San Bernardino Sheriff Permanently Slams Door on Coroner Transparency

When the baton was passed from former San Bernardino County Sheriff John McMahon to his hand-picked successor Shannon Dicus the ink was hardly dry from his official swearing in ceremony when the Captain of the Coroner Division issued a press release labeled, “Temporary Operating Procedure” announcing that although Coroner Division policy designates the division has the responsibility for approving and posting its press releases, it “recognizes that some deference is proper when other divisions are involved in certain incidents.”

Was this a sudden revelation? That is difficult to believe, especially with this change coming just two days after the new sheriff was sworn in.

Whatever the motivation for the implementation of the “Temporary Operating Procedure,” the coroner’s office determined it will refrain—a roundabout way of saying, “it will not” issue press releases involving suspected homicides and child abuse cases under investigation by other divisions—like sheriffs for example—and that all questions about these cases would be referred to the investigating agency.”

County coroner/medical examiner’s offices are under the jurisdiction of sheriff’s departments by what has been described as “a default” in state law, although the same law also allows county boards of supervisors to separate the two entities. For example, the counties of Los Angeles, San Diego and San Francisco all have coroners that operate independent from their sheriff’s departments. In Riverside and San Bernardino Counties however, the coroner’s office is part of the sheriff’s department.

The coroner’s office refusal to issue press releases involving suspected homicides and child abuse cases under investigation is of particular concern since the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department operating under a consent decree for the unnecessary and excessive uses of force against inmates and before he became sheriff, Dicus himself talked about the increase in inmate deaths in November 2021.

Regarding child abuse, in 2019 the County of San Bernardino was ordered to pay to settle a child abuse case and in 2021 the IE Voice reported how for years, San Bernardino Children and Family Services purportedly placed as many as 59 kids in the home of a known sexual abuser. These two scenarios alone scream for more. . . not less transparency.

Since the policy was positioned as “Temporary” in the July 2021 press release, I followed up to check the status of the change in late March. That is when I learned from San Bernardino County Sheriff Department

Public Information Officer Mara Rodriguez, that there was a decision to make the change permanent soon after the July 16 press release was issued, however, “No additional changes have been made to the press release procedure since 07/16/21.” Another prime example of the department’s lack of transparency and another reason for the public to demand change.

When asked who had the authority to approve the change Rodriguez advised that, “San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department Policy Sections 2.150.25 (Division Orders) and 2.150.30 (Division Policies) gives the authority to the commanders of stations and divisions.” Reading between the lines we know this really means the county sheriff since they all work for him.

AB 1608 offers a solution

Issues related to government transparency are nearly as old as time as are concerns over potential conflicts of interest between sheriffs and coroners, especially when coroners are charged with investigating the manner and cause of death in unusual circumstances, manner, and cause of all violent, sudden, or unusual deaths.

In January a bill was introduced in the state Assembly to separate coroner offices from sheriff’s departments. The legislation, if successful, would ensure that death investigations are conducted objectively and reduce the perception (or reality) that the investigative process could be influenced by other law enforcement.

Because sheriffs in California are elected, they have a base of support, including powerful unions that often protect them from the kind of oversight that police chiefs, who are appointed by city officials, are subjected to.

Though Sheriff Dicus was hand selected for his position, this does not mean the voters have to

Black Photographer Lelanie Foster Captures Official Portrait of Ketanji Brown Jackson

Breanna Reeves | Staff

The White House released the official portrait of Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson following her historic confirmation to the Supreme Court.

On Friday Jackson was photographed by Bronx native, Lelanie Foster, a young Black photographer known for honoring the beauty of Black and Brown people in her photography.

Following the bipartisan confirmation of Jackson, President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris joined Jackson and gave remarks and congratulations on her appointment.

“It has taken 232 years and 115 prior appointments for a Black woman to be selected to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States,” said Jackson during her speech at the White House. “But we’ve made it. We’ve made it, all of us. All of us.”

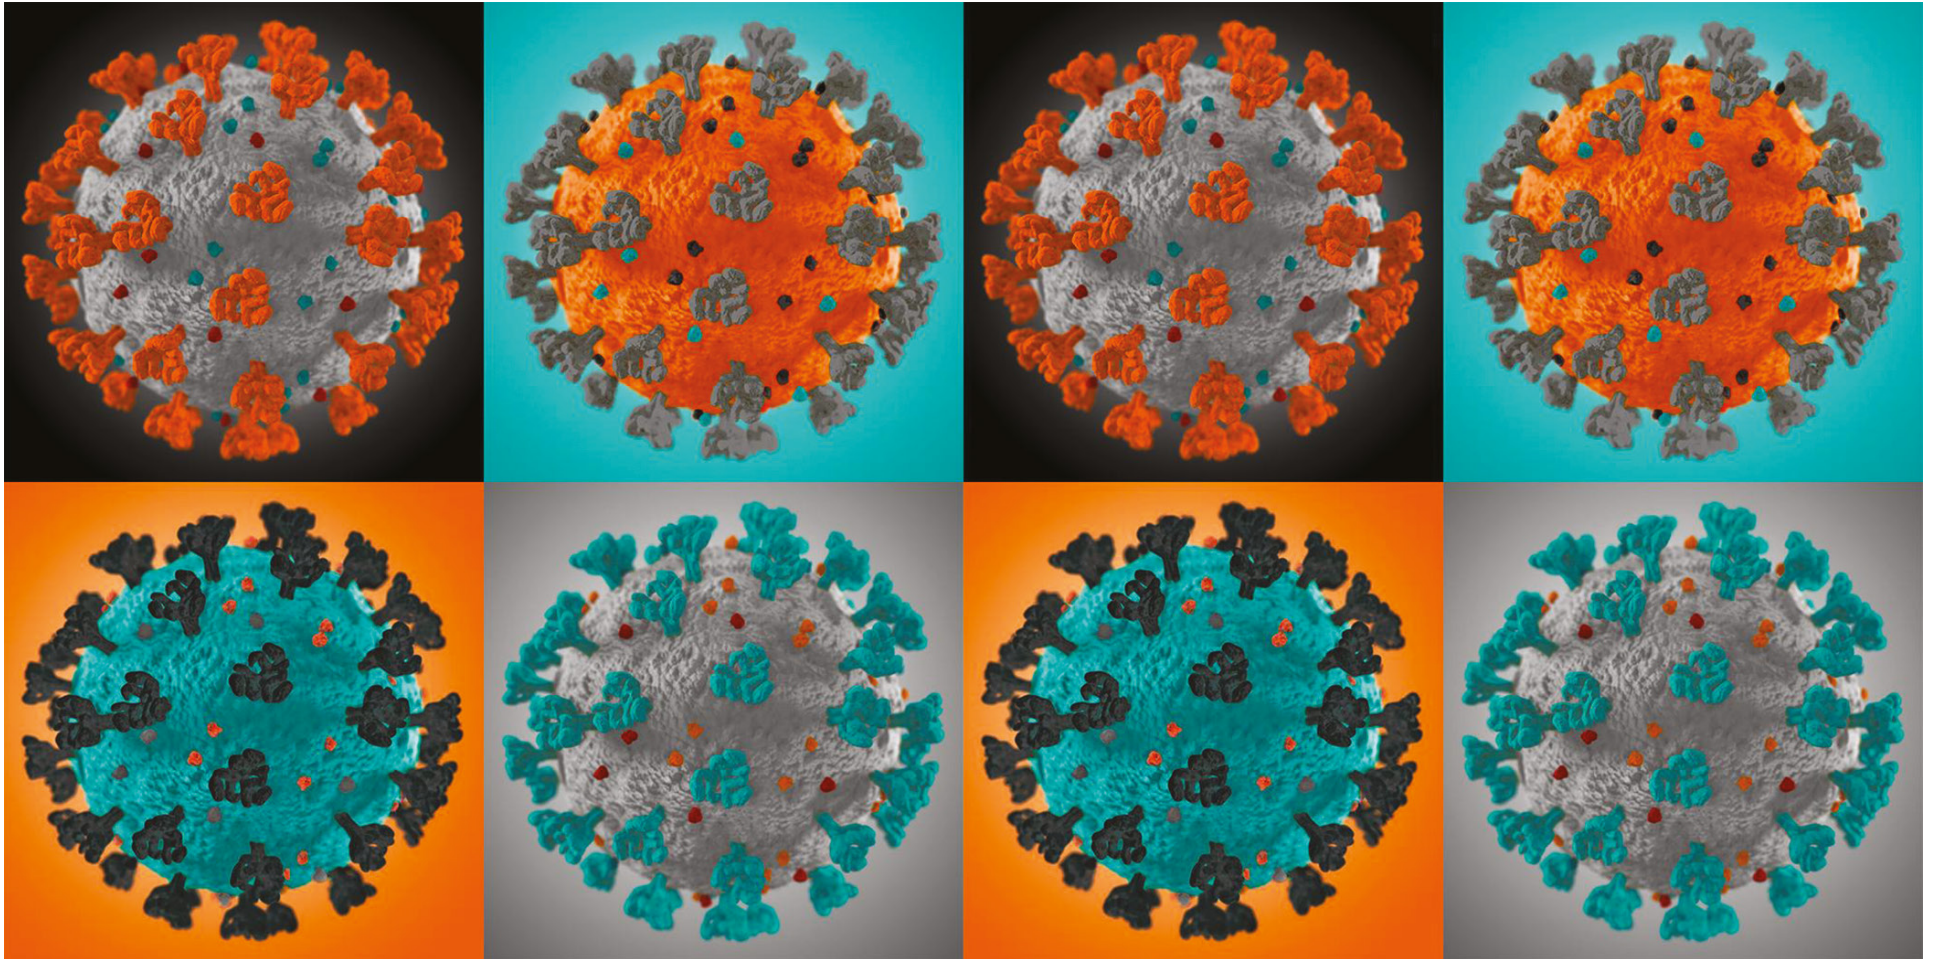

White House officials, when providing background about Foster’s selection to preserve the image of Jackson at this pivotal moment in American history, touted her “unique perspective and sensitive approach to her subjects [that] allows for imagery that reflects intimately warm and organic moments in a most delicate human way.”

Given Foster’s creative outlook and unique approach to photography, it was only fitting that she was chosen to take Jackson’s portrait. Foster’s photography gained momentum following her work on the film Queen & Slim, where Foster was handpicked to visually interpret the film through her photography.

California Updates Guidelines for 2nd COVID-19 Booster Dose

Breanna Reeves | Staff

Following the Center for Disease Control and Prevention's (CDC) recommendation for an additional COVID-19 vaccine booster shot for certain individuals, California updated their eligibility requirements for a second booster dose as well as an initial Pfizer booster shot for those 12 years of age and older.

As the dominant Omicron variant, BA.2, has proven to be more transmissible, health officials continue to emphasize the durability of COVID-19 vaccines against infection and death. The CDC noted that those who received booster shots were 21-times less likely to die from COVID-19 compared to those who were unvaccinated.

"Boosters are safe, and people over the age of 50 can now get an additional booster 4 months after their prior dose to increase their protection further. This is especially important for those 65 and older and those 50 and older with underlying medical conditions that increase their risk for severe disease from COVID-19 as they are the most likely to benefit from receiving an additional booster dose at this time," CDC Director Dr. Rochelle P. Walensky said in a statement.

A recently published CDC report found receiving three doses of an mRNA vaccine is highly effective in preventing severe illness from COVID-19. According to the report, receiving two or three doses of a COVID-19 vaccine was associated with a 90% reduction for COVID-19-related death.

Under the new California guidance, a second booster dose of the Moderna or Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine is recommended for individuals who are 50 years of age and older, certain immunocompromised individuals and anyone who received a Johnson & Johnson booster.

Lineage, Not Race, to Determine Who Gets Reparations Payments

Antonio Ray Harvey | California Black Media

After a first vote failed, the California Task Force to Study and Develop Reparations Proposals for African Americans decided that lineage will determine who will be eligible for reparations.

During the first session of the eighth, two-day meeting, five members of the task force voted in favor of lineage over race as the determining factor for compensation. Four members said no, 90 minutes after the first vote failed.

The measure needed a two-thirds majority of the task force to vote in favor of the proposal for ratification. “The Ayes have it and the motion carries,” task force chairperson Kamilah Moore said following the vote.

“So, the community eligibility will be based on lineage determined by an individual being African American, the descendant of a (person enslaved as chattel) or descendant of a free-Black person living in the United States prior to the end of the 19th century.”

Task Force members Moore, vice-chair Amos Brown, pastor of Third Baptist Church in San Francisco, and president of his local NAACP branch; University of California-Berkeley professor Jovan Scott Lewis; and San Diego City Councilwoman Monica Montgomery-Steppe voted in favor of the lineage qualifier.

A split decision

Sen. Steven Bradford (D-Gardena) broke the tie. He abstained from the process during the first round of voting, which ended up with four in favor, three against lineage, and two abstentions, the other being attorney Don Tamaki. Tamaki, Assemblymember Reggie Jones-Sawyer (D-Los Angeles), Los Angeles-based attorney Lisa Holder, and Loyola-Marymount professor Cheryl Grills, voted in favor of race as the deciding factor.

In February, the Task Force voted 5-4 to postpone the vote on whether race or lineage would be the determinant to have more time to listen to experts and weigh the requirements. During the March 29 meeting, members listened to 11 genealogy experts’ perspectives and insights on the eligibility considerations before the vote.

California Secretary of State Shirley Weber, who authored the legislation establishing the task force, Assembly Bill (AB) 3121 in 2020 – while serving in the Assembly – presented to the panel in January. She argued that compensation should be limited to African Americans who are descendants of Africans enslaved in the United States.

“Reparations are designed to repair and heal the damages done to Africans for 400 years who (suffered) through Jim Crow (laws),” Weber said in January. “Reparations are for those who are descendants of slavery. Their ties are permanently severed from their homeland and their ability to return to Africa is almost impossible. We are truly Americans.”

The bill’s language instructs

Gov. Gavin Newsom signed AB 3121 into law in 2020. The task force is charged with studying slavery and its lingering effects on African Americans with a “special consideration” for descendants of persons enslaved in the United States, the bill’s language instructs.

AB 3121 also requires members to recommend what compensation should be, who should receive it, and how it should be paid. A panel of economists contracted by the task force will give their input on the financial aspects of compensation and impacts. “We will use this community of eligibility standards to establish the economic consultant team with the next steps,” Moore said.

Tiger Woods Emerges from Near Amputation to Play Masters

Jon D. Gaede | BVN Sports

Twenty-five years ago, an 18-year-old Kobe Bryant faced Michael Jordan at the “Fabulous Forum” in Inglewood. In that same winter of 1997, a 21-year-old PGA rookie named Eldrick “Tiger” Woods, won his first Masters at Augusta Georgia. He won the event by 12 shots, a margin no script could write. Sadly, one of that year’s competitors is no longer with us and the other has just reemerged.

Tiger remained in the hospital for three months, his ability to play or walk in doubt

Perhaps no other modern athlete has galvanized the interest and popularity of a single sport like Tiger Woods. His impact on those who love to play the game and countless others simply fascinated by his persona, is extraordinary.

On February 23, 2021, Wood’s vehicle rolled and tumbled some 150 feet into a Rancho Palos Verdes ravine, severely injuring his right leg. In the aftermath, surgeons seriously considered amputating just above the ankle. Tiger would remain in the hospital for the next three months, as his ability to play or walk again remained in doubt.

Woods traveled to Augusta this week on his surgically repaired right leg to compete again

Fourteen months later, after several surgical procedures to save his right leg, followed by a year of rigorous rehabilitation, Tiger Woods traveled to Augusta this week to try out his surgically repaired right leg in official competition. Woods chose golf’s most prestigious venue to make his latest return. The golf world is buzzing as the Augusta patrons covet their tickets, hoping to witness history again or just get another glimpse of this Tiger. The golf media had not scripted a Woods’ return, because the idea was so remote. His fellow PGA peers, tournament organizers and golf fans throughout the world are now buzzing. A demanding 7,500 yards of narrow fairways, tabletop greens and the undulated terrain of Augusta

Confirmed! Ketanji Brown Jackson First Black Woman to Serve on US Supreme Court

Breanna Reeves | Staff

Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson, 51, made history on Thursday when she was confirmed as the 116th Supreme Court justice, making her the first Black woman and first public defender to become a member of the highest court. The U.S. Senate confirmed Jackson's appointment in a 53-47 vote.

Jackson will replace Justice Stephen Breyer who announced his retirement earlier in the year. She previously clerked for Breyer in 1999, and will fill his seat. He will complete his last term on the bench at the end of the summer, and Jackson will likely ascend the seat as early as June.

"Her opinions are always carefully reasoned, tethered to precedent, and demonstrate respect for how the law impacts everyday people. It doesn't mean she puts her thumb on the scale of justice one way or the other, but she understands the broader impact of her decisions,” said President Joe Biden when he nominated Jackson to the high court in February. “[S]he strives to ensure that everyone understands why she made a decision, what the law is, and what it means to them. She strives to be fair, to get it right, to do justice.”

National NAACP President Derrick Johnson issued a statement on the historic Senate vote that reads in part, “Today’s vote to confirm Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson to the Supreme Court is of enormous consequence to our nation and to history. After 233 years, the Court will finally have a Black woman justice deciding our most significant cases with tremendous impact on our lives and the lives of our families.”

This has taken far too long. Fifty-five years ago, former NAACP Chief Counsel Thurgood Marshall broke down the wall when he was confirmed as the first Black American to sit on the Supreme Court. Today, Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson shatters the glass ceiling to finally make room for a Black woman on our nation’s highest court.”

The confirmation hearings

Jackson’s confirmation hearing garnered much attention, not only for the historic nomination, but also for the line of questions Jackson received from members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Over the three days of the hearing, Jackson was asked about her religion, questioned about her “soft” sentencing in regard to pedophiles and her involvement in assisting four Guantánamo Bay detainees in filing unlawful detention petitions as a federal public defender.

While Jackson endured hours of intense, and at times aggressive, questioning from members of the committee, she was also admired by members like Senator Cory Booker (D-NJ) whose closing speech during the hearing elicited tears from Jackson.

“Today, you’re my star. You are my harbinger of hope. This country is getting better and better and better. When that final vote happens and you ascend onto the highest court in the land, I’m gonna rejoice. And I’m gonna tell you right now: The greatest country in the world, the United States of America, will be better because of you,” Booker said as his speech came to an end.

Vice President Kamala Harris, the first woman and first Black to serve in this role oversees, the Senate as the historic votes are cast confirming Ketanji Brown Jackson to the nation’s highest court. (source: yahoo.com).

Making history

Over the span of 233 years, just two Black people — both men — have been confirmed to the bench since the Supreme Court was established in 1789. Those men were Thurgood Marshall in 1967 and Clarence Thomas in 1991, who still occupies the bench today.

Today, Jackson became only the 6th woman to serve on the nation’s highest court, alongside Associate Justices Sonia Sotomayor, Elena Kagan and Amy Coney Barrett.

Jackson’s nomination received support from three Republican Senators: Susan Collins (ME), Lisa Murkowski (AK) and Mitt Romney (UT) who helped push her confirmation to the court forward, joining the 50 Democratic votes.

Initial support for Jackson’s nomination to the court by the public was among the highest of any recent nominee, according to a Gallup poll conducted in March. According to the survey results, 58% of Americans said the Senate should confirm Jackson. Jackson’s level of support nearly rivals current Chief Justice John Roberts who had 59% of America’s support in 2005.

“To know at the highest level, there’s a person who looks like me, I think it’s incredible. I think it definitely sets the tone for those [who] come after her,” explained Che Wright, First Vice President of the San Bernardino Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

“[I]t shows us that things are attainable, the things that they thought we weren’t going to be able to accomplish — we are. I hope that lots of Black women are celebrating today. It is really like some ‘Black Girl Magic’ to me right now,” Wright said.

Supported with rods, plates and screws, he hopes to compete at the highest level

Tiger Woods has been away from the game that made him. His current world ranking is 973rd, but that doesn't matter to him because he feels like he can not only compete but win at Augusta this week. "I am extremely thankful to my team and everyone who has been part of my daily rehabilitation," said Woods, who has limited mobility in the injured leg. Supported with rods, plates and screws, he hopes the repaired leg will allow him to swing and compete at the highest level. "My surgeons gave me a chance, it's up to me now."

At a pre-Master's news conference, Tiger reflected on golf legend Ben Hogan's car crash in 1949 and subsequent return to play at Augusta with sustained injuries. Woods didn't think that he would be playing had his accident occurred during the Hogan era. Woods said he hoped to find the fairways this week, reflecting that the uneven lies and slopes of the course would be difficult, adding, "The only flat spots at Augusta are the tee boxes."

Currently, the top four and seven of the top ten players in the world are under age 30. Tiger is 46, has endured several back surgeries, not including the severe injury to his lower right leg from last year's car accident. In each case, Tiger has had to completely reinvent his golf swing to compete. He's never pain free and likely has a threshold that mere golf mortals could not imagine. Simply walking the daily required one- and one-half miles (7,475 yards) on a tough course may be his most difficult challenge this week. Then again, it's Tiger Woods at the Masters.

Harold Varner, golf's only other Black player, will make his Master's debut

There are other story lines at the 86th Masters this week. Harold Varner, golf's only other contemporary Black player, currently ranked 40th, will make his master's debut. World Number 1 ranked Scottie Scheffler has simply dominated 2022, by winning three of golf's first five tournaments so far this year. Hideki Matsuyama became the first Japanese born player to win a "Green Jacket" in 2021, and will defend his title. Popular three-time winner, Phil Michelson, who has played in 28 Masters, will not be there.

For those looking in for the first time, Augusta, like the Kentucky Derby perhaps, certainly has its own vernacular, here are a few. "Magnolia Lane," describes the iconic driveway leading to the clubhouse; "Amen Corner" refers to holes 11, 12 and 13; "Azalea" identifies the flowering shrub in abundance on the course; "Hogan's Bridge" is a rock structure named after Ben Hogan, above Ray's Creek on the 12th; "Eisenhower Tree" is along the 17th fairway; "Green Jacket" only adorns the winners; and "Golf's Heaven" refers to Augusta, Georgia, where perhaps the magical game of golf and the afterlife merge.

Tiger Woods is the most compelling athlete of our time, the world will be watching

Born in 1975, the Tiger Woods golf legacy began when his father Earl put golf clubs in his son's hands at age three. Eventually, Tiger's phenomenal ability to shape shots, improvise, scramble, recover, endure pain, and embrace the moment are without measure. Worldwide, it's hard to imagine anyone who wouldn't know his name. He has won 82 tournaments, 15 majors and an unprecedented fifth Masters title in 2019. Tiger Woods is simply the most compelling athlete of our time, and the world will be looking in.

Spotlight on Stackwell: An App Designed for Building Black Wealth

Zanesha Williams | Staff

In the Inland Empire and throughout the country, Black people are leading with new ideas in their respective industries with strengthening the Black Community as their North Star.

Trevor Rozier-Byrd, CEO and Founder of Stackwell Capital, is a perfect example. Rozier-Byrd spent a large part of his career in financial services and asset management spaces, which contributed to his desire to branch out and make understanding wealth more accessible.

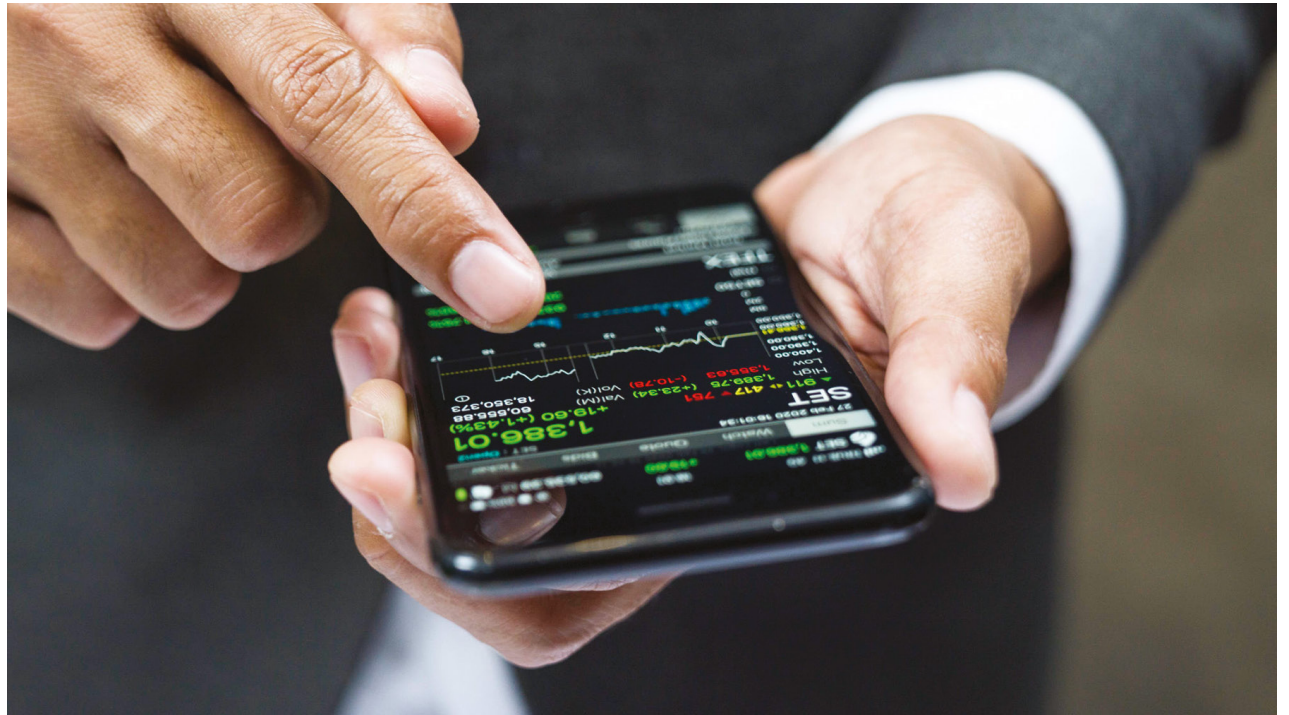

One of the tools he believes can help accomplish this is Stackwell, an app designed to educate and encourage building Black generational wealth through personalized options and solutions. Rozier-Byrd excitedly shared why he felt an app like Stackwell was necessary. He stated, "...We have spent the entirety of our professional careers in and around the financial markets, frankly, helping build wealth for people that don't look like us."

When you navigate to Stackwell's website and enter your email, you are met almost immediately with a disturbing truth. "The wealth gap between Black and white America is widening."

The wealth gap

He expounded, "The reality is the numbers are telling a story of a racial wealth gap that's growing more severe with each passing generation. We fundamentally believe as an organization, and as individuals, that the racial wealth gap is a social justice issue of our time. It directly impacts every other material issue that we care about within the Black community. So you think about things like access to affordable housing, healthcare, quality education, food insecurity issues, criminal justice reform, and all of those things are directly impacted by persons' access to capital or lack thereof."

Another frontrunner at Stackwell is Omosefe Bomwan, the Vice President of Product. Much like Rozier-Byrd, Bomwan's objective at Stackwell is personal. When asked why she feels so strongly about the Black community's need for Stackwell, she stated, "I'm a first generation Nigerian American, and eldest daughter of six. So I've always kind of been in this tribe community mindset. Part of what drew me to Stockwell is how well the mission aligned with my lived experiences. As someone who came from humble beginnings, to making a decent amount of money at an early age, and lacked the financial guidance around how to build wealth over time."

Much like Bomwan, others have wondered how to turn medium to high income into generational wealth. Stackwell makes understanding investing options personal, just like the experiences of those behind the scenes.

Rozier-Byrd mentions a major part of designing the Stackwell app was acknowledging and myth busting a common misconception that investing requires some level of sophistication or understanding of the financial market to get started. He says they worked to accomplish that, "...by deconstructing and demystifying many of those perceptions. We have specifically architected our solution and our platform to deliver information that speaks to people's understanding of the markets or perceptions that they may have had coming in."

Trevor Rozier-Byrd, CEO and Founder of Stackwell, (stackwellcapital.com)

Valuing the customer's point of view

By pivoting themselves to a customer's perspective, Rozier-Byrd and Bomwan found the biggest issue they'd have to acknowledge is getting clients past an overwhelming fear about where to start. Most of the people they've talked to have acknowledged they know investing is a positive way to impact their future, but get lost understanding the biggest

California updated their eligibility requirements for a second booster dose as well as an initial Pfizer booster shot for those 12 years of age and older. (source: intermountainhealthcare.org)

“Getting this additional booster is the best way to strengthen your protection against COVID-19. The additional Pfizer or Moderna booster dose for anyone who received a Johnson & Johnson booster, certain immunocompromised individuals, and people aged 50 and up will help protect our communities and continue to move the state forward,” California Health and Human Services Agency Secretary Dr. Mark Ghaly, and Director of the California Department of Public Health and State Public Health Officer Dr. Tomás J. Aragón said in a joint statement.

In Riverside County, data regarding who has received booster shots is not categorized by age groups, but the county reported that among individuals 12 years of age and older, 31.4% have received an additional dose. With no standard guidance for measuring additional booster shots, San Bernardino County’s COVID-19 dashboard only provides a count of those who have received an additional shot. The county reports that 522,713 residents have received at least one booster or additional dose.

benefits and weighing risk versus reward.

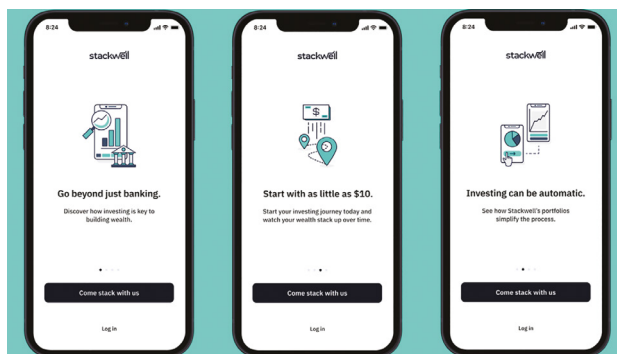

Rozier-Byrd used a helpful analogy to describe the financial market that I may never forget. “As a consumer, if I wanted to go to the store and buy a pair of jeans or a pair of sneakers...If I got to the store that day, and they were on sale by 10 or 15%, I’d be super excited about that. It creates a buying opportunity for me to get the same thing that I value, but at a lower cost.”

He continued, “That’s what I think about when I see the stock market going down.”

Meeting customers where they are

It is important to note that Stackwell’s goal is to meet each customer where they are in order to develop new financial knowledge. Bomwan reiterated, “We think about the basics of investing, meeting people where they are and not assuming anything in terms of financial understanding. We really want to kind of guide people to understand how the broader process works.”

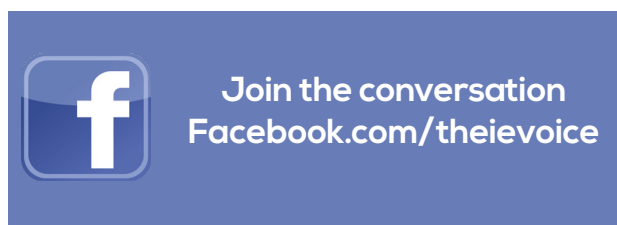

Among the most important goals of Stackwell is getting clients past an overwhelming fear about where to start. (stackwellcapital.com)

At this time, Stackwell is the beta phase of testing before full deployment and availability which is expected in late June, however, new interested customers can sign up for the wait list process. People on the waitlist are eligible for early access to try out Stackwell and an introduction to understanding how to leverage the market.

“It’s about us showing up in the community. We feel strongly about this issue and our commitment to the people that we’re trying to serve. We want your readers to know how committed we are to them individually.”

continue him in that role when he stands for election this year. Is Dicus the sheriff San Bernardino voters want leading the county into the future? Someone who made one of his first acts to gag the coroner officials under the guise of a temporary order—and then stealthily make it permanent?

ACLU’s Melanie Ochoa said it best when she noted how sheriff’s departments have a pattern of “refusing to be transparent or accountable, particularly when sheriff’s deputies commit misconduct.”

I found it almost laughable that when the bill was introduced in January, although the California State Sheriff’s Association did not take a position at that time its representative did express concern regarding how the bill basically rids the counties’ of their ability to combine the offices of sheriff and coroner. The organization’s Director of Legislative Affairs expressed concern about the significant costs such an action would impose on counties. The cost is yet to be determined, but whatever it is, I’m sure the county could easily afford it if it was not paying out millions of dollars in settlement cases brought against the sheriff’s department year after year for excess use of force and/or wrongful deaths.

The way I see it, there are three options on the table. (1) Do not vote for Dicus and instead elect a sheriff that is not part of the old guard by choosing someone with a new vision for the future of policing in San Bernardino County. (2) Advocate for the passage of AB 1608, County officers: Consolidation of Offices legislation that will separate sheriff’s departments from coroners in California. (3) Or, put pressure on the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors to do so.

This year, don’t be a bystander, advocate for change. Contact your California Assemblymember and push for the passage of AB1608. Follow this link for contact information. Let your board supervisor know you want the sheriff department and coroner’s office separated. Follow this link for information regarding how to contact your supervisor.

And finally, do not vote for Dicus just because he is the man county officials decided should be the sheriff. Review the backgrounds and policing philosophy of those in the race and select the person best suited for the kind of policing we need in San Bernardino County. Don’t let all the fear mongering about rising crime scare you into a bad decision. Yes, crime is rising but it is important that the community take a thoughtful approach to seeking a sustainable solution. A January report shows that although violent crime is up, it is not surging to the extent many would have us believe.

Of course, this is just my opinion. I’m keeping it real.
