President Evans Sees Unparalleled Opportunities

marked the beginning of Cal State's 20th year of operation.

The coming year will be even better than the last, which already was a banner year, President Anthony H. Evans said Tuesday morning in his annual "state of the university" address which

The nature of the Inland Empire affords the institution "unparalleled opportunities" to add student enrollment, to serve minority students, to prepare more teachers and to respond to the special needs of today's students, he said.

The region now has one of the lowest rates of high school graduation. The percentages of students going on to college--whether a community college, the CSU or the UC system--is lower than the state average. "We will have to reach out again and again to reach these students," he said. A fourth of the area population is minority. However, national statistics show one out of eight blacks and one of 14 Hispanics earn a college degree, compared to one of four Anglos. "Our indigenous population affords spectacular opportunities for service, growth and development," he added.

A "pivotal achievement" of the past year was the rare 10-year accreditation granted to the university by the Western Assn. of Schools and Universities. "Our self-study was judged to be a model for the region," the president said. "We are pleased that the WASC team found the institution to be in compliance with all eight standards in the accreditation process." The WASC report cited affirmative action as an area for additional progress to be made, the president said. The Affirmative Action Steering Committee, appointed this summer, has developed some thoughtful recommendations which will be shared, he added.

The institution's elevation to university status in July was described by the president as the "high water mark" of the year, followed in importance by the approval of funds for planning the new faculty office building. Saying the university has acute space problems, Dr. Evans requested faculty and staff patience until the building is completed in 2½-3 years. "We do need another building--and there will be others," he said.

The president commended the Office of Extended Education (formerly called Continuing Education) for its 45 percent growth in the past year. "We're solvent again," he added. Other areas of strength cited by the president included the soundness of programs in the School of Education, which underwent a rigorous review in the past year; the automation and professionalizing of the admissions program; adding of new programs, concentrations and certificates to increase the breadth of the academic program; growth of off-campus offerings in the High Desert and the Coachella Valley; quickening of activities in student affairs; introduction of intercollegiate athletics, which will serve the students well; notable efforts in planning and use of resources; healthy progress in grant applications, with $630,000 received in 16 grants; and more sophisticated budgeting systems.

Dr. Evans described the goals of the university as educating students for life and preserving and expanding the quality of the institution. "We have a stable environment, adequate finances, a steller faculty and staff and the right mentality. We recognize the quality of the institution cannot rise higher than the quality of the faculty. Our most distinctive feature is the quality of our faculty and staff."

Dr. Buchen Takes Wisconsin Post

Dr. Irving Buchen, dean of the School of Humanities for five years, has been named vice chancellor of academic affairs at the University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point. He will remain here until Nov. 30.

A national search will be launched for a permanent replacement for Dr. Buchen. Dr. Ward McAfee, acting vice president for academic affairs, now is seeking nominations from the humanities faculty for an acting dean.

"His charm and energy will be sorely missed by those of us in the administration who worked with Dr. Buchen. We wish him well in his new position. I'm sure he will leave his distinct mark at Stevens Point as he has done here," Dr. McAfee said.

Dr. Buchen, who taught at Fairleigh Dickenson University for 19 years before coming to Cal State, has a background in teaching, research and administration. Additionally, he has taught at Pennsylvania State University and Johns Hopkins University and has been a director of English at Maryland Institute.

He received his B.A. in English and history and his M.A. degree in English from New York University. He earned his Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University.

Computer Center Holds Open House

An open house for faculty and staff to preview the new micro-computer lab in PL 8 will be held from 9 to 11 a.m., Wednesday, Sept. 19. The 24-station IBM Personal Computer lab will be used mainly to support programs in the School of Business and Public Administration, particularly the new information management concentration.

Training opportunities for faculty and staff will be discussed. A continental breakfast will be served outside PL 8 during the open house, courtesy of the Computer Center and the School of Business and Public Administration.

Volunteers Needed For Academic Decathlon

Faculty, staff and students are being sought as volunteers for the San Bernardino County Academic Decathlon to be on campus Saturday, Nov. 17. The event is sponsored by the San Bernardino County Schools Office, and the winning high school team will compete in state competition this December.

Volunteer test proctors, aides, runners, interview and speech judges will be needed during the all day event. Persons may register to participate with Glenda Jackson in Relations with Schools at Ext. 7608 by Monday, Sept. 24.

More than 180 high school juniors and seniors, in six-member teams, will be testing their academic skills in economics, English and literature, fine arts, mathematics, communications, and physical, biological and social sciences. Twenty schools are expected to be represented.

Library Patrons Must Have Zebra Bar Codes Beginning with the first day of classes next Thursday, all administrators, faculty, staff and students must have their optical scan bar-coded labels, referred to as zebra labels, in order to check out library books.

The zebra label, affixed to the photo identification card, identifies each borrower to the system and is read by an optical scanning device (light pen) similar to those used in some supermarkets. Each book has a zebra label which identifies it to the new automated circulation system.

The system, part of the CSU Trustees' Library Development Program, was procured and financed by the CSU and is in operation now at all 19 campuses.

Prospective library patrons with questions should contact the Circulation Desk, Ext. 7334, said John Tibbals, head of patron services.

Pool To Be Open This Weekend The swimming pool will be open for recreational swimming from 1-5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 15-16. Entrance to the pool is through the south gate; the building will not be open. A life guard will be on duty.

Dr. Leonard Little Is Exchange Faculty Dr. Leonard Little, senior lecturer in the Department of Management at Queensland Institute of Technology, has exchanged places with Dr. K. Michael Clarke (Administration) this fall.

Dr. Little, who has been with the Institute in Brisbane, Australia for 15 years, is a specialist in personnel and organizational behavior.

He has traded homes, vehicles and even faculty offices with Dr. Clarke, who is at the Brisbane campus for its fall semester. The two will return to their own homes during the Christmas holiday.

Dr. Little, a past national president of the Australian Institute of Personnel Management, hopes to make contact with the business community here and also to examine the operation of Cal State. He has been a consultant for many Australian business firms including the Australian Post (mail service) and Currigh Queensland Mining Ltd., a subsidiary of the Atlantic Richfield Co.

The CSU provided travel funds for Dr. Clarke. Both men will receive their regular salaries through their home campuses.

Best Wishes

The university extends congratulations to Joanna M. Franz (Accounting) and Paul R. Evangelista on their marriage Sept. 8 in St. Adelaide's Catholic Church in San Bernardino. They are making their home in Highland.
