Proposed State Budget Poses Economic Challenges

Governor Wilson's proposed $2.1 billion 1991/92 budget for the CSU system will mean economic challenges for our university as campus officials gear up for another lean budget year. "We expected next year's budget to be a problem and have already taken steps to adjust to it, but we never dreamed that we would face such a drastic budget shortfall," says President Anthony Evans.

In a news release issued Jan. 10 from the CSU Public Affairs Office, Chancellor Ellis E. McCune said, "This is a disastrous budget. We understand that the state is in a major financial crisis, but this budget is going to make it very difficult for us to carry out our mission. I will consult with the campus presidents and all key constituencies to determine how we can still provide a quality education to our students. We want to meet personally with the Governor and key legislators to make sure they understand the CSU's dilemma."

New Directions in Development

Aiming for a $400,000 cash goal, Cal State's 1990/91 Annual Fund Drive is well underway and several new programs geared to garner support for a variety of university programs and activities are being undertaken, reports Pamela Langford (Development).

Drawing on the success stories of several other area universities, Cal State is now seeking the support of parents of current students. This effort was launched last fall via a student-operated phonathon live from the President's conference room. "This year's Parents' Fund begins a tradition of support that will have a far-reaching impact on the quality of Cal State's programs," says Langford. "We ask for their help in meeting needs that simply are not covered by state dollars." To date, 521 parents have contributed $22,500. "Their responses have been very encouraging," continues Langford. "Four out of every 10 parents we've reached have made pledges to the Parents' Fund."

Bequests are another new direction for Cal State's development program. Last spring, a long-time San Bernardino resident and former Southern California Edison employee, Eva Mae Merchant, willed the university nearly $150,000 from her estate. These funds will establish an endowment that will generate scholarship awards for students in nursing and teacher education programs.

Currently, the university is seeking similar gifts through a special Planned/Deferred Gifts program. A private consultant, John C. Rowett, president of Price-Rowett Seminars, is heading up this effort. His expertise has aided our development program through the formation of a professional advisory board comprised of area attorneys and accountants, Langford notes. Rowett also is helping to educate our constituencies about other planned gifts, such as trusts, life-income annuities and estate-related gifts and their many tax advantages available to donors.

Significant individual contributions are another relatively new aspect in the development drive. At last fall's Silver Anniversary Gala, President Anthony Evans acknowledged the support of area developer and realtor Nicholas Coussoulis, who provided a generous pledge in support of the proposed new athletic facility slated for possible completion in 1994. This alum's gift, the largest cash pledge in the university's history, helped lay the foundation for state approval of this project. In fact, schematic plans for this facility were okayed just last week. (See "Construction Update" on Page 5). Coussoulis also provides $5,000 in scholarship funds each year geared to assist underrepresented minority students.

Other Cal State graduates are supporting the university through contributions to the Alumni Fund. "Just four-years 'young', this program is helping to build a relationship with former students that was virtually nonexistent a few years ago," notes Langford. "To date, we've reached nearly 28 percent of our targeted goal of $90,000 from this group. Not only have our efforts encouraged financial support from our alumni, but activities in this area help us learn more about our graduates and provide valuable insight on how they view their Cal State education."

Faculty and staff also comprise an important component of the Annual Fund program. "With nearly 78 percent of a targeted goal of $25,000 from this group already pledged primarily through payroll deduction, contributions from faculty and staff continue not only to provide valuable support for the university but encourage others to donate as well," says Langford. "Many of the nearly 200 faculty and staff members who made gifts last year know firsthand the budget shortcomings and growing need for private support." Within the next few weeks, faculty and staff will receive updated information on how they can assist the university's growing development program.

This year's development program also is being fueled by the success of last year's contributions. At the recent CSU Development Awards ceremony in Long Beach, our campus was recognized with the Gulliver's Cup honoring the greatest increase in corporate support — 1,065 percent. "The great leap in contributions last year is attributed to major gifts-in-kind valued at over $1

Reacting to the somber news from the Chancellor's Office, Evans held an emergency meeting with staff, faculty, student and union representatives on Friday, Jan. 11, to share initial plans in dealing with the budget crisis. "Next year's prospects are considerably more grim," says Evans. "We can expect uncertainty over the next few months. We will have to do things differently. I urge each of you to review all activities and programs."

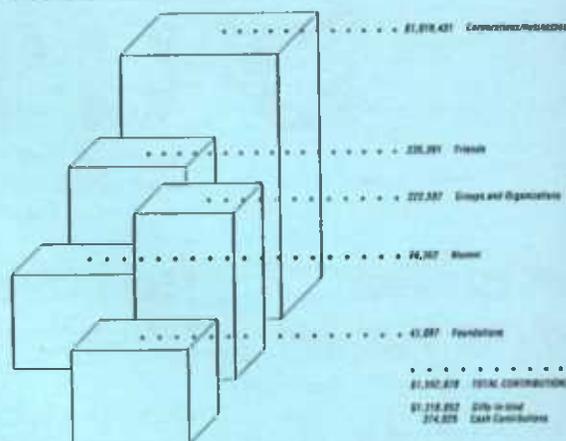

Uncertainty is the budget's key buzzword. "Right now, our position is to wait and see until more details are available to campus officials, but we must plan carefully to assure that there is no major erosion of quality in the university's academic programs," says David DeMauro, acting vice president for administration and finance. DeMauro explains that once the state budget is approved, officials in the Chancellor's Office will decide allocations for each campus in the system.

In response to the proposed budget, divisional vice presidents have held a series of campus meetings with their key personnel during the past two weeks to provide insight into possible impacts at the local level. As developments unfold, information on the budget crisis will be published in forthcoming issues of the Friday Bulletin.

The California State University, San Bernardino Friday Bulletin is published twice monthly. The next issue is scheduled for Friday, Feb. 1. Items for publication should be submitted in writing by noon, Friday, Jan. 25, to: Terrie Jo Snyder, editor, Public Affairs Office (AD-104) Ext. 5007 Vol. 25, No. 2 million, such as the $550,000 AT&T computing equipment secured by Dr. Yasha Karant (Physics) and the $50,000 IBM hardware gift negotiated by Dr. Jeff King (Philosophy)," says Dr. Judith Rymer (University Relations), who oversees Cal State's development program. "This type of support will become increasingly essential as we seek to equip laboratories, classrooms and faculty offices in our new buildings." For results of the 1989/90 fundraising campaign, see the graphic which accompanies this story.

With the many new directions for development at Cal State and in view of the current budget crunch, administrators foresee that the program will become even more important to the future growth and success of the university.

Annual Religion Lecture Explores Holocaust

Dr. Martin E. Marty, a Fairfax M. Cone Distinguished Service Professor of the History of Modern Christianity, is the featured speaker at this year's fourth annual Morrow-McCombs Memorial Lecture at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 28, in the Recital Hall. Marty's presentation, "The Horror of Holocaust: Annihilating the Inharmonious," is being sponsored by the Office of Extended Education. The free public lecture will be followed by a reception.

The Morrow-McCombs Memorial Lecture series is made possible through a special endowment in memory of Lilian Morrow and Ray McCombs to enhance and promote interfaith understanding between Christians and Jews. Call Ext. 5975 for additional information.

When the devil discovers that "being the devil is not all it's cracked up to be," he devises a scheme to improve his life, says Kathryn Ervin (Theatre Arts). A deal with the three brothers follows. If they succeed at making him experience any emotion from anger to joy, he promises them riches. But, if he can make them angry, his reward is to eat them. Written by Trinidadian playwright Derek Walcott, this humorous fable is suitable for children nine-years old and up, Ervin says.

Annette Collins of Redlands, a 24-year-old liberal studies major, plays Ti-Jean (pronounced tee-zhan). Unlike his older brothers, who are unduly confident about their intellectual and physical abilities, Ti-Jean is a friendly, humble boy of about 12 years old who admits that he's afraid and proceeds to enlist the help of his animal friends of the forest.

"At first I was very resistant about being in the play," says Collins, who was unsure about appearing in a production that featured the devil in a starring role. Erik Pfeifer, a 21-year-old history major from Antelope Valley, is cast as the devil. Both students wanted the challenge of these roles and believe that the experience has given them a greater appreciation for their religious convictions.

"I liked what Ti-Jean stood for," explains Collins, who occasionally teaches church Bible classes. "I'm very strong in my faith, and Ti-Jean is very strong in his." She adds that her "daily struggle is overcoming the evil in life."

While Pfeifer doesn't take what the devil represents lightly, he notes that he is enjoying the part, because it's different from the "nice" characters he often plays. "When you play a character like an evil villain, a lot of things that you've always wanted to say (to people) you can—not that I'm going to. It's kind of therapy in a way, I suppose," says Pfeifer.

Curtain time for all evening performances, which are scheduled for tonight, Jan. 26, 30 and 31, and Feb. 1 and 2, is 8:15 p.m. Sunday matinees begin at 2 p.m. on Jan. 27 and Feb. 3. Tickets are $7 for general admission, $4 for senior citizens and $3 for students. For tickets, call Ext. 5876.

University Joins Top Educational Group

The American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education (AACTE) has accepted Cal State as a member, reports Dr. John Dunworth (Education). "The AACTE is the major organization in the U.S. for leadership in teacher education," notes Dunworth. "AACTE will provide an invaluable resource and network for our faculty and programs in education and will be an important vehicle for CSUSB to impact the national agenda on teacher education." Dunworth, who served as president of the AACTE in 1975-76, notes that over 90 percent of all teachers in the U.S. are trained at AACTE institutions.

Contest to Name Library Online Catalog

The library's online catalog needs a name and members of the campus community are invited to submit suggestions and compete for a $75 Coyote Bookstore gift certificate, a prize cosponsored by the Library Associates, reports Buckley Barrett (Library).

Contestants may enter as often as they like. Forms are available at public service desks located on the first floor of the library or through the university librarian's office, PL-126. The submission deadline is Friday, Feb. 15.

Examples of catalog names from other universities include BISON, COAST, ORION and USInfo. Names or acronyms can be accompanied by logos, but trademarks must be avoided. The winning entry becomes university property. More details on the contest are available from Barrett at Ext. 5104.

Student Peer Committee Offers AIDS Education

A series of free seminars focusing on AIDS education are being conducted by Cal State's AIDS Peer Education and Response Committee, reports student Wanda Burns, president of the Health Science Club. Topics related to AIDS, such as communicating effectively, date rape, safe sex, drugs and alcohol will be addressed. Faculty and staff are encouraged to refer students to these seminars held bimonthly according to the following schedule:

Day	Time	Location
Tuesday	8:30-10:30 p.m.	Badger Hall
Wednesday	2-4 p.m.	Health Center
Thursday	10 a.m.-noon	Health Center

Additional information is available from the Health Center by calling Ext. 5341. These educational seminars also are open to faculty and staff.

Construction Update

Schematic plans for a new $24.3 million Health/Physical Education/ Classroom/Faculty Office Complex addition (top) and a new $15.6 million Visual Arts Building (bottom) received approval on Jan. 16 from the CSU Board of Trustees.

However, last November's defeat of Prop 143 will probably delay construction on these projects by approximately 12 months, reports David DeMauro (Administration and Finance). In addition to these two projects, that general obligation bond would have funded several capital outlay projects throughout the system if it had passed. It is anticipated that a similar bond measure will be put before California voters in 1992.

The future of Cal State's library expansion project seems a bit brighter. Governor Wilson indicated support for revenue bond legislation in announcing his proposed 1991/92 budget. These bonds do not require voter approval; they may be authorized by the Governor and state legislature alone. If such legislation is enacted, construction on the library project could begin in 1992.

Harpsichordist to Perform Mozart Selections

"The Music of Mozart" will be presented by Harpsichordist Phyllis Benson, adjunct professor of music, during a special concert commemorating Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart on Sunday, Jan. 27. The 7 p.m. performance will be held in the Recital Hall.

"Benson is a popular local musician who is highly recognized as both an accomplished pianist and harpsichordist," says Dr. Edward Bostley (Music). "This concert, featuring his (Mozart's) keyboard music, is particularly significant in that it may well be one of the first local performances to commemorate Mozart in this bicentennial year of his death."

Musical selections will include Mozart's "Fragment of a Suite," "Twelve Variations in B Flat on an Allegretto," "Sonata in A Minor," "Rondo in A Minor" and "Six German Dances."

Benson has performed worldwide and has studied with Rosalyn Tureck, an internationally acclaimed Bach performer, and with Oswald Jonas, the late noted Viennese theorist. She also has participated in master class work with pianist Karl Ulrich Schnabel and the famed Dutch harpsichordist Gustave Leonhardt. The winner of many awards, including the prestigious Theodore Presser Music Scholarship, Benson is listed in "The World Who's Who of Music." Locally, she shares her musical talents as a teacher at several universities and community colleges.

The concert is free to all Cal State faculty, staff and students. General admission is $5. Non-Cal State students and seniors will be charged $3. Call the Cal State Music Department at Ext. 5859 for ticket information.

Local musician Phyllis Benson performs "The Music of Mozart" on Sunday, Jan. 27.

Art Faculty Presents Exhibit Lecture Series

In conjunction with the current art exhibit, "Number 25 - A Retrospective: Twenty-Five Years of CSUSB Faculty Art," the Art Department is offering a free faculty lecture series designed to provide members of the campus community the opportunity to learn the philosophy behind the works of several faculty artists. Lectures will be held at noon in Room 110 of the Visual Arts Building, according to the following schedule:

Artist	Date
Leo Doyle	Monday, Jan. 28
Richard Johnston	Thursday, Jan. 31
Roger Lintault	Monday, Feb. 4
Don Woodford	Tuesday, Feb. 5
Sally Kovach	Monday, Feb. 11
Ting Lee	Tuesday, Feb. 12
Sant Subagh K. Khalsa	Wednesday, Feb. 13
Joe Moran	Monday, Feb. 18
George McGinnis	Wednesday, Feb. 20
Danny Redfern	Monday, Feb. 25
William Warehall	Thursday, Feb. 28

"Number 25" remains on display in the University Art Gallery through Wednesday, Feb. 20. Gallery hours are 9 a.m.-4 p.m., Monday-Friday; 6-9 p.m., Wednesday; and by special appointment. Information on the series is available by calling Ext. 5807.

HONORS

Dr. David Bellis (Public Administration) has been appointed by San Bernardino Mayor Bob Holcomb to serve on the Mayor's Ad Hoc Law Enforcement Commission. The commission will conduct a cost-benefit analysis exploring the issue of retaining the city police department or disbanding the department and contracting for city police services from the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department.

Dr. Beverly Hendricks (Humanities) and Dr. Richard Barnef (Humanities) have been selected to serve on the 1990-91 Riverside, Inyo, Mono and San Bernardino counties (RIMS) Visual and Performing Arts Task Force. The group currently is working on a $200,000 proposal for a California Arts

Project to be housed at Cal State by 1992. If funded, the project will provide in-service arts training for local teachers.

Dr. Nikolai Khokhlov (Psychology) will be honored with the California Psychological Association's Distinguished Humanitarian Contribution Award at a February convention in San Diego.

Tony Vilches (Library) was re-elected chairman of the City of Colton's Planning Commission on Jan. 8. A member of the commission since 1982, this is his third appointment as its chair. The commission grants variances from city ordinances and makes recommendations to the city council on rezoning and general plan amendments.

Editor's Note: HONORS is a new column of the Friday Bulletin designed to recognize Cal State employees who receive significant personal and professional awards and appointments. Such announcements were previously printed in the Community Service section. Submissions from staff and faculty are welcome. Due to limited space, the column will not include mention of grant awards. To share this news, please refer to the editorial box on Page 2 for submission procedures and deadlines. HONORS will be published periodically when sufficient information is compiled.

Computer Workshop Update

"IBM to Macintosh Connectivity," a free campus workshop geared to assist individuals increase productivity by sharing resources between these two computer systems, will be held from 10 a.m.-noon in the Student Union Building on Wednesday, Feb. 6. Open to all campus employees and students, pre-registration is requested via voice mail by calling the Computer Center at Ext. 3090.
