Inside: Loss of Corruption Case Spills into Race for SB County District Attorney

Wells Fargo launches $60 billion plan to increase African American homeownership

After years of moving and renting, novelist Randy Camp, recently became a first-time homebuyer at age 55.

"It feels good," said Camp, a resident advisor at a youth services agency in Des Moines, Iowa. "There's this idea of 'this place is yours, so now make sure you take care of it and enjoy it.' I also did it for my children. As I get older, I realize the importance of leaving an asset for them."

In an effort to make homeownership dreams a reality for others like Camp, Wells Fargo has launched a 10-year diversity initiative to provide $60 billion in home loans, supporting at least 250,000 African American homeowners by 2027. As part of the plan, the company also intends to significantly increase the diversity of its mortgage sales force.

Working with the National Urban League and the National Association of Real Estate Brokers, Wells Fargo announced the initiative Feb. 28 at the National Center for Civil and Human Rights in Atlanta.

The company aims to help reverse the decreasing homeownership rate in the African American community, said Brad Blackwell, head of housing policy and homeownership growth strategies for Wells Fargo.

Blackwell added that the company also plans to invest $15 million in a wide range of initiatives that promote financial education and counseling for African American homebuyers over the next 10 years. The company will also boost its recruiting, hiring, and retention of African American home mortgage officers, he said.

Year of transformation at Wells Fargo

In a letter published in the 2017 Wells Fargo Annual Report, CEO Tim Sloan had this to say about the past year:

"This was a year of transformation at Wells Fargo. We achieved a great deal in 2017 and look forward to building on our momentum in the months ahead. Our top priority remains rebuilding the trust of our customers, team members, communities, regulators, and shareholders. We have made foundational changes to identify and fix problems so they do not happen again and achieved significant progress in our commitment to make things right for our customers and build a better bank. Our transformation is grounded in our vision of satisfying our customers' financial needs and helping them succeed financially. While we have more work to do, I assure you that the Operating Committee and I are fully committed to building on our accomplishments. In addition, we take very seriously the consent order we entered into with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System in February 2018, and we will work diligently, yet swiftly, to meet the requirements.

In response to feedback from our team, we introduced a streamlined Vision, Values & Goals of Wells Fargo in late 2017 — replacing what previously was a 37-page expression of our culture. Today the wallet-sized booklet focuses exclusively on our guiding principles and goals, clearly expressing the beliefs that guide every team member as we work together to build the best Wells Fargo possible.

We have overcome challenges many times during our history. We have a solid foundation, exceptional businesses, and an outstanding team. Our more than 260,000 team members are dedicated, talented, and committed — and, without a doubt, they are our most important resource. Thank you for placing your trust in Wells Fargo and for your support. Our commitment to you is unwavering as we continue our transformation into a better, stronger company.

Protecting a Basic Human Right

I believe theologian and human rights activist Desmond Tutu, summed it up best when he reminded the world, “When people were hungry, Jesus didn’t say, ‘Now is that political, or social?’ He said, ‘I feed you.’ Because the good news to a hungry person is bread.”

In last week’s report, Hunger in the Inland Region, we noted that despite a growing economy, no less than ten percent of inland area residents experience food insecurity. Their despair has now collided with some dispassionate members of a U.S. Congress determined to strip food assistance from millions of hungry Americans, including thousands right here in the Inland Empire.

In the current draft of the 2018 Farm Bill, funding for the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) would place eligibility limits on some aspects of the program and eliminate other provisions like “Heat and Eat” that provide food subsidies to low income families with high energy bills. Contrary to the traditional bi-partisan approach to Farm Bill funding, the Republican Party decided to go it alone this year and excluded Democrats from the process of drafting the legislation.

The aggressive attack on food subsidies is contrary to the need as evidenced by data provided by the U.S. Department of Agriculture which showed 82 percent of all SNAP benefits go to households that include a child, an elderly person, or a non-elderly individual with a disability.

This begs the question: Why are food subsidies being attacked by members of a Congress where 41 percent of those in the House and 66 percent of Senators are millionaires? What can these representatives truly understand about the substance and impact of hunger and poverty on the lives of those who know it intimately when many appear more interested in currying favor with their wealthy benefactors, than addressing the needs of their moderate to low income constituents? Why is nutrition assistance for the nation’s most vulnerable subjected to the political whims of the privileged?

In mid-April, the House Committee on Agriculture passed the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 (H.R.2) which included funding cuts to SNAP on a partisan vote of 26-20. Now, as the bill awaits a vote by the full House, it is time to decide where we stand as neighbors of the vulnerable and as voters.

House representatives from the inland region must ask themselves who they were elected to represent—citizens in a state with the nation’s highest Supplemental Poverty Rate and a region where at least 10 percent of its residents suffer from food insecurity? Or, were they elected to do the blind bidding of a party, that in my estimation, has lost its moral compass on this and a number of other important issues.

Let your representative know where you stand on H.R. 2, by calling (202) 224-3121. To remain silent while children, elderly and the disabled may be left to forage for food in a nation of unmitigated wealth is to be complicit in this political travesty. People must be allowed to feed themselves in dignity—the right to food is a human right.

This is just my opinion. I’m keeping it real.

Select Riverside Students Awarded Free Laptops

Riverside – Six students at Longfellow Elementary School in Riverside were awarded laptops this week by inland area physician, Dr. Guillermo Valenzuela. The laptops were awarded as part of his 11th Annual TECH Scholarship Program. This year, nearly 4500 students participated in the program by submitting essays and artwork about the importance of attending college.

Congratulations! Benoit Malphettes

Riverside

Last week Riverside Mayor Rusty Bailey called upon Arts and Cultural Affairs Manager Margie Haupt to recognize Benoit Malphettes as the city's Arts Honoree of the Month.

A Riverside resident, the French-born photographer who is celebrated for his large format work, followed a childhood dream and permanently moved to America in 1977, eventually becoming a US citizen.

Recognized for his meticulous attention to detail and sense of drama, Malphettes gained international recognition with his work. His photography has graced an array of publications including the French & American Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, W, Glamour and Essence, among others.

As his commissions for personal and professional portraits became more and more frequent, Malphettes decided to purchase and revitalize one of America's most respected portrait studios, Studio Charis of Pasadena. For more than 18 years, the preeminent business and political elite of the West Coast and their families became his clients.

Over the years, his signature style and unique vision with an 8"x10" camera became widely recognized and his bold images helped elevate a number of major national advertising campaigns.

In 2016, Malphettes created a series of artistic portraits that were featured in the IE Voice's Merchants of Riverside Project. The portraits, which highlighted some of Riverside's unique and diverse small business owners, included an exhibit of large-scale fine art prints. The prints were displayed at the Riverside Art Museum during Small Business Week.

Since 2007, Malphettes and his wife, Katherine, have devoted their time to personal and community service artistic projects. His exhibition, Impressions of Blue Cut, Ruins/Renewal, was exhibited at the San Bernardino County Museum earlier this year.

Adelanto Corruption Investigation Expanded

Adelanto

When City Councilman and Mayor Pro Tem Jermaine Wright was arrested last November, the city of Adelanto became the latest inland region municipality to become embroiled in a corruption scandal.

Wright was not only charged with accepting bribes, he was also accused of asking an undercover FBI agent to burn down his restaurant so he could collect insurance payouts.

According to the complaint, Wright reached an agreement with an undercover FBI agent acting as an owner of a marijuana cultivation business to vote in favor of opening additional parts of Adelanto to marijuana growth in exchange for $20,000. Wright allegedly instructed the agent to make the payment through a third party and claimed that, "keeps us out of jail." For an additional $15,000, Wright later agreed to fast track the agent's marijuana business proposal. Although the money never exchanged hands in these cases, the agent later gave Wright a purported $10,000 payment for future assistance on council votes related to the business of marijuana.

Wright's reported misdeeds did not end there. In a separate plot, he sought to hire another undercover agent to burn down his restaurant so he could claim a $300,000 insurance payment. Wright has admitted the plot.

Last week while Wright's case works its way through the judicial system the FBI opened a new front in the Adelanto corruption case when it raided the home of Adelanto Mayor Rich Kerr, City Hall, a local marijuana dispensary and the offices of an attorney who represents the dispensary's owner.

Little information about the new raids was available because the warrants are under seal according to the FBI. The IE Voice will continue to follow this story.

Your Vote: Your Voice – How Voting can Impact Your Wellbeing

Tuesday, June 5, 2018 is California’s State Primary. Election Day is the day when Californians get to add their voices to their state and local elections. Democrat, Republican, Independent, Libertarian, or Declined to State, your vote is your voice, which is why all registered voters are encouraged to vote at your designated polling location.

Because voting is a right denied to many African Americans and millions around the world, it is only natural to have a sense of pride when you can cast your ballot. But beyond the mere satisfaction you may receive from helping select the next state lawmakers, voting also has some surprising health benefits. Here are a few ways in which voting can improve your (and your family’s) well-being:

1. Voting can make you happy: Being active politically has been linked with higher levels of happiness, likely because it makes you feel like you’re a part of a larger group of people who share similar views.
2. Voting ties you to your community: Voting brings everyone in your neighborhood together for a greater cause, which can strengthen your connection to those you live near. (It goes both ways: Those who feel close to their community are also likelier to vote.) Those feelings of inclusion can lead to a higher quality of life and reduce feelings of loneliness.

3. Voting generates inner peace: The act of voting has been shown to help reduce stress levels and the risk of developing common mental health conditions such as depression. That’s because when you cast your ballot, you often believe you are doing something that can make a real difference to your daily life.

4. Voting empowers you: When you vote, you feel more in control over part of your life. This can actually translate into feeling more control over other areas that may need improvement, such as eating better or exercising more.
5. Voting helps your kids, too: They may not be old enough to vote, but the majority of kids are aware of elections and believe their lives will be impacted by the results. Talking to your children about the issues and telling them that you voted can calm their fears and reassure them that you’re acting in their best interest. Plus you’re setting a good example so that when they get older, they vote as well!

Loss of Corruption Case Spills into Race for San Bernardino County District Attorney

Gail Fry
Contributor

The loss of the highly public criminal case brought under the direction of San Bernardino County District Attorney Michael Ramos along with support of the State Attorney General's Office against former county supervisors Bill Postmus and Paul Biane, former chief of staff for former county supervisor Gary Ovitt, Mark Kirk, former assistant assessor Jim Erwin and developer Jeffrey Burum for allegations of bribery and perjury regarding a civil court settlement has encouraged a challenger to enter the district attorney's race and fierce opposition to Ramos' re-election campaign.

Campaign advertisements from a Political Action Committee titled "Business Leaders for Fair and Ethical Government to Support Anderson & Oppose Ramos for D.A. 2018" obtained by The Voice/Black Voice News claim Ramos "wasted over $50 million of Taxpayer money on fake political prosecutions."

Ramos has countered Anderson as a "puppet" of the developer, Jeffrey Burum, who along with his co-defendants are "seeking $250 million from taxpayers" through lawsuits filed against the County of San Bernardino (county).

The dispute between the County of San Bernardino and the developer, Colonies Partners with Burum as managing partner, began in 2002, when Colonies Partners rejected the county's offer over constructing county flood control improvements on property it planned to develop in the City of Upland. Colonies Partners filed a lawsuit against the county.

On November 28, 2007, the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors approved a $102 million settlement of the lawsuit subsequently validated by San Bernardino Superior Court Judge W. Robert Fawke.

After an investigation in 2008, into wrongdoing at the San Bernardino County Assessor's office involving former county supervisor and then assessor Bill Postmus, assistant assessor Jim Erwin, assistant assessor Adam Aleman and intergovernmental affairs officer Rex Gutierrez resulted in criminal charges. In early 2010, Postmus and Erwin were arrested and charged with conspiracy to illegally influence approval of the $102 million settlement.

Postmus and Aleman accepted a plea bargain requiring them to cooperate in the investigation which included testifying in front of the grand jury as well as during the subsequent criminal trial.

After a grand jury was impaneled in 2011, new charges were filed regarding the $102 million settlement against Burum, Biane, Erwin and Kirk and by early 2017, two juries were impaneled to hear the criminal case.

SB County District Attorney Mike Ramos

Attorney Jason Anderson

On August 28, 2017, Burum, Biane and Kirk were found not guilty and a month later Erwin's jury announced it was deadlocked with the district attorney's office dropping the charges due to problems with witness testimony.

By early 2018, the unsuccessful prosecutions brought new lawsuits filed by the Colonies Partners, Burum, Erwin and Kirk against the County of San Bernardino for wrongful prosecution seeking a total of $250 million.

Now, San Bernardino County District Attorney Michael Ramos is scrambling as he faces a hotly contested election from a well-funded opponent, defense attorney Jason Anderson, and a primary election looming on June 5.

The Voice/Black Voice News reached out to both district attorney Michael Ramos and his opponent attorney Jason Anderson to obtain their views on the issues facing the criminal justice system in San Bernardino County.

In an interview with The Voice/Black Voice News, Anderson explained he worked at the DA's office from 1998 until 2014, where he started to see a "decline in the office in terms of the way it was managed and it was becoming more about statistics and politics and less about the people" when he left to pursue opportunities best for himself and his family.

Anderson explained he decided to run for the district attorney's office because he felt it could take a different direction after seeing the corruption case unravel as badly as it did.

Anderson shared how he considers former defendant Mark Kirk a friend and shared how he felt bad for him during the prosecution, was glad he was vindicated. He expressed his belief Kirk was innocent. Anderson also revealed he has known Attorney Stephen Larson, who represented Burum in the prosecution, for a decade.

Anderson explained he was aware people in the business community were going to be involved in the election against Mike Ramos regardless of who was running to try and prevent the incumbent from getting re-elected.

"I wanted to run a campaign being an insider from the DA's office—running in terms of what I thought the important issues were," Anderson voiced explaining, "And if they decided to help me, then they were going to help me."

On what he would change at the district attorney's office, Anderson responded, "I would like for cases to be evaluated on the simple standard of whether they can be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, not (sic) to have numbers that can be used as statistics to promote a political platform."

The recently released “Inland Empire Business Activity Index” reflected a positive growth trajectory for the first quarter of 2018, and the trend is expected to expand further throughout the rest of the year.

The report found the region’s business activity expanded by 2.2 percent in the first quarter, which was on par with U.S. GDP, which grew by 2.3 percent. However, when you look beyond the first quarter and include the entire year (first quarter of 2017 through the first quarter of 2018), the inland region significantly outperformed the nation—business activity in the Inland Empire grew by 3.8 percent compared to U.S. GDP growth for the same period of only 2.9 percent.

Commenting on these results, Robert Kleinhenz, Executive Director of Research at the Center for Economic Forecasting and one of the index authors said, “The Inland Empire’s economy is enjoying the same strong growth trends as the nation as a whole, but at an even more vigorous level – a circumstance that is being largely fueled by robust local job and population growth.”

Kleinhenz continued, “The Inland Empire is the fastest growing job market in all of Southern California, a trend that should continue over the foreseeable future as more households choose to settle in the region over the more expensive coastal counties in Southern California.”

Also, according to the report, the positive growth was spread across all local industries both large and small, and impacted every sector. Business activity is projected to continue its expansion at a rate between 2.5 percent and 3.5 percent in 2018. The positive growth will eventually be tempered by labor shortages in the area that will eventually result from the state’s high cost of living.

Record Number of Inland Area Families Claimed CA Earned Income Tax Credit

Riverside

A record number of local hard-working individuals and families have already claimed their CA Earned Income Tax Credit (CalEITC) and these numbers are expected to rise given the credit can be claimed after tax-day through the end of the year.

California has the highest poverty rate in the nation and CalEITC has proven to be an effective anti-poverty program.

“Collaborative outreach from advocates like CalEITC4Me and governmental agencies has resulted in record numbers of Californians benefitting from the Earned Income Tax Credit,” said Senator Richard D. Roth. “That’s a win for Inland Southern California and a win for our state. More money in the pockets of working families means more money is going back to local businesses.”

The statewide outreach and education campaign, CalEITC4Me, has worked to expand the cash back credit so that additional families, including self-employed workers who are eligible for the first time this year, can benefit.

The outreach efforts are proving successful. Recently released data by the Franchise Tax Board indicated 1.2 million Californians have already claimed their earnings—at least 68,111 in Riverside County. This represents a 299 percent increase over the previous year. As a result, nearly $18 million were returned to the pockets of Riverside County working families and individuals.

“The Earned Income Tax Credit, a cash-back program for hard-working people, has long been established as one of the strongest policy tools we have to fight poverty and make work pay better,” said Josh Fryday, President of CalEITC4ME.org. “Even though Tax Day is behind us, our work to fight poverty is just beginning. Most don’t realize that hard-working Californians can claim the Earned Income Tax Credit they’ve earned at any time throughout the year.”

Since 2016, CalEITC4Me has helped over a million families claim over $4 billion in state and Federal EITC.

Opening Doors - A Comprehensive Look

“Many states can no longer afford to support public education, the exorbitant costs that mass incarceration have created.”

S.E. Williams
Contributor

In mid-April, the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors voted to accept a special presentation from the non-profit organization, California Forward, on the county's participation in the organization's "Achieving Better Outcomes through Data-Driven Change" project that will reform the county's rehabilitation efforts in the area of criminal justice.

The effort began in August 2014, when the Board of Supervisors passed a resolution to assist public safety in the effective implementation of AB109, California's Public Safety and Prison Realignment Initiative. In partnership with California Forward's Justice System Change initiative the county is now focused on building a culture and capacity for data driven decision making and continuous evaluation and improvement in this regard. The collaborative effort is focused on the examination of rehabilitation efforts and programs that positively affect recidivism while also reducing costs associated with the criminal justice system.

There is little question the nation's application of criminal justice is ripe for such reform. Incarceration is one of the costliest elements of the criminal justice system in America. It is a system that has exploded by 500 percent in recent decades. In addition to the destruction of families and communities, it brought with it the added costs associated with building and staffing jails and prisons to meet the ever-increasing demand for incarceration.

While there is growing bi-partisan interest in addressing and reversing this trend, most communities, including the inland region, have lacked the data to lend meaningful understanding to trends embedded in incarceration data. A failure of analysis in this regard provided opportunities for plausible resistance to change since reality was obscured by ignorance of the facts.

Revelations laid bare through analysis of real data is an essential starting point. The San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors had the desire, made the commitment to engage in just such an effort and as a result, have started a process of change in partnership with the Justice System Change Initiative.

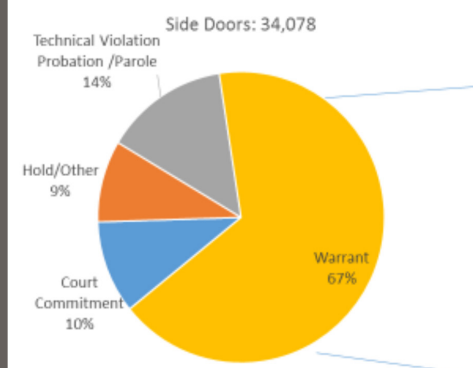

One of the first and most important steps in the process was the completion of a Jail Utilization Study which has provided an initial roadmap for transformation through the identification of key areas for further study and consideration. It looked specifically at who the offenders in local jails are, how they get there, how long they stay and how often they return.

The discussion and further examination of issues resulting from the analysis should eventually lead to policy recommendations that are rooted in objective reality and hopefully supported by a broad consensus of stakeholders.

To help organize variables in the jail population for maximum understanding and interpretation, the report organized local jail populations into major pathways or doors into and out of local jail facilities.

The examination considered those who entered through the Front Door or bookings for fresh arrests, and fresh arrests with warrants attached to the booking; Side Door entries or bookings for technical supervision violations, court commitments, warrants, and holds; Backdoor releases which upon exit, make it easy to identify sentenced and un-sentenced releases, as well as capacity releases; and finally, those who use the Revolving Door or individuals who recidivate for new

The Typical Day View: The jail population

The Average Daily Population (ADP) is the number of people admitted and how long they stay in custody for different types of crime and individual characteristics of the ADP are not the same as the booking.

For example, many alcohol-related offenses are so they may represent a large percentage of bookings, but not necessarily the daily population. Viewing the average daily population can see the composition of offenses that are in custody.

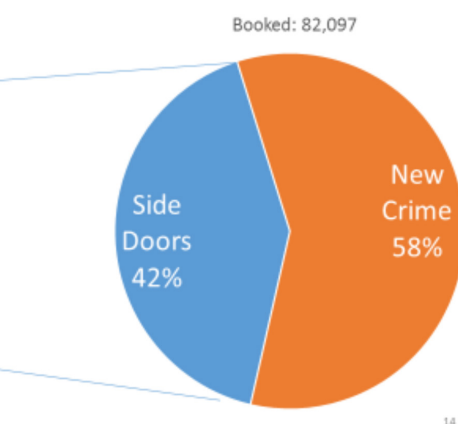

The percentage of side doors is 58% in custody as a result of being sentenced).

t do not greatly impact the average arage daily population allows us to at impact the jail on a typical day.

custody on a daily basis is 42%, of new crimes (both pre-trial and crimes and probation violations that also come through the side door.

A preliminary examination of those who entered and exited through those doors in San Bernardino County jails, revealed some very surprising information related to the average daily population, jail programming, the key variable of length of stay and the calculation of total bed days consumed by inmates. The assessment also looked at the impact of Proposition 47, California's 2014 Reduced Penalties for Some Crimes Initiative.

Following are some of the compelling findings revealed in the preliminary evaluation of 487,705 unique bookings over a five-year period from January 2010 to December 2015. The analysis involved 217,581 different individuals and included bookings at all four San Bernardino Type II facilities (authorized book and hold facilities for pretrial and sentenced individuals) and three Type 1 facilities (used for short stays).

- Almost 75 percent of the county's daily jail population during this period were pending trial
- Most new crime bookings, i.e. those considered front door bookings were drug or alcohol related
- 42 percent of all jail bookings did not involve a new crime
- Among the inmates released from custody within five days, fully 35 percent were booked into jail for drug or alcohol crimes and 30 percent were booked on a warrant
- Violent offenders return on warrants less frequently than non-violent offenders
- Drug offenders held in custody four days or more in 2015, spent more time in jail than offenders held for crimes on persons (including violent crime)
- Offenders who return to jail for violations, warrants or new crimes, used well over 5 million bed days in San Bernardino County over a five-year period

- 51 percent of all jail repeaters during the five-year study period were not for a new crime
- Subsequent to the passage of Proposition 47, felony drug bookings decreased by 67 percent, while on the other hand misdemeanor drug bookings increased by 45 percent

As might be expected, preliminary analysis of this jail utilization data identified a number of opportunities and challenges in the county's criminal justice system. The report identified several policy and practice changes that can be implemented quickly through what it identified as "modest investments" that can result in near-term savings. Other solutions will be more-costly but result in more substantive savings or cost avoidance that will reduce recidivism and jail usage.

Preliminary recommendations for change included but were not limited to a deeper examination of using jails for those arrested for misdemeanors or are guilty of misconduct or side door bookings i.e., warrants; consider more community-based custody and re-entry programs; maximization of pre-trial services such as own recognizance programs, a reduction in court proceeding delays and expedited court hearings; formalized the Justice Change initiative in San Bernardino County.

The January 2010 to December 2015 Jail Utilization Study's examination also looked at another area of special concern—jail use by mentally ill offenders and has called for the development of interventions to improve mental health outcomes and reduce jail time for these individuals. (Part 2 of this report will examine issues related to the arrests of mentally ill offenders.)

– Former Assembly Speaker and
Los Angeles Council President
Herb Wesson, Jr.

Antonio Villaraigosa is the only candidate for governor with a proven record in increasing access to affordable housing. During his time as Mayor of Los Angeles, Villaraigosa invested more than $1 billion to build over 21,000 affordable homes and over 2,600 homes for people that had been homeless.

During the Great Recession, Villaraigosa enacted policies to rebuild the local economy and get people back to work. With homelessness at a high and the middle class struggling, California needs a Governor who is a proven leader and committed to our community.

"I also want the office to be transparent in two ways," Anderson shared. "I want it to be transparent in terms of the resources spent on cases so that the public understands where their tax dollars go."

Currently more serious cases are taking a lot longer than they need to because there are not a lot of resources devoted to the bulk of the cases that fill up the system, he explained and described a death penalty case going on for 14 years as an example.

Anderson said he favors bail reform where the court considers other factors besides money bail to decide whether to release a defendant prior to trial and favors pre-filing diversion in certain nonviolent or possession of drugs crimes.

With regard to officer involved shootings, Anderson explained he wants to take away public skepticism, "The one thing I would propose on that would be to have the DA's office have their own officer involved unit so it is independent of law enforcement."

Regarding public corruption Anderson voiced, "I think the public integrity unit as it exists, would have to focus on making sure municipalities within the county continue to operate for the people they represent."

"No matter who is involved you can't look the other way, it erodes the trust of people, sets up a different standard and you can't have a different standard," Anderson voiced.

"It's a government agency, it needs to be above board and out in the public, the taxpayers are footing the bill and being most directly affected by the DA's office because they are living in the community where prosecutions are occurring."

"I hopefully have a very good track record of the last 21 years in the legal community, on both sides, as a prosecutor and even as a private attorney now," Anderson said, "I feel very strongly in what I'm doing in terms of restoring integrity and fairness in the process."

"I understand the most powerful law office in the county of San Bernardino is also the largest—the San Bernardino County District Attorney and it needs to have a steady, non-political hand to administer what the mission of that office is in the correct way and that is why I am running," Anderson concluded.

In an interview with The Voice/Black Voice News, Ramos explained he could not talk about the Colonies case because it's still a "legal issue."

"I can just tell you and I have said before it was never anything political and everything to do with evidence," Ramos said. He further explained how the case went before a grand jury, the State Attorney General was a partner in the prosecution and the Federal Bureau of Investigation assisted in the investigation.

According to Ramos it was a very tough decision to prosecute and he truly believes to this day, "We did the right thing. I think we changed the political climate of corruption in San Bernardino County. No longer do you have this big cloud of corruption over the county."

Ramos continued, "These folks were contributors of mine, (sic) it doesn't make sense that it was for politics for me to go after people that were supporting me."

"But I also made a commitment to the public even if you support me, I can't turn my head to things that were occurring," Ramos said accepting full responsibility for it even though he didn't do the investigation or legal analysis. "They want more millions from us and I think it's wrong and I have full confidence we are going to be successful."

Ramos opined his opponent is being funded by "them" and alleged Jason Anderson didn't decide to run for DA until the jury verdicts were announced.

"Jason is their puppet, I will say that and I have said it publicly," Ramos said and revealed, "That's why I am running again, because I can't let those individuals buy justice, buy the DA's office. They are raising close to a million dollars and mailing out hit pieces."

As to issues facing the criminal justice system, Ramos claimed rehabilitation is really important because that means less crime and less victims. The DA's office is involved with the San Bernardino County Re-entry Collaborative Group Initiative.

Three weeks ago, Ramos created a prevention and intervention unit to help not only prevent crime on the front-end but on the back-end intervention can help get these people back into the community.

Ramos touted a program where the district attorney's office visits elementary schools emphasizing education, saying no to drugs and sharing how to stay away from gangs while involving parents. He claimed, "We have touched thousands."

"We hold gang members responsible for serious and violent crimes," he noted. Ramos also believes

Inland Empire Native Dr. Daniel E. Walker Receives Honorary Doctorate

Claremont

On Saturday, May 12, Claremont Graduate University (CGU) bestowed an Honorary Doctorate Degree on Inland Empire native and internationally acclaimed scholar, filmmaker, and social entrepreneur. Dr. Daniel E. Walker.

Walker was recognized alongside innovators Kim Stringfellow and Zubaida Bai, as part of the university's 91st commencement ceremony. According to CGU's Interim President, Jacob Adams, the faculty and trustees selected Walker because his "perspectives and contributions have profoundly shaped and benefitted our world." Walker was also selected and delivered the commencement address to nearly 3000 attendees.

A proud son of the City of Fontana who began his educational career through the Head Start program, Walker was elected Senior Class President of Fontana High School's Class of 1985. He is celebrated as an arts innovator and public speaker whose works span the fields of history, film, television, digital archives, education, theater, and social justice advocacy.

Walker's contributions are prolific. He is the author of the acclaimed book No More, No More: Slavery and Cultural Resistance in Havana and New Orleans, writer/director of the films When Roosters Crow, The Ten, Sol Brothers, and Let's Have Church, a producer on KCET's Emmy Award-winning series Artbound, and founder/director of the Long Beach Indie International Film Festival, a global showcase for diverse stories and storytellers.

A Professor of History at El Camino College in Torrance, Walker also serves as the founder/curator of the Gospel Music History Archive at the University of Southern California Digital Library and Board Chair of the BLU Educational Foundation, a national leader in the quest to increase the college graduation rates of students of color.

For more than a decade, Walker served as a research associate at the University of Southern California's Center for Religion and Civic Culture and for more than two decades he's produced some of the most important works of Honduran playwright Rickerby Hinds, Director of Playwriting at the University of California, Riverside. His exhibit How Sweet the Sound: Gospel Music in Los Angeles, co-curated with Tyree Boyd Pates, is currently on display at the California African American Museum.

Commenting on the honorary degree and his selection as commencement speaker, Walker said, "Receiving an honor like this really speaks to CGU's commitment to the arts and humanities as global forces for positive change. Growing up on a dirt road just a few miles east of CGU I never dreamed that something like this could ever happen to a guy like me. I am humbled and honored by the recognition."

if a gang member has turned his life around, he supports a sunset on gang affiliation.

"I think that will take some legislation because they are going to have to come up with criteria to remove them from the California Database," he added.

About bail reform, Ramos said, "We need to keep the dangerous people in custody until their court hearings (sic), however, I think we need to fix the system because there is a two-tier system based on the ability to pay.

"I am proud to say we are at the table with the court where we can put special courts together—drug courts, homeless courts, mental health courts, Veterans courts; we totally support those convicted of misdemeanors that really need a chance."

Ramos touted a pre-trial diversion program called RISE where he claims to have helped 1,451 defendants in two and a half years where less than one percent reoffended.

With regard to juvenile defendants, Ramos said, "I am telling you the juvenile process is key; it's all about diversion and prevention and locking kids up is not the answer."

Ramos pointed to reductions in arrests for driving under the influence, in serious and violent felonies because of the good job they are doing, while also admitting to a slight increase in drug crimes, which they are working on.

GAVIN'S CALIFORNIA PROMISE

Gavin Newsom believes education is a lifelong pursuit that begins when babies are still in the womb and doesn't end until we've done all we can to prepare them for a good-paying job and the world of work. That means focusing on prenatal care and early childhood education, creating full-service K-12 community schools, increasing college affordability and access, and creating pathways to quality jobs. California's public school teachers and educators have endorsed Gavin for Governor because they know he's the right choice for our kids.
