Guerrero, Veracruz and Coahuila.

In 2019, the Mexican government issued a decree which recognized Afromexican communities as part of the "pluricultural composition of the nation and thus guaranteed self-determination, their autonomy, development and inclusion."

As Black History Month comes to a close, the Anthropology Museum at the California State University, San Bernardino (CSUSB) celebrated AfroOaxacan culture through art, dance, music and food. The free, two-day event celebrated the richness of Afromexican identity and encouraged attendees to learn more about the history of Afrodescendants in Mexico.

"I hope that more people are aware that there are Black people in Mexico and Black people across Latin America. Unfortunately, it's just something that's not taught. It's not anybody's fault that they don't know that, it's just not a common part about how we think about Latin America," explained Arianna Huhn, associate professor of anthropology at CSUSB and director of the CSUSB Anthropology Museum. "I hope by coming here that people realize there are Black people and that there are rich cultures and histories associated with those populations as well."

Using artifacts (traditional drums). photography (photo exhibit by Mexican photographer Nicolás Triedo), traditional Oaxacan music and food, the event transported participants to the Black communities in Mexico. Displays featuring cultural instruments and masks told stories of the ritual dances of Afromexican culture from the Costa Chica region of Guerrero, such as the Dance of the Devils, the Dance of the Cattle Herders and the Danza de la Tortuga (Dance of the Turtle). According to the exhibit, the dances are symbolic depictions of societal identities and each dance dramatizes different issues. The Danza de los Diablos (Dance of the Devils) and the Danza de Vagueros (Dance of the Cattle Herders) demonstrate problems related to mistreatment and dangers for agricultural laborers. The Danza de la Tortuga represents problems related to pleasure and love.

During the two-day festivities, attendees were encouraged to join Esteban Zúñiga, a Los Angeles-based artist, in crafting large turtle and bull structures using bamboo sticks and twine, which were later used to perform the ritualistic dance at the Garcia Center while Los Guajes Oaxacan Ensemble played traditional Oaxacan songs on stage. group of California assembly members is championing a constitutional amendment that would restore voting rights and end the disenfranchisement of system impacted individuals still in custody across the state.

"Many people who are incarcerated have never participated in democracy before because they didn't feel represented or included in our civic institutions before, and so that disconnection between not voting and ending up incarcerated can be turned to the inverse,' Assembly Member Isaac Bryan, the bill's author, said. "If we allow folks who are incarcerated to vote, it'll build a healthier, more engaged society, and it will decrease the likelihood of people going back to incarceration."

Executive Director of Initiate Justice, Antoinette Ratcliffe is another person who has been working hard to get this piece of legislation

Initiate Justice and the Free the Vote Coalition co-sponsored ACA 6, which became the proposition to restore voting rights to people on parole.

"Upon passing Proposition 17, we also acknowledged that continuing to restrict access to our democracy to even those who are currently incarcerated was unfair and disproportionately impacted our Black, Brown, and poor communities," Ratcliffe said.

Ending disenfranchisement

California is looking to become the third state in the nation to allow those incarcerated to vote. Maine and Massachusetts are the only states that practice this.

Canada, Zimbabwe, Israel, and Norway are some of the countries that have ended the practice of disenfranchisement of incarcerated individuals around the world.

If this amendment is passed, this issue will go on the ballot, and ultimately, the people of California will make the final decision.

"In general, most of my colleagues, and most of the people in California believe that democracy should include everybody and that every citizen of our country and citizen of the state of California should have a voice in that democracy," Bryan said. "Ultimately, that's what will prevail."

When the bill becomes law

If this new legislation becomes law, there will be two options for those incarcerated to place their ballot.

Some of them could place their ballot in person, and others could turn in their votes through the mail.

In 2020, the Century Regional Detention Facility (CRDF) in Los Angeles opened a polling station and allowed those eligible to vote in person.

Those considered eligible to vote in prison must be awaiting trial or be on trial, in prison for a misdemeanor conviction, in prison on a probation violation, on felony probation, or serving a county jail sentence under Assembly Bill 109, the California Public Safety Realignment Act, according to the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

According to a press release by the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, there were 2,200 continued on page 14

In addition to the photography exhibits and live music, the celebration displayed artwork from Afromexican children who participated in a contest that asked them to draw or paint images that represent their experiences, identity and culture. The annual contest is organized by the la asociación México Negro, a non-profit civil society organization with the mission of organizing the Afrodescendant communities of Mexico, alongside Raíz De la Ceiba. The drawings depicted the daily life of children who "know and love who they are" and demonstrated that art is a way to "maintain identity" and exemplify unity like the many colors of a Black rainbow — "arcoíris negra."

The CSUSB Anthropology Museum used the children's drawing to create free pins for attendees to take and wear to "raise awareness about and encourage pride in the Afrodescedants of Mexico." There was also a section at the Garcia Center where guests were invited to create their own art or write their own messages to encourage the youth of Costa Chica. Letters were collected and will be sent to Raíz De la Ceiba.

Garcia Center for the Arts Executive Director Jorge Heredia explained that with the large Latino population in San Bernardino, it's nice to highlight the African heritage in the Latino community, especially during Black History Month, where the community can have conversations about the diversity that exist among the community.

"That's kind of the conversations we have with people in our area. Our area is so diverse and being able to highlight those connections and that diversity, and really break beyond these monolithic definitions of people, like a Latino person is this or a Black person is that

For lunch, Cenaduria Oaxaqueña Donaji served tlayudas, handmade corn tortilla spread with acientio, ground black bean, cabbage and authentic Oaxacan cheese; memelitas, corn masa tortillas with ground black bean and authentic Oaxacan cheese; and molotes, corn masa stuffed with potatoes and chorizo.

"Pushing back on the dangerous anti-Black erasure of our history is imperative. We hope that through the Protect Black History Initiative, we help fill the gaps where needed," said NBCIT founder Jessica Ann Mitchell Aiwuyor. (source: nbcit.org).

The National Black Cultural Information Trust, Inc. (NBCIT) recently launched its Protect Black History Initiative (PBHI), which aims to distribute Black history resources and materials in communities facing hostility towards the teaching of Black history in local schools.

NBCIT is a Pan-African endeavor with a mission to provide information, resources, and tools that uplift the collective freedom of Black communities while correcting misinformation. It is a crucial step towards ensuring that Black history remains an essential part of the education system and that future generations have access to accurate information about their heritage. The Trust has already partnered with two Florida-based Black-owned bookstores, DARE Books and Kizzy's Books & More, and plans to partner with more Black-owned bookstores and other organizations to distribute materials.

The PBHI will include free online Black history seminars, panel discussions, and children's storytimes. The goal of The Initiative is to continue the legacy of Dr. Carter G. Woodson and other great ancestors who worked to make Black history resources and materials accessible in communities across the country.

According to Dr. Woodson, "Those who have no record of what their forebears have accomplished lose the inspiration which comes from the teaching of biography and history." NBCIT hopes to protect Black history for future generations, so they can continue to be inspired by the achievements of their predecessors to reach new heights.

The Trust encourages other organizations, businesses, and individuals to partner or donate to expand the program's reach. For more information on how to become involved, interested parties can email outreach@nbcit. org. To enroll or contribute to the Initiative, they can visit ProtectBlackHistory.org.

San Bernardino Sheriff's Department Exposes Confi

California Supreme Court declined to hear the Petition related to San Bernardino County's permanently sealing warrants involving the use of a cellsite simulator, etc. where confidential informants were the source for information leading to issuance of a warrant. (source: Ken Lund/flickr.com).

by Gail Fry

n litigation between the Electronic Frontier Foundation (EFF) and the San Bernardino Superior Court, the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department and District Attorney's Office that rose to the California Supreme Court, the County claimed a need to protect confidential informants, yet an unsealed search warrant exposes a confidential informant's identity and reveals a domestic violence victim.

The unsealed search warrant was one of nine released by the San Bernardino County District Attorney (SBCDA) to the Electronic Frontier Foundation (EFF) then provided to the IE Voice and Black Voice News.

Before the 4th District Court of Appeal (Appellate Court), the San Bernardino Superior Court (SBSC) at the behest of the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department (SBCSD) and District Attorney (the County) claimed the search warrants and related documents (search warrants) should remain sealed indefinitely, because of sensitive information about confidential informants and the need to protect them as well as "official information."

Official information is "acquired in confidence by a public employee in the course of his or her duty and not open, or officially disclosed, to the public."

The search warrants sought by EFF involve law enforcement's use of cell-site simulators known as "Stingray" devices, which mimic cell towers, capture data from cell phones of criminal targets, and from all cell phones in range. Additional information can be found at: https://www.eff.org/document/cell-site-simulators.

In 2017, the SBCSD had the most search warrant applications seeking digital property per resident in the state as well as the SBCSD's request for and SBSC's granting and indefinite sealing of those warrants caught EFF's attention.

EFF argued that Stingray Devices are highly invasive surveillance tools used with little oversight or transparency by the police while capturing details of both criminal suspects and innocent people. In their lawsuit, EFF claimed that the public has the right to access these search warrants, claiming sensitive information can be redacted.

Privacy concerns

EFF explained that these search warrants raise privacy concerns and that the public has the right to know how these devices are used and whether their cell phone data was swept up in a surveillance.

During the litigation, the County unsealed and released nine search warrants to EFF, all authorizing the use of Stingrays. However, it withheld 80 out of 120 pages of search warrant material arguing that they should remain indefinitely sealed.

Search Confidential Warrant Exposes Informant

In reviewing the released search warrants, the IE Voice and Black Voice News discovered that in one case, Sheriff Deputy Rudy Delgado requested a warrant be sealed but did not check the boxes "official information" and/or "informant protection," the grounds required for sealing. SBSC Judge Gregory Tavill denied the sealing request.

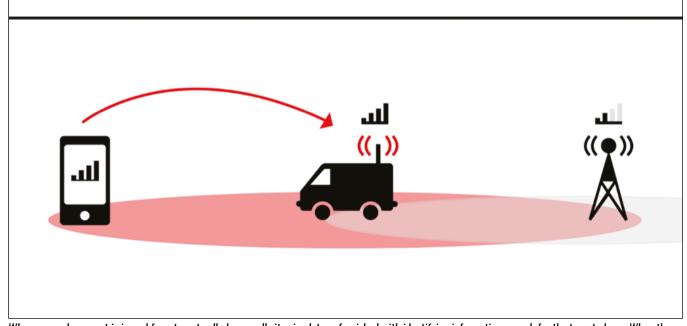

On page 7 of the search warrant, under SEALING ORDER/SERVICE OF WARRANT, the words "Add addition information to HOBBS the PROBABLE CAUSE" were written.

Hobbs refers to a 1994 California Supreme Court decision where a defendant sought the identity of a confidential informant to unseal and quash a search warrant and suppress evidence. The defendant's motion was denied by the Yuba County Superior Court.

When the case was appealed, the Appellate Court ruled that the defendant had due process rights to reasonable access of information to challenge a search warrant's validity. The California Supreme Court ruled that Yuba County Superior Court's examination of the warrant and its basis was sufficient.

When a search warrant is issued for a target cell phone, cell site simulators, furnished with identifying information, search for the target phone. (source: eff.org).

In the Delgado related search warrant, The IE Voice/Black Voice News is releasing, criminal Ameno Bun was arrested for stabbing his girlfriend several times in the back, and on an outstanding felony warrant.

Although the unsealed search warrant was redacted, on page 6 of 9, no redactions occurred, and there are at least five words that expose the victim's name as well as the identity of the confidential informant.

The IE Voice and Black Voice News is fully releasing this search warrant to the public here but is redacting 15 words to protect the confidential informant, and the girlfriend's identity.

EFF Attorney Mackey explained that even if the informant and victim's names could be redacted, other portions of the affidavit show the public can learn information about law enforcement's investigation and warrant request using redactions, instead of sealing the entire document.

"We believe the warrant you identified is an example of how that is possible," Mackey said. "I agree it raises questions about why the majority of the affidavits had to be sealed in full when this affidavit was fully public."

The test was on whether the Superior Court's legal test was valid before sealing the warrants indefinitely, Mackey said, explaining that the Appeals Court found the legal test sufficient.

Additionally, the IE Voice and Black Voice News is releasing the cell phone numbers in these warrants to inform the public and ask whether the targets were ever notified as legally required.

The cell phone numbers were: (760) 541-6617, (909) 534-1881, (909) 499-7934, (909) 645-4771, (909) 709-9719, (909) 787-9285, (626) 755-8234, (909) 486-1227, (657) 227-6016, (701) 260-9947.

The SBCSD asks the court for a 90-day delay in notifying the targets explaining otherwise, it would endanger the life or physical safety of an individual; lead to flight from prosecution; destruction or tampering with evidence; intimidation of potential witnesses, or seriously jeopardize an investigation or delay a trial or lead to an adverse result.

Notification of the criminal target is required at the execution of a warrant, unless ordered by the court.

When asked for comment, SBCSD PIO Public Affairs Division Mara Rodriguez said "Sheriff Dicus/the Sheriff's Department has commented

I can share with you that our policy information on Cell-Site Simulators is available on our public website. Also, the warrants which were withheld in this case were ordered sealed and related to an active case...

"I can share with you that our policy information on Cell-Site Simulators is available on our public website. Also, the warrants which were withheld in this case were ordered sealed and related to an active case," Rodriguez said. "The Sheriff's Department provided EEF an example of an unsealed warrant, which authorized the use of the cell [site] simulator."

"In regards to the warrant in question SW18 0850, our Office did not object to the release of the search warrant, as there was never a sealing order for the warrant or its material from the Court," San Bernardino County District Attorney's Office public affairs officer Jacqueline Rodriguez told BVN/ IE Voice.

Electronic Frontier Foundation's Lawsuit

EFF's lawsuit against San Bernardino County, its sheriff, and its district attorney seeking to unseal search warrants authorizing the use of the Stingray began on October 23, 2018. After obtaining some warrants, EFF dismissed the case and filed a new complaint on October 8, 2019 against the SBSC, the County of San Bernardino, and its district attorney.

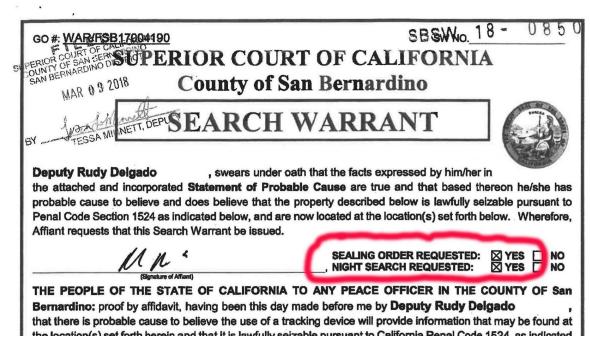

On January 15, 2021, SBSC Judge Dwight Moore denied EFF's petition, explaining these specific warrants relate to a multi-defendant gang murder case and two others, unsealing would complicate state interests, sources and methods, and pose dangers to confidential informants.

In March of 2021, EFF appealed to the 4th District Court of Appeal. EFF explained "When courts authorize law enforcement's use of surveillance technologies to sweep up innocent people's private data, the public's rights of access to judicial records is critical." IE Voice and Black Voice News Executive Editor S.E. Williams and Contributor Gail Fry submitted Friend of the Court Briefs in support of EFF's appeal.

The County argued the search warrants, described as so-called "Hobbs affidavits," should remain sealed indefinitely, due to sensitive information about confidential informants and "official information."

After oral arguments, the Appellate Court ruled in favor of the County, finding an exception to the public's right to access court documents, and ruling that when a search warrant affidavit contains a confidential informant, the affidavit may be sealed to protect their identity.

The court reasoned that the affidavits provide information about and facts learned from confidential informants, and the County's investigations and investigatory techniques, finding a "line-by-line redaction" of the affidavits is "not practicable."

Red underlining added by Black Voice News and IE Voice to highlight key points in the document. (Document Source: Superior Court of San Bernardino).

It explained that while granting EFF access to the Hobbs affidavits had some public benefits, such as enabling greater public oversight of county law enforcement, they were outweighed by the harm to the criminal investigatory process.

The California Supreme Court

After the Appellate Court agreed with the San Bernardino Superior Court's decision, EFF filed a Petition for Review at the California Supreme Court, asking it to resolve conflicting Appellate Court opinions and/or de-publish the Appellate Court's opinion.

EFF reasoned that the Supreme Court should review the lower court's decision as it conflicted with the public's basic rights of access to warrants, affidavits, and returns under Penal Code Section 1534(a), California Rules of Court 2.550-2.551 regarding the sealing of records, the common law, and the California Constitution, which require courts to favor transparency.

On January 11, 2023, the California Supreme Court denied EFF's petition.

"EFF disappointed that the California Supreme Court declined to hear the case, as it will make it harder for the public to understand when and how law enforcement use invasive surveillance technology," Mackey said. "This ends our case and lets the appellate court's decision stand, so unfortunately, there is no next step, as the case is over."

This covert surveillance technology is known to be used by law enforcement agencies in the states of Alaska, Washington, California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

I think it was definitely a very enriching event for people to experience," Heredia shared. The snowy weather did not stop attendees from enjoying the freshly prepared food and warm drinks as people sat at tables outside. Many people joined the event to learn more about Afromexican culture while others attended as a way to share a sense of community with Afrodescendants in Mexico, like Jeff, who attended the event with his wife who is Mexican and his daughter. Jeff is Panamanian and grew up in Rainbow City, in the Colón region in Panama as his dad served in the U.S. Air Force. Like Afromexicans, AfroPanamanians account for a small percentage of the population, who are African descendants of slaves brought to the region or descendants from West Indian/ Caribbean immigrants who came to Panama to work on the Panama Canal.

The AfroOaxcan celebration was presented in association with Afróntalo, an exhibition exploring Afrolatine cultures, histories and identities, with an emphasis on Afrodescendants in Mexico and Afrolatine Californians. The exhibit opens at the CSUSB Anthropology Museum on Sept. 15, 2023.

The event was supported by the Institute of Museum and Library Services, with support from California Humanities, a non-profit partner of the National Endowment for the Humanities. Additional sponsors include the Garcia Center for the Arts, the CSUSB Anthropology Museum, CSUSB's Office of the Provost, CSUSB College of Extended and Global Education and the Black History Month Program Committee at CSUSB.

women registered to vote, and 35 inmates voted in person.

In 2021, California ended "Prison Gerrymandering." It now allows prisoners to cast their vote for the district of their latest home addresses. In previous years, their votes were counted for the districts where they were incarcerated.

This would prevent prison gerrymandering and allow prisoners to vote in the community where they live and not where they are being held.

"We already know that our criminal justice system in its current form, the form that again relies on punishment and isolation, isn't working. Then how do we reimagine our communities to behold and save by focusing more on restorative, transformative justice and our approaches to harm," Ratcliffe questioned?

Rahsaan "New York" Thomas is a formerly incarcerated individual who served 22 years in prison and is co-founder of the Empowerment Avenue Writer's Cohort and the co-producer of the Pulitzer Prize-nominated podcast "Ear Hustle."

The Cohort pairs incarcerated individuals with volunteer journalists and editors to help get their articles published.

Thomas said he published close to 50 articles while in prison. He said about 30 incarcerated individuals are part of the cohort, and they have published around 200 pieces.

Thomas started writing in prison, and it wasn't until he was transferred to San Quentin prison that they allowed him to grow and hone his writing skills.

He was transferred to San Quentin prison after being held in maximum security prisons for 13 years. At San Quentin, he was introduced to a new world of opportunities. He enrolled in a creative writing class, worked with the prison newspaper, and earned an associate's degree.

Thomas expressed that having the ability to vote will help incarcerated and formerly incarcerated to better transition into society.

"The laws affect everybody. So everybody should have a voice," Thomas said. "It's crazy to see people in jail because some law was voted in, and they had no voice, no input, and yet they suffer from it."

He believes that when you feel like your voice matters and your life matters, you act prosocial; and when you feel like your voice doesn't matter, you maneuver in an antisocial manner.

KEEPING IT REAL

California has the highest number of elderly residents in the nation. (Source: California Department of Aging).

other hand, are expected to experience explosive growth among those aged over 60, with San Bernardino County expecting a 202.36% growth rate, while Riverside County may see an extraordinary 248.22% increase.

With the senior population in the Inland Empire exploding exponentially, the potential for more seniors to fall victim to unwarranted evictions from nursing homes seems imminent. In February, the Nursing Home Eviction Notice Protection Act was introduced. The bill would prevent unjustified evictions and give residents the information they need in order to fight unwarranted notices of eviction.

The bill would require nursing homes to provide more information about each eviction and transfer of a resident. Currently, many nursing home residents who have faced evictions and sought to appeal them were unable to do so because the notices of eviction provided by the facility gave little information about why the senior was being booted out and if a resident does not understand why he/she is being evicted, it is difficult to prepare an adequate defense to stop the eviction.

AB 1309 will reduce bogus evictions by forcing nursing homes to explain the reasoning behind their actions.

It is important for seniors and those who assist them to know their rights. To that end, the California Advocates for Nursing Home Reform has created an excellent, one page resource clarifying the responsibilities nursing homes have to its patients under the law and in this case, knowledge is power.

Because seniors are only 15% of the state's population it is important that everyone raise their voice on this and other issues impacting the lives of seniors. To contact the Assembly in support of this Assembly Bill call the State Assembly at (916) 653-6814, and express your support.

Of course, this is just my opinion. I'm keeping it real.
