Student Concerns Over Ethnic Issues Will Be Pursued

Questions about the treatment of African-American students in certain classes, the hiring of more African-American faculty and staff, and the introduction of a requirement for all incoming freshmen to enroll in an ethnic studies course are among the concerns that Black Student Union (BSU) leaders have brought to the attention of university administrators in the wake of a protest over the alleged exclusion of African-American student groups from an awards program in June.

The concerns, outlined by the BSU in a memo received by Vice President Juan Gonzalez (Student Services) June 12, were discussed at the June 17 meeting of Administrative Council. Dr. Gonzalez indicated that he had personally met with several of the students who've come forward with these issues that they'd like addressed, and that he and other administrators, including President Evans, will continue to meet with the students throughout the next academic year.

Vice President Dennis Hefner (Academic Affairs) suggested that he and Dr. J.C. Robinson (Academic Personnel) might report to the students about minority faculty recruitment efforts and results at this campus. Hefner also said he would explore the current general education requirements regarding ethnic-related courses.

Migrant Summer Program Returns

PACE (Pursuit of Awareness through College Experiences) students Oralia Soto (left) and Elena Navarro take a biology class as participants of this year's Migrant Summer Program offered as a cooperative project between Cal State and the Riverside County Office of Education. The two-week residential program, held on campus this year June 19-July 6, strives to provide selected migrant students with a positive college experience, aims to increase students' academic achievements and works to establish a support system for participants and their peers. This year, 102 students participated in PACE.

Crime Prevention Tips for Summertime Campus Safety

Now that the summer session is underway and the campus is less populated, the Department of Public Safety encourages members of the university community to practice good crime prevention techniques, reports Quentin Moses (Public Safety).

"Summer is not the time to let our guard down on personal and property safety," says Moses. "Offices that are often left unoccupied, even for short periods of time, are prime targets for thefts. And because fewer people are around, crimes of opportunity are prevalent."

Prominent Citizens Join University Advisory Boards

Community leaders from throughout Cal State's service area will be sharing their expertise with university officials as members of the university and Coachella Valley Center advisory boards.

"The university advisory board is our primary means of gathering advice of prominent community leaders regarding our goals," says Dr. Juan Gonzalez (Student Services). He notes that specific types of advice might include the academic and training needs of the community and various development concerns. "We are honored that these individuals have agreed to share their expertise with the university," says Gonzalez.

Moses, who maintains crime statistics for our campus, notes that the majority of campus crimes are crimes of opportunity. These include theft of private property, such as bicycles, backpacks and books, and vehicular break-ins and thefts. According to Moses, while crimes of this nature may have a correlation to our campus' growth, they also reflect a statewide trend.

In an attempt to curb campus crime, the Department of Public Safety has implemented a number of prevention programs. A campus escort service is available to all students, faculty and staff. Likewise, members of the campus community may participate in Operation ID. This involves marking personal property with an identifying code such as your driver's license number. An engraver may be checked out from either the Public Safety or Housing offices.

Moses says that awareness is a key factor in crime prevention and he compliments members of the campus community for taking an active role in reporting suspicious activities. "Since I've been keeping the 'stats,' I've noticed an increase (in reports). People are now reporting things like stolen book bags, 'peeping-tom crimes' and auto theft and burglary."

Just recently, the Department of Public Safety distributed a new brochure on "Harassing Telephone Calls" to all campus offices complete with prevention tips on annoying or obscene phone calls. Moses stresses that reporting these incidents will assist campus police officers with their investigations. Another brochure on campus crime is forthcoming from Public Safety.

Moses says that increased visibility of campus police officers plays an important role in crime prevention. This fall, a new bicycle patrol program will be implemented based on a successful model now operating at San Bernardino Valley College.

Members of the campus community can assist the public safety staff with crime prevention by practicing these tips:

PROTECT PERSONAL PROPERTY

1. Watch your personal property and be observant of those around you, especially when making short trips to the copy or soft-drink machines.
2. Don't leave valuables in plain sight. Lock purses in a desk drawer or file cabinet.
3. Always lock your vehicle and park in a well-lit area. Don't leave valuables inside your vehicle. If you must, do not leave them in a visible place.
4. Note that the university assumes no responsibility for loss of or damage to personal property.

AVOID WALKING ALONE AT NIGHT

1. If you have a night class, make arrangements to walk back and forth with several classmates or fellow residents who may have classes in nearby buildings.
2. If it is absolutely necessary that you travel alone at night, stay on well-lit and well-traveled pathways.
3. Use the campus escort service to assist you during the evening hours. Escorts are available by dialing Ext. 5165 from any campus phone.
4. Be aware of campus emergency phones located at over 30 sites. These are housed in red or gray boxes and have a blue light above them. They provide a direct link to campus police should you need help or wish to report a crime. Simply open the phone box and lift the receiver.

REPORT CRIME IMMEDIATELY

1. Should you become a victim, report the incident as soon as possible by calling the campus police at Ext. 5911 or by using one of the emergency telephones. If you observe the perpetrator, note the description of the person, the suspect's vehicle, the direction the individual headed and other details.

2. When reporting the incident, tell the police where you are and wait at that location until the officer arrives.
3. If you are the victim of a sexual assault or any offensive act and wish to speak with a female officer, don't hesitate to voice your request. Arrangements will be made for you to discuss the incident with a female officer. Incidents of this nature should be reported to protect you and other members of the campus community.
4. Report harassing telephone calls. These incidents are increasing and your report will assist Public Safety personnel in their investigation. Calls originating on campus can be traced.

Campus safety is a university-wide responsibility. Plan for a safe summer. Remain alert and practice crime prevention tips.

On a Personnel Note

Back by Popular Demand...

The staff response to our recent CPR/First Aid training was so overwhelming that we will begin offering the workshop as a regular part of the Staff Training & Development Program. The next workshop will be held on Tuesday, August 6, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Alder Room. Participants will receive training in Adult CPR, Basic First Aid and Choking First Aid. Successful participants will receive a one-year CPR certificate and a three-year First Aid certificate from the American Red Cross. If you are interested in attending this informative training session, contact Jolene Armstrong (Personnel) at Ext. 5138. The workshop will be filled on a first-come basis. Enrollment is limited to 12 participants, so remember to sign up early!

For Your Information...

- Employees interested in having their position classification reviewed may submit their requests during the months of July and January. Request forms are available in the Personnel Office, SS-151.
- Limited funds will be available during the 91/92 fiscal year for Specialized Training. If you are interested in participating in an outside training activity, please submit your Out-Service Training Request Form early. Requests will be evaluated based on available funds, duration of the event, previous requests, current on-campus offerings and department support.
- Employees may request or be assigned an alternate work schedule if the schedule is better suited to meet the needs of the department, the university or the community. Utilizing flex-time schedules will result in utility savings, gasoline savings, a reduction in air pollution or a reduction in traffic congestion.

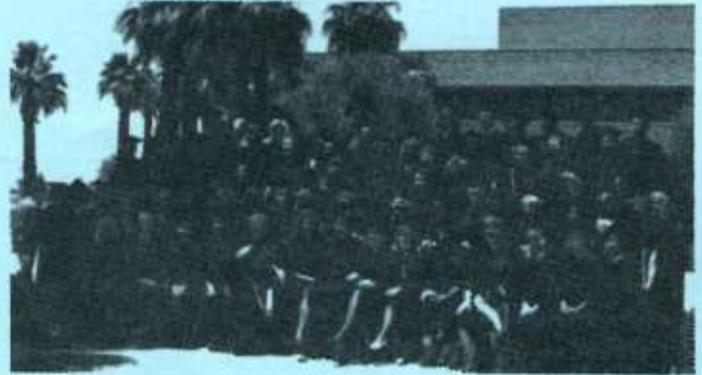

The Personnel staff wishes everyone a safe and fun summer.

New Face on Campus

A deep interest in conservation was not a requirement that Laura Sicklesteel (Duplicating Center) had to meet in landing her new position as supervisor, but it might help save paper and a little money during the current state budget pinch.

Appointed in mid-May, Sicklesteel works as the assistant to Jim Gooch, manager of the Duplicating Center. Sicklesteel's concern for the environment has motivated her to save paper, glass and aluminum, as well as use cloth rather than plastic throw-away diapers, and make her own baby food.

Sicklesteel, who began in the print business as a bindery assistant, worked at Color West Graphics in Santa Ana for eight years and took a year's maternity leave before coming to Cal State. She spent the last three years at Color West in middle management.

At the university, she will oversee all camera and pre-press work. The biggest adjustment in working for a state institution, says Sicklesteel, is that "you have to plan ahead" much more than you do in private industry.

Sicklesteel is married, has two small children and enjoys spending time with her family, gardening and baking.

Building Evacuation Procedures Under Development

If a disaster struck the campus, how would you know when to leave your office or classroom and where to safely go until the crisis subsided?

The question of mobilizing campus personnel during a crisis has been discussed often by members of the Emergency Operations Center (EOC) team, which meets monthly in the Health Center. Currently, a plan is under development to establish, for each building on campus, floor wardens who would be responsible for coordinating evacuations, reports Tony Ichsan (Environmental Health & Safety), a member of the EOC team. Approximately 50 people are being identified campuswide to serve as floor wardens, coordinators and alternates, he notes.

Beyond the written procedures, Ichsan says three pilot training sessions are being scheduled later this month and in early August for designated personnel in the Student Union, Health Center, Creative Arts, Faculty Office Building, Bookstore, Physical Sciences and Biology facilities. Emphasis on the evacuation of disabled persons will be covered in the training being given by Dr. Theron Pace (Services to Students With Disabilities) and Quentin Moses (Public Safety).

More information on the development of the evacuation plan will be reported as it becomes available. In the meantime, questions should be directed to EOC director Ed Harrison (Public Safety).

Pilot Program Secures Permanent Dial Position for Campus Radio Station

A two-month test run of a stereo broadcast signal for the campus radio station, KSSB, was so favorably received during April and May that the station was granted administrative approval in June to continue broadcasting at 106.3 FM.

Initiated by Professor Rob McKenzie (Communication Studies), the faculty advisor to the student-run station, the trial period was requested in order to collect data on the general community response to the station, which has a maximum one-mile listener range with the new signal. Previously the station was audible on radio only to cable television households that subscribe to an optional stereo radio service.

More than 300 telephone calls were noted in a two-week period during the trial run and McKenzie reports that, "Almost every call...involved a positive comment, most often in the form of a request for a song or band....One unanticipated audience," he notes, "was Cajon High School students."

Summarizing the benefits of the new stereo signal, McKenzie says, "The station is now providing a more practical training ground for aspiring broadcasters because they are receiving listener feedback for their on-air performances." Additionally, the station serves the need for campus information and entertainment, and KSSB helps unite the campus and present a positive image of the university to students and the community, he contends.

Popular Youth Group Brings Gospel Music to Campus

The Cal Poly, Pomona Youth Gospel Choir will appear on stage Wednesday, July 17, in the Lower Commons Plaza. The free, 7 p.m. concert is the second of six scheduled for this year's Summer Entertainment Series.

With some 40 singers and musicians gathered from area high schools, the choir has performed throughout the southland since its start in 1984. The Cal Poly, Pomona Youth Gospel Choir was created to demystify college life, encourage high school youngsters to go on to college and to promote academic achievement. That message has influenced better than 80 percent of the choir members, many being the first in their families to attend college.

Hot dogs and soft drinks will be sold during the performance, although alcoholic beverages will not be permitted on the concert grounds.

The Cal State Summer Entertainment Series is being sponsored by Cal State's Associated Students Inc., the Student Union, the Office of Extended Education and the Upward Bound Program. Other sponsors include the California Arts Council, the National Endowment for the Arts and NEC Business Communications Systems. For more information, call the Office of Student Life at Ext. 5234.

Staff Member Retires

Looking back on her 25 years of working in the President's Office, Mary Dye says her biggest joy and biggest challenge has been the great variety of people she has interacted with. Dye, who has worked as a secretary, administrative secretary and more recently, a presidential aid, completed her last day of service on July 10.

"I'm ready, eager and willing to retire," says Dye, "but I'll make a special effort to keep in touch with my campus friends and coworkers." Dye says the high points of her career have been the people she has worked with. "We really have a high quality staff here."

Retirement plans include "lots more birding" notes Dye, who explains that she's a "birder," formerly known as a "birdwatcher." Local and regional field trips in connection with her hobby of identifying and gathering data on a variety of species will only occupy part of her time. She plans to help her husband, Howard, with his commercial property management business, continue volunteer work at the county museum, explore more volunteer activities and perhaps travel to Mexico.

"I'll be busy," says Dye. "I still have enough vigor to enjoy myself. I look at retirement as an expanded activity. I think I'll thrive on it."

Construction Update

It's almost official. University Hall, the proposed name for the Classroom/Student Services/Faculty Office Building, may be approved by the CSU Board of Trustees at its July meeting. According to Vice President David DeMauro (Administration & Finance) all structural construction is complete and finishing work, such as floor coverings, painting and installation of electrical and plumbing systems, is now in progress. Tentative plans call for occupancy of second floor classrooms in September with a final completion slated for December.

In other construction news, work on the Foundation Building, which broke ground in April, is running about two to three weeks behind schedule due to a delay by the contractor in obtaining construction bonds. Currently, the structure is under construction for this tilt-up building. Soon, the walls will be poured on the ground and hoisted onto the frame with the aid of a crane. Occupancy is anticipated for the last week of September.

At the Coachella Valley Center (CVC), three new modular buildings will double the square footage of the satellite campus by the fall quarter. DeMauro says that CVC students are looking forward to having a student lounge and additional restroom facilities.

Back on the main campus, bids on the Student Union addition project came in over budget, and a Value Engineering Analysis is now underway to explore ways to reduce the cost of the project. For example, alternative finishing materials, such as floor tiles, may help keep the project within budget. This analysis will be complete in about three weeks. At that time, bids will be re-opened.

This month, a major renovation on the campus' electrical distribution system begins in support of the construction of the two new buildings. This campus-wide project includes the installation of underground electrical feeder cables and electrical distribution panels. DeMauro notes that members of the campus community will notice a lot of trenching and holes while this project is underway. "No, they're not from groundhogs," he muses.

Another project underway is a large addition to the Central Heating & Air Conditioning plant, necessary to provide heating and cooling capabilities to the new buildings. This renovation is anticipated to be finalized by November, 1992.

In mid-August, bids will open for the new School of Business Building. Construction on this $24,494,000 project is slated to begin in mid-October. Occupancy is anticipated in October, 1993.

The major renovation and addition to the John Pfau Library is pending approval of the governor's new budget as are funds for working drawings on the new Health & Physical Education Building.

French Professor to Retire

After 15 years as a faculty member, French professor, Dr. Vivien Bull (Foreign Languages, Liberal Studies), will retire as a full-time teacher at the university.

Bull, who earned her bachelor's degree from Cambridge University in England and her Ph.D. at the University of New Mexico, has served as sole coordinator of Cal State's liberal studies program for most of the last 11 years. It was under her direction that the first classes were offered at the Coachella Valley Center, today the university's largest off-campus program. This fall Bull will teach two courses, as well as one this winter, and is not yet sure whether she will teach in the spring.

A mother of six, Bull plans to spend time with family members who live in New Mexico. She also will visit England, her homeland, and perhaps write detective stories, a genre for which she has a predilection.

Summer Concerts Continue

Bluegrass and country music fans can enjoy the down-home, foot-stomping sounds of champion fiddler Laurie Lewis (above) and her Grant Street band at 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 24, on the Lower Commons Plaza, as the Summer Entertainment Series continues. Original lyrics and a tight backup band combine to entertain audiences of all ages. In 1990, Lewis' solo album, "Love Chooses You," won the "Best Country Album" award from the National Association of Independent Record Distributors.
