June Ballot Measures to Impact CSU System

The California State University faces serious financial shortfalls if two ballot measures affecting funding for university operations and construction are not approved by voters during this year's elections.

What is Proposition 111?

Proposition 111, officially entitled "The Traffic Congestion Relief and Spending Limitation Act of 1990" will appear on the June 5 California ballot. It gives voters the opportunity to amend the state constitution to modify the Gann state spending limit and allows the state to raise the gasoline tax and truck fees to fund highway improvement and mass transit projects.

What is the Gann Spending Limit?

How Does it Affect the State Budget?

In 1979, voters passed Proposition 4 which set a spending limit for California government based on state population growth and the national consumer price index. Since then, California's booming economic and population growth have far surpassed the state's ability to maintain services and programs under the financial restraints imposed by the Gann limit. In order to maintain today's level of services, the state budget needs to grow by about 7.7 percent. Under the current formula, state spending can only grow by approximately 6.9 percent.

How Would Prop 111 Affect State Spending?

Passage of Proposition 111 will permit the state budget to increase by about 8.7 percent by using a funding formula which more accurately reflects California's growth. This budget increase will parallel the rate at which the state receives revenues.

Why Is CSU Interested in This Measure?

To meet the educational needs of California residents, the CSU will need to grow. To support this growth, additional funding will be required. The passage of Proposition 111 will enable the state to provide more money to help the university maintain its commitment to a quality education for California's citizens.

How Will Proposition 111 Affect CSU?

CSU estimates that by the year 2005 its student population will grow by an additional 180,000 persons. Even today, the state is unable to fund all of the programs, services and facilities requested by the university to

BEWARE! "Dracula," portrayed by professional actor Dean Fortunato, arrives on campus tonight for the opening performance of the famous play in the University Theatre. The Count is shown here with Cal State student Edie Scriven, who plays his leading lady Lucy

"Dracula" Comes to Campus

A production of the original, 1927 version of the play "Dracula," based on the famous novel by Bram Stoker, opens tonight in the University Theatre. Considered one of the most haunting and sensual versions ever written, the play features Los Angeles-based actor Dean Fortunato in the role of Dracula. Fortunato has appeared in Los Angeles productions of "Romeo and Juliet," "Danny and the Deep Blue Sea," and has traveled to Israel for a production of the Greek classic, "Medean." His recent television credits include appearances on "China Beach" and "Doogie Howser, M.D."

"I wanted to go back to school and learn," said Fortunato, explaining why he auditioned for the part, and conduct and improve its educational activities. The university estimates that unless the state spending limit is raised, by the year 2000 the CSU will lose the opportunity to spend nearly $400 million which would otherwise be available for carrying out instructional programs.

How Will Proposition 111 Affect School & Community College Funding?

Under Proposition 98, California public schools and community colleges are guaranteed at least 40 percent of the state budget. The measure also allows that percentage to gradually increase. During the years when revenues exceed the state spending limit, rebates would be required to first go to schools and then to the public. In low revenue years, schools would be exempt from budget cuts. Proposition 111 would ensure that schools and community colleges continue to receive at least 40 percent of the state budget. However, in low revenue years, all state agencies, including schools, would share budget reductions equally.

Who Supports Proposition 111?

The CSU Board of Trustees has joined bipartisan leaders and organizations in endorsing Proposition 111. These include: the California Taxpayers Association, the California Chamber of Commerce, the League of California Cities, the California Manufacturers Association, the University of California, the California Community Colleges, Governor George Deukmejian and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig. The bill was authored by Senator John Garamendi.

What Other Legislative Issue Will Impact CSU?

The Higher Education Facilities Bond Act of 1990 also will appear on the June 5 ballot. Identified as Proposition 121, this measure will place a $450 million general obligation bond for higher education construction and equipment before the voters. If passed, CSU would receive approximately one-third of the revenue from the bond sales, which would go toward the 1990-91 and 1991-92 capital outlay program. The remaining two-thirds would be divided among the University of California and the community colleges. CSU's current five-year capital outlay budget is projected at $1.4 billion.

Passage of the bond issue is important to our campus because several planned facilities expansion projects, such as the John M. Pfau Library addition, expansion of the Physical Education Building and construction of the new Visual Arts Building, are contingent upon its success.

Informational Campaign Underway

In an effort to educate local voters on Proposition 111 and the Higher Education Facilities Bond Act of 1990, a steering committee has been formed on campus and a proposed action plan has been developed. The committee is chaired by Vice President Judith Rymer (University Relations). Within the next three months, the committee will conduct various campus forums to help explain these measures. Information also will be provided in upcoming issues of the Friday Bulletin, the Chronicle and special brochures.

why he wanted to work with students. "You learn a lot from being an example and teaching. It makes you reevaluate your way of working."

Bringing in professional talent is part of the Theatre Department's effort to create links with the professional world and to expose its students to more experienced actors, said Dr. Robert Yowell (Theatre Arts) who directs the play.

Young actors often don't understand that failure is "good," said Fortunato, who is a graduate of the Goodman School of Drama in Chicago. "It's a discovering process. Every night of rehearsal you need to take a risk and not be safe. And through these failures you are going to find little gems."

"I'm learning a lot about movement," said Edie Scriven, a resident of Grand Terrace and a senior at Cal State. Now in her fifth university theatre production, Scriven plays Lucy, the Count's leading lady. Even though Lucy is frightened by and cannot understand why she is having nightmares, "she is charmed by this man (Dracula) and sort of falls under his spell," said Scriven.

"I see Dracula as a very likable character, because of his dark side," said Fortunato. "Dracula has a sense of danger and mystery that draws people."

Evening performances of "Dracula" will be held March 9, 10 and 14-17, with curtain time at 8:15 p.m. A 2 p.m. matinee will be held Sunday, March 18. All performances will be in the University Theatre. Admission is $6 for adults; $3 for students with I.D. and senior citizens. Tickets may be purchased in Room 175 of the Creative Arts Building.

Due to the popularity of university theatre productions, it is suggested that tickets be purchased in advance. More information is available from the Theatre Arts Department at Ext. 5876.

CSU Announces Administrative Fellows Program for 1990-91

Nominations are now being sought for participants of the CSU Administrative Fellows Program. Now in its 12th year, the program is designed to strengthen leadership in the CSU administration by identifying and training selected academic, administrative and staff personnel who have demonstrated the potential to assume responsible administrative positions or succeed in positions with greater responsibility. The program is geared especially toward persons with disabilities, women and ethnic minorities to ensure equal opportunities for career development.

Fellows receive full release time from their college schedules and are assigned for the academic year to a host campus. The fellows are placed with appropriate executives on routine and special projects related to major academic issues. They are introduced to a wide variety of concerns related to academic programs, faculty, research, basic skills and skills assessment, and will work with staff in the Affirmative Action Unit of Faculty and Staff Relations in the Chancellor's Office. Fellows receive briefings from senior members of management, participate in seminars with selected officials and meet key members of the Chancellor's Office.

Nominees for the program must presently hold a regular full-time administrative or staff position within the CSU system or be a tenured or probationary member of the CSU faculty. While prior administrative experience is not required, it is expected that faculty members with an interest in the program will have had related experience by serving on a variety of campus committees.

Dr. J. Cordell Robinson (Academic Personnel) serves as program coordinator for Cal State, San Bernardino. "I'd like to encourage those at the department chair level, associate dean level and staff involved in the early stages of management to apply," stated Robinson. "We have not been successful in the past in attracting a large number of candidates. This year, we would like to promote the program as much as possible and encourage many to apply."

Two former administrative fellows speak highly of the program. Dean Beverly Hendricks (Humanities) participated in the program at Cal State, Long Beach during the 1981-82 academic year. "The program allows you to observe administrators at work first hand. It's geared to those who have a clear plan for career advancement in higher education administration," she said. "It gave me many kinds of experiences I needed, including the incentive to move forward in an administrative career. It's a tough year with many challenges, but it's a wonderful chance to test your mettle to see if you have the right stuff for administrative work."

Dr. Loreale MacPike (Humanities) participated in the program during the 1983-84 academic year here on campus. "I think it's a key experience for anyone who wants to go into administration," she said. "I think it is particularly useful for staff because it provides unique training that staff could not get any other way. My advice to fellows is that they work in the academic affairs areas if possible due to the availability of career options."

Both Hendricks and MacPike are willing to share their experiences with those interested in applying for the program. Hendricks may be reached at Ext. 5800. MacPike may be contacted at Ext. 5839.

The application deadline is Friday, April 6. Additional information and application packets are available from Robinson (Academic Personnel) in AD-109, Ext. 5029.

Library Celebration Features Maya Angelou

World-famous actress, author and civil rights activist Maya Angelou comes to Cal State on March 15 in conjunction with the John M. Pfau Library celebration of the addition of the library's 500,000th volume Renaissance woman Maya Angelou comes to campus on Thursday, March 15, as the John M. Pfau Library celebrates the addition of its 500,000th volume. Festivities begin at 3:30 p.m. with the unveiling of the milestone volume on the first floor of the library.

The John M. Pfau Library collection began in an office on Mountain View Avenue in San Bernardino in 1963 with fewer than 200 books. In 1965, the library opened on campus in what is now the Student Services Building. In 1971, the library moved to its present location with a collection numbering at about 200,000 volumes.

The campus celebration continues with a speech by Angelou entitled "An Evening with Maya Angelou" beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the university gymnasium. Angelou is a world-famous writer, poet, actress, dancer and singer. She is known particularly for her book "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" which won her a National Book Award nomination in 1970. She has been nominated for a Pulitzer Prize, a Tony Award and was an Emmy Award nominee for her role in the television miniseries "Roots."

A long-time advocate of civil rights, in the 1960s Angelou served as the northern coordinator for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference at the request of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Advance tickets are required for Angelou's speech. Admission is free to all CSUSB students, faculty, staff, Library Associate members and members of the Alumni Association with a complimentary pass obtained in advance. General admission is $5 for adults; $1 for students not attending CSUSB. Tickets and passes are available from the Associated Students Box Office.

A large crowd is expected for Angelou's performance. There are no guaranteed seats after 7:15 p.m. An autograph session will immediately follow her speech.

Lady Coyotes Close Books on Best Season to Date

by David Beyer, sports information director

Cal State's women's basketball team saw the curtain come down on what turned out to be a stellar 1989-90 season, losing to the College of St. Thomas 78-49 on Friday, March 2, at the NCAA West Region tournament in Moorehead, MN. The team came back to take the third place game with a 64-53 win over Colorado College the following evening

The Lady Coyotes finished the year with a 24-4 mark, the most wins ever in the history of women's basketball at the university. Cal State also established a new school record for consecutive victories by winning 22 games in a row before the setback to St. Thomas.

These outstanding accomplishments prompted first-year head coach Gary Schwartz to heap praise on his team. "At the beginning of the year no one expected us to do much of anything," said Schwartz. "But this group would not accept defeat after we dropped a few early games. I think the winning attitude and character of the team is evidenced by the 22-game winning streak.

"Sure, we would have liked to win the game against St. Thomas. But they were an outstanding team and very well-coached, not to mention physically gifted. Losing to a team of that caliber is no crime.

"I am proud of our team and hope that they come to realize just what a fine season they had," concluded Schwartz.

Annual Luncheon Honors Staff

The university's annual Staff Recognition Luncheon, honoring over 60 staff members celebrating five-, 10-, 15-, 20- and 25-year anniversaries with Cal State, was held Wednesday, Feb. 28.

H. Steven Prouty, Jr., (Academic Services) was recognized for 25 years of service to the university. Twenty-year service recipients included: Alma B. Gibson (Housing), Francis L. Lootens (Natural Sciences), Pat F. Maietta (Chemistry), Lawlis T. Pace (Services to Students with Disabilities) and Robert A. Schwabe (Institutional Research).

"I'm touched that so many of you have worked here for so long and have made so many contributions," said President Anthony H. Evans, who served as keynote speaker for the third annual event. "Each of you has made a difference at the university. I congratulate all of you for your splendid efforts here."

In commenting on the rapid growth of the university, Evans said, "Some suggest we are moving a little too fast. We all have a certain nostalgia for the past ... it is my hope that we will look ahead confidently to the future. I hope in the days ahead we all acknowledge that a healthy university dwells not on what it was, but on what it will become."

The luncheon was coordinated by the following members of the Staff Training and Development Committee: Jolene Armstrong (Personnel), Cath-
