Monkeypox and the Fear of Bias

(source: luskin.ucla.edu)

On June 12, 2022 the CDC reported 45 cases of monkeypox in the U.S, however by July 15, 2022 the number of monkeypox cases in the nation had grown to 1400—a notable increase.

Riverside County reported two additional “probable” cases of monkeypox in the region on July 8. The announcement came on the heels of the county’s recent confirmation of Riverside’s first case by the CDC.

because of limited testing and surveillance capacity according to the World Health Organization.

As the monkeypox virus spreads

The number of monkeypox cases continue to climb in the U.S. and the world—even as the COVID-19 pandemic continues to simmer after having set the nation and the world back on

“When the AIDS plague finally took hold in the U.S., it surged through communities that the straight world preferred not to see. It took a few tries. The virus lurked in tropical regions of central Africa, and made several incursions into the American continent before becoming a global pandemic. HIV likely killed a young man in St. Louis in 1969, just one month before the Stonewall riots.”

- Tim Fitzsimons

There have been more than 3,000 confirmed monkeypox cases in countries beyond Central and West Africa so far this year. The hopeful news is, so far at least, no deaths have been reported in the western world and this remains true in the U.S. according to recent CDC assessments.

According to recent reports, no less than 70 deaths from monkeypox have been reported across five African countries so far this year. Experts suspect this is probably an undercount its heels for more than two years. And, people are paying attention to this latest global health concern.

The good news is that unlike the COVID-19 virus, although the monkeypox virus is spreading, it is not threatening lives in America.

However, something more subtle may be putting the health of an entire community at greater risks for this rare virus and the political

State Legislators Secure Major Funding for San Bernardino County Initiatives

S.E. Williams | Executive Editor

State lawmakers awarded San Bernardino County nearly $13 million in state funding to help purchase fire engines and to build a new fire station and animal shelter.

The project requests were included in the recently passed 2022-23 state budget.

Commenting on the funding gains Board Chair Curt Hagman acknowledged the successful partnerships between state legislators and local officials stating, “San Bernardino doesn’t just have great representatives in Sacramento, we have great champions who fight for us.”

For example, Assemblyman James Ramos (D-Highland) and a former county supervisor, obtained $7 million to build a new fire station near the unincorporated community of Rosena Ranch, a new housing development allocated along the I-15 freeway near the Cajon Pass.

The community is situated about 20 minutes from the fire stations in neighboring communities which raised legitimate concerns about response times not only for routine emergency calls but also potential wildfires in the area. Ramos’ state budget request will help make the fire station for this community a reality.

Another million dollars in fire protection funding was secured for San Bernardino County due to the advocacy of Assemblymember Tom Lackey (R-Palmdale).

The money will enable the County Fire Protection District to purchase water tenders and brush engines for the small mountain community of Wrightwood located in the northern foothills of the San Gabriel Mountains just west of the Cajon Pass.

According to county officials, these engines are smaller, more maneuverable and better able to operate in mountainous or off road terrain.

In another example of state legislators working in partnership with local electeds to secure funding for county initiatives, Assemblymember Eloise Gomez Reyes (D-Grand Terrace) championed a request for $4.5 million toward the county’s effort to build a new county animal shelter in Bloomington. The new shelter will replace the aging Devore shelter.

While the county has set aside funds to construct the new facility, there is still a funding gap that must be closed before construction can begin as noted by Fifth District Supervisor Joe Baca.

“This is a major project for San Bernardino County and a significant investment in the unincorporated community of Bloomington that will be a landmark for many years to come,” he said in a statement on the county’s website. “We appreciate the dedication and effort of Assemblymember Reyes to assist us with this project that will benefit the entire county.”

ARMC Trauma Center Moves Closer to National Level 1 Designation

(source: arrowheadregional.org)

S.E. Williams | Executive Editor

San Bernardino County's Arrowhead Regional Medical Center (ARMC) in Colton has moved a step closer in its long journey to become the Inland Empire's second Level 1 trauma center.

For more than 20 years ARMC has provided residents of San Bernardino County with medical services. The facility was built to meet the steadily increasing health needs of the area's growing population.

Staff with 3,500 employees, 400 physicians, and 182 resident physicians, ARMC is Joint Commission Certified. Also, as a Comprehensive Stroke Center it was recently awarded the "American Heart Association/American Stroke Association's 2021 "Get With the Guidelines® - Stroke Gold Plus Quality Achievement Award".

On Tuesday, July 12, the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors approved ARMC's designation as a Level 1 Trauma Center by the Inland Counties Emergency Medical Agency (ICEMA), which surveyed the trauma center in April 2022.

ARMC has already implemented all the requirements for the Level 1 designation, including cardiovascular services and comprehensive care for trauma patients. ARMC's Trauma Center handles approximately 2,500 traumas each year.

ARMC began its effort to become a Level 1 trauma center in 1982 long before ARMC was conceived at a time when its predecessor San Bernardino County Medical Center was located on Gilbert Street in San Bernardino. At the time, then Chief of Trauma Dev Gnana Dev M.D. worked with ICEMA, and other key partners, to help plan and build the trauma center.

The trauma center will feature eight-bays with a

Afro Pick Pioneer Willie Morrow Has Passed

S.E. Williams | Executive Editor

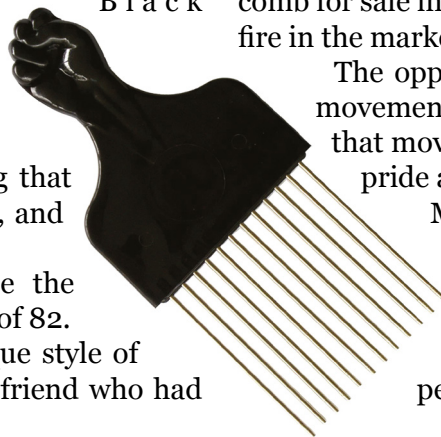

When young people in the 1960's claimed racial pride, nothing was more indicative of that proclamation than the beautiful afro hair. The hairstyle shifted the cultural norm and inspired Americans to lay down their hot combs and screw the lids on jars of perm previously used to straighten kinky Black crowns, and instead to embrace the African-ness evident in their curly, kinky crowns.

Nothing was more indicative of Black culture during that era than the Afro hair styles, Afro Sheen® hair products, and the Afro picks that kept the hairstyle well coiffed.

The San Diego barber, Willie Morrow, who became the pioneer of the Afro picks, passed away in June at the age of 82.

Morrow was inspired to create and market the unique style of comb after he was gifted a wooden version of it from a friend who had visited Nigeria in 1962. The comb was uniquely suited for Black hair with its widely spaced prongs compared to the traditional comb where the teeth are positioned very close together.

Black

During the peak of production Morrow sold as many as 12,000 Afro picks per week. (source: amazon.com)

As recounted by his daughter, Cheryl Morrow, during a recent interview, her father taught himself how to make and manufacture the comb for sale in the western world. It took a while however, for it to catch fire in the market place.

The opportunity came however with the rise of the Civil Rights movement and the elevation of Black pride as an intrinsic part of that movement. This included embracing Black culture and racial pride as evidenced by celebrating the kinkiness of Black hair.

Morrow would become an expert on the natural hairstyle and go on to write books about it including "Curly Hair: A Specialized Text on Styling the Natural Afro and Straight Hair" initially published in 1973.

According to his daughter, at one point during the peak of his production Morrow sold as many as 12,000 combs per week.

Surprisingly, Morrow was also hired by the Pentagon in 1969 to teach hundreds of military barbers how to style naturals using his pick.

RCC Student Journalists Launch In-depth Podcast Report on Fentanyl in the IE

S.E. Williams | Executive Editor

Message from the editor:

The IE Voice and Black Voice News is proud to feature this report in support of emerging journalists in our community.

Riverside City College's student-run newspaper, Viewpoints, released a three-episode podcast on July 1st titled Fentanyl Empire: The Inland Empire's Latest Drug Crisis.

The investigative report, created in partnership with the California Humanities Emerging Journalist Fellowship Program, explores how the drug enters the region, reveals the impact it has on those who consume it and discusses solutions the community could implement to address and help mitigate the growing problem.

Commenting about the opportunities available to the student publication through participation in the fellowship program, Matt Schoenmann, journalism specialist at Riverside City College noted, "The fellowship has helped with some additional funding for our program, provided mentorship and support, and allowed for reporting outside of usual Viewpoints coverage."

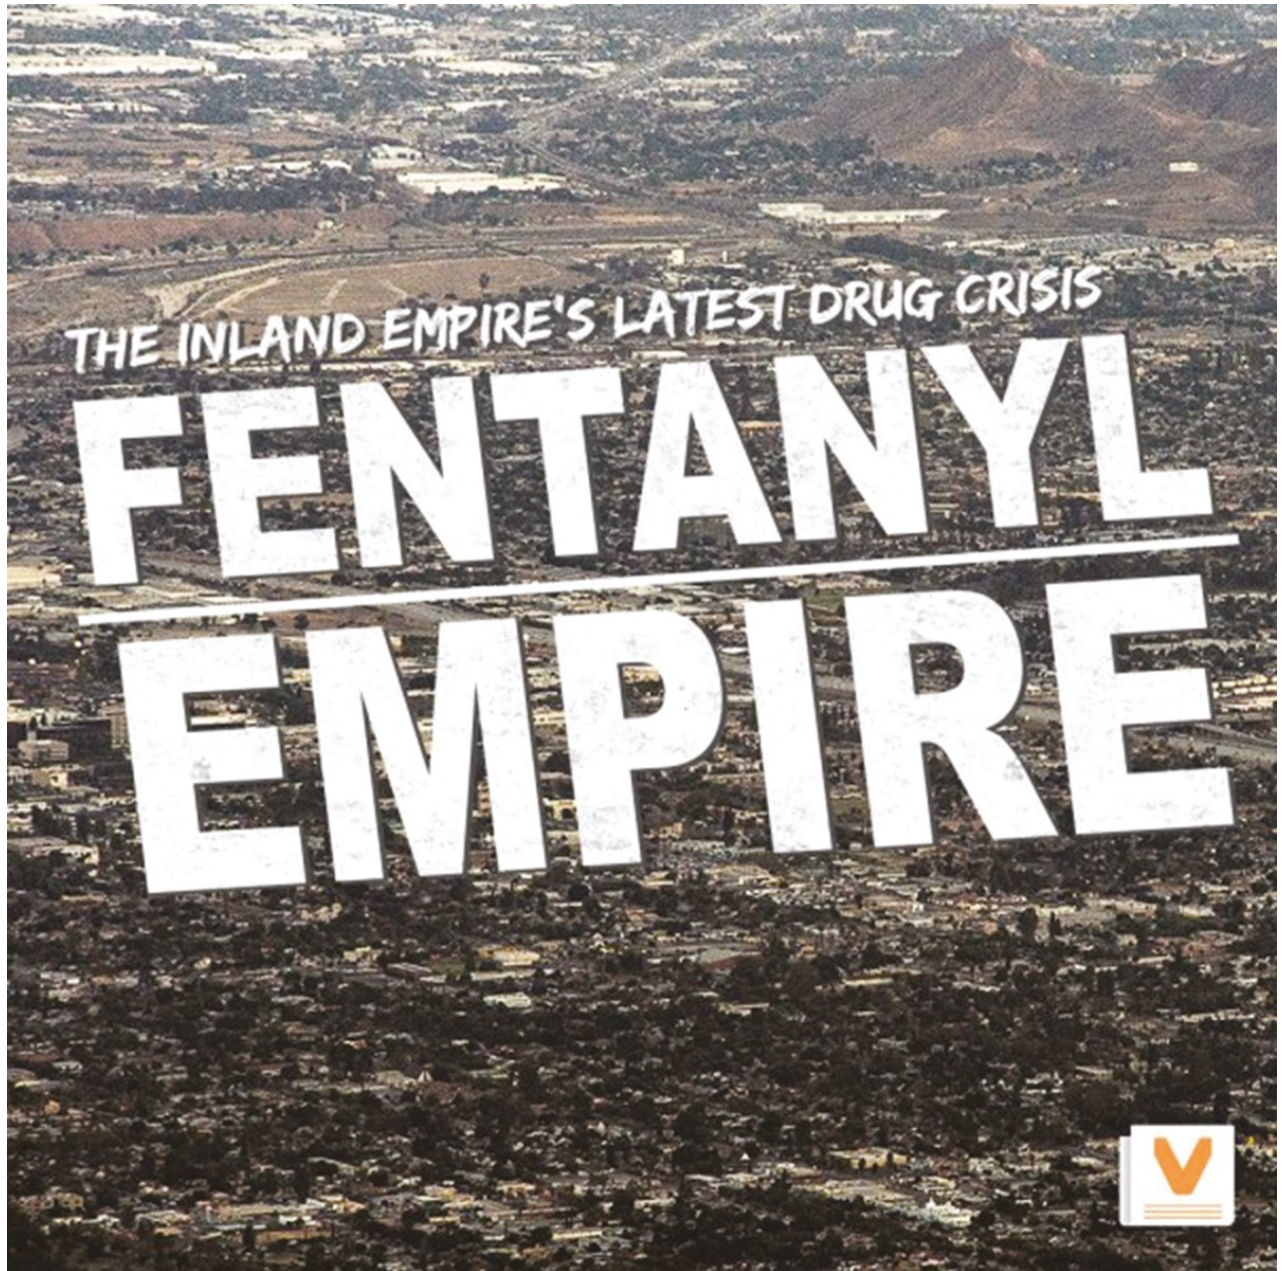

Although this year's project was conceived by the students according to Schoenmann, as a lifelong resident of the Inland Empire he knows how tragic the drug crisis has been here for generations. "I am very proud of their reporting," he stressed.

Viewpoints journalists Daniel Hernandez, Tim Nacey, William L.G. Stephens and Jennipher Vasquez teamed up over the course of the spring semester to showcase, and add inquiry and context to this pressing issue impacting their community.

The podcast exposes the realities of how fentanyl has generated a string of untimely deaths, caused overdoses and ultimately provoked Inland Empire officials to take on this crisis especially in light of how quickly it is accelerated in just five years. For example, the number of fentanyl-related deaths was 25 in 2017, but that number ballooned to over 400 in 2021 – an increase of 1600%.

fellowship program that trains and prepares student journalists to conduct in-depth reporting on issues of importance to campuses and communities. The first project The Fight For California's Great Lake, won a Journalism Association of Community Colleges statewide award for best news writing.

Monkeypox Cases Increase Slowly in Riverside County

by Breanna Reeves

Riverside County reported two additional “probable” cases of monkeypox in the region on July 8, following the confirmation of the county’s first case by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Jose Arballo Jr., Senior Public Information Specialist at Riverside University Health System-Public Health, tweeted that the two probable cases are men who live in eastern Riverside County who are younger than 60 years old.

Monkeypox cases are slowly increasing throughout the state and the U.S. According to the CDC, there are 148 confirmed cases in California. There are currently a total of 866 cases in the U.S.

Jose Arballo Jr., Senior Public Information Specialist at Riverside University Health System-Public Health tweeted an update about potential cases of monkeypox in the region (Image via Twitter).

Monkeypox is a rare disease that is caused by the monkeypox virus which belongs to the same family of viruses that includes smallpox. The California Department of Public Health’s (CDPH) noted that the virus previously occurred in the U.S. rarely and has mostly been related to international travel or the importation of animals.

Symptoms of monkeypox may include fever, low energy, swollen lymph nodes and later on (one to three days) following in initial symptoms, the development of rash or sores.

How the virus spreads

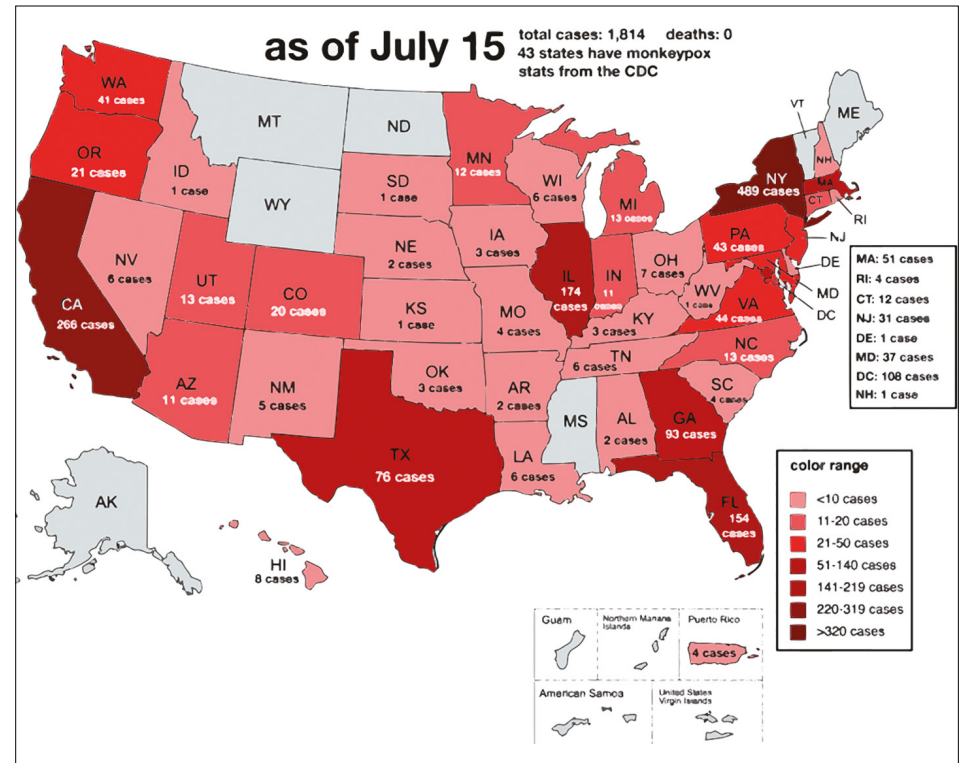

The virus is spread through direct skin-to-skin contact, sexual or intimate contact, sharing unwashed clothing and respiratory interactions through “prolonged face-to-face interactions” with someone who may have monkeypox. It is not spread through casual conversations or by touching items.

Local and state health departments are working to increase vaccine availability for use in current and future monkeypox outbreaks. On July 1, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) announced that they ordered 2.5 million doses of Bavarian Nordic’s JYNNEOS, an FDA-licensed vaccine that is used in the prevention of smallpox and monkeypox.

“We are working around-the-clock with public health officials in states and large metro areas to provide them with vaccines and treatments to respond to the current monkeypox outbreak,” said HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra in a statement. “This order of additional JYNNEOS vaccine will help us push out more vaccines quickly, knowing that we have more doses on the way in the coming months – and is only possible because of our longstanding investment in smallpox and monkeypox preparedness.”

While health officials are working to bolster the availability of vaccines, local health departments have a limited supply of the vaccines that are available as “part of post exposure treatment,” according to Arballo. Currently, the county does not have enough of a supply for pre-exposure use.

“Anyone who believes they may have been exposed to monkeypox should contact their primary care provider, who will go over the symptoms and signs of the virus and determine whether testing is warranted,” Arballo stated in an email.

San Bernardino's Measure K is One Step Closer to Implementation

S.E. Williams | Executive Editor

In 2020 voters in San Bernardino County approved Measure K by an overwhelming margin of nearly two thirds of the vote.

The measure would imposed term limits on county supervisors restricting them to a single four-year term while also capping their salaries and benefits at a combined $60K per year compared to the supervisors' current $250K+ in salary and benefits combined.

Within a few short weeks of the measure's passage in 2020 San Bernardino County and the Board of Supervisors filed suit effectively halting the measure's implementation. However last Tuesday, July 12, the 4th District Court of Appeals in Riverside tentatively ruled against the San Bernardino County and the board.

In its ruling the appellate court declared, "We will hold that the one-term limit is constitutional". The court further held that the compensation for the supervisors can be set by initiatives and further noted the board had not shown that the compensation limit established by the measure violated minimum wage laws.

In the appeal the board argued that once benefits and all taxes are taken from the proposed $60K salary board members' compensation would average out at less than the minimum wage of $15 per hour.

In its ruling on July 12 the appellate judges split on whether Measure K applied to supervisors newly elected in 2020. It determined that although the one-term limit applies, the compensation cap did not.

In light of the appellate court ruling the board is considering its next steps as the appellate court ruling is not yet final.

Each side still has an opportunity to make oral arguments before the court and regardless of the outcome at the appellate level with side can still appeal to the California Supreme Court.

Tax Roll in Riverside County Shows Largest Increase in 15 Years

S.E. Williams | Executive Editor

Strong demand for real estate in the Inland Empire led to a 9.26% increase in assessed values in Riverside County entering 2022, according to the County Assessor-County Clerk-Recorder, reflecting the highest increase in assessed value since 2007 when values rose more than 16%.

Riverside County Assessor-County Clerk-Recorder Peter Aldana announced on Monday that the total taxable value of all property in the county for the current year grew to over $369 billion, a $31 billion increase.

The good news is this year's tax roll—a list of all taxable property, its owner, and its value as of Jan. 1—will generate roughly $3.5 billion for local government services.

“With such an active and appreciating real estate market this past year, our roll reflects the market conditions for property owners in Riverside County,” Aldana said. “As values go up, the tax base grows, which helps keep our county financially strong. I want to thank the coordinated team effort that completed the assessment roll on time once again during another very busy year.”

The California Association of Realtors reports the median home price in Riverside County grew to $586,000 in December 2021, setting a record high for any December.

Despite the increase in home prices, most property owners will not see an equal rise in property taxes on their next annual tax bill, which will be mailed in October. This is because state law requires the assessor vulnerability surrounding this potential has created an uncomfortable forum for discussion regarding the spread of monkeypox in America.

Remembering history

Today, we find ourselves at a crossroads. The CDC and other health officials are reporting the monkey pox virus seems to be spreading more intently among gay men. As a result, the question now becomes how do we as a society address this risk?

Though not deadly—at least not yet—as the AIDS virus, those of us in the LGBTQ+ community of a certain age are still haunted by the early days of the AIDS pandemic as we watched members of our community suffer and die in unprecedented numbers because of who they loved while the world—and at times, even members of their own families, turned a blind eye to their suffering and death.

Memories of those dark days of ignorance, prejudice, fear and death remind us how easily this nation can slip into a nightmarish reality where human lives are dispensable and where good Americans easily step over the bodies of the expendable with less consideration than given to a wounded animal.

For Black members of the LGBTQ+ community the AIDS virus would become a double burden because as it spread from the gay community to the Black community its impact was also grievous and remains so in Black communities across the country.

At the crossroads

Can we meet the challenge of this new virus with the care and compassion we lacked during the early days of AIDS and work to educate and inform those now considered at highest risk? Or, do we revert to our old ways of homophobic biases and refuse to address the monkeypox virus with the urgency it deserves because it is impacting a community many believe undeserving of public health support.

I hope Americans will neither malign nor blame those in the gay community contracting monkeypox as they did those who fell victim to AIDS.

The future impact of monkeypox on members of the gay community remains unknown. What is known however, is that gay men now appear at greater risk for contracting the illness.

On the one hand the more this is discussed in the public square, the more likely the gay community will draw the ire of America's bigots and homophobes who will work overtime to ignite the flames of discontent and fear. But, we can not afford to remain silent.

We must educate members of the gay community to take precaution and we must ensure monkeypox vaccines become readily available to gay men.

Of course, this is just my opinion. I'm keeping it real.
