Silencing Dissent in the Golden State

Earlier this week I had lunch with a friend who asked me what I thought about the recent attempts to block conservatives from speaking at UC Berkeley. Earlier in the year the school had canceled an event featuring conservative speaker Milo Yiannopoulos and just this week Ann Coulter announced she would not deliver a speech on campus after two of the groups initially sponsoring her appearance cited safety concerns and fears of violent outbreaks as two of the reasons they withdrew their support. My answer to him was that if we as a society cannot listen to dissenting views then how do we challenge our own ideas? How do we become better thinkers and better leaders? "[T]he practice of listening to opposing views is essential for effective citizenship," President Barack Obama said of similar student protests when he was in office. "It's essential for our democracy."

The silencing of dissent has been a topic of discussion among my friends as well as in the media - part of a national debate on the polarization of politics today. Take for example the recent battle in Sacramento to pass SB1, the largest gas tax increase in state history. The only Democrat in the Assembly to vote against the legislation was Rudy Salas of Bakersfield, who represents parts of the Central Valley. He stated in an opinion piece:

"The families I represent drive too far to jobs that pay too little. Families have to drive further to buy groceries; further to take their kids to school and drive even further to get to work. Driving is not a choice but a way of life for us because we do not have the mass public transit options that exist in other parts of the state."

We know that families in the Valley make less and travel more than people in other areas of the state that have higher wages and access to subways, light-rail and mass transit systems.

I truly believe that I stood up for the single mom working two jobs to get her kids through school, the hard-working men and women who are trying to make ends meet to raise their families and for the seniors and the disabled who live on fixed incomes.

Because SB 1 imposes rather than asks Californians how and to what extent we should invest on our roads, I could not in "good conscience" to my heart and to the families I represent, vote for a life-altering measure that does not at least ask them to weigh-in.

I know sometimes the unpopular thing is the hardest thing to do. But, I believe we must give a voice to those who are voiceless and I must put my faith in our democratic process."

For his reasoned and thoughtful dissenting vote, Assembly Speaker - and fellow Democrat - Anthony Rendon, stripped Salas of his position as chairman of the Business and Professional Committee. A former Assembly member from that same community told their local news outlet, that the punishment is "...another example of an independent legislator paying for a principled vote." Salas agreed in a tweet, "Some days it's hard to keep your commitments. Today is one of those days. #KeepingyourCommitment #Repercussions #RemovedfromCommittee."

In March I attended an event hosted by UC Riverside's School of Public Policy and featuring Speaker Rendon and Assembly Minority Leader Chad Mayes. The pair's budding "bromance" had been the topic of several newspaper articles and they fielded questions from the audience on how the leaders of the opposition parties are working together to solve the state's problems. ## Point-in-time Count Finalized

San Bernardino—The final version of San Bernardino County's point-in-time count, completed last week, confirmed the preliminary numbers from January, and a slight but notable decrease in the area's number of homeless people.

The report tallied 1,866 homeless people across the county. Fifth District Supervisor Josie Gonzales, who also serves as Chair of the county's Interagency Council on Homelessness, shared her concern regarding the number of unaccompanied homeless women in the county. January's point-in-time count identified 284 unaccompanied homeless women.

"What is disheartening is the increasing population of unaccompanied homeless women. The sub-population far exceeds others including homeless youth and veterans," she said. Results also indicate many of these unaccompanied homeless women fall into the category of chronically homeless, many of whom suffer from disabling conditions and were either homeless in the last year or experienced at least four episodes of homelessness within a three-year period.

This year's point-in-time count also revealed an increase in the number of chronically homeless individuals in the county.

Last month, San Bernardino County announced plans to launch the first-ever homeless program aimed solely at the needs of unaccompanied homeless women and, in the process, became the first municipality in the nation to do so.

Trump Resistance Continues

Riverside—Hundreds of thousands of Americans, including many in Riverside County, took to the streets in protest on Saturday and demanded the president take purposeful action on the issue of climate change.

Nearly 300 marches and rallies took place across the country—a indication that resistance to the president and his agenda has remained strong throughout his time in office. They were timed to mark his first 100 days in office, and to show dissatisfaction with the environmental protections the president and his lead at the Environmental Protection Agency, Scott Pruitt, continue to roll back.

Citizens across the nation and around the world fear that such continued action by the president, with the help of his cabinet, will do such damage to the environment that long-term negative consequences may result, including even more violent weather and a continued rising of the oceans. # Women Leading the Way—Breaks Princess Culture with Exhibition

Shiane D. Jacocks
Contributor

On Sunday, May 7, San Bernardino Valley College will host the 2nd Annual Women Leading the Way event.

This free event will focus on historical contributions of women involved in science, technology, engineering, arts, and math (STEAM). This enriching and exclusive experience will feature conversations with STEAM experts, an exhibition and live performance of historic events, video gallery, and special presentations.

This edu-tainment event is a salute to inspire and motivate girls to seek non-traditional careers in science, technology, engineering, arts, and math. “I believe we are what we see,” said Cynthia Frazier, Founder of Mobile Commerce Digital Technology Alliance. “What is a girl to do when she doesn’t see herself in a career field?”

Peggy Orenstein, author of Cinderella Ate My Daughter, tackles that question too. Orenstein researches and dissects the obsession of the princess culture, which causes girls to believe beauty is all that matters. In a world where a woman running for president is either sexualized or referred to as a “b***h” for being unapologetic and confident, it is no wonder girls have a hard time reaching for careers beyond the traditional.

In an April 21 press release, the organization stated, “women continue to advance in education and the world of work. Yet, [despite] these advances, women still lag behind in non-traditional fields.”

At this special event, honorees will share personal stories regarding what it takes to be successful in areas where women are underrepresented. In addition, a monologue tribute from the play Ashbury Tree, about Henrietta Lacks, written five years ago by the late Richard O. Jones, will be presented by Martha Brantley Jackson, Director, and Monica McMurty, actress.

Attendees will have an opportunity to watch history magically transformed into life by local students and adults. This is an event for youth, parents, educators, and business and community leaders, and offers an excellent opportunity for children to be inspired by these remarkable women in history, the present, and future.

The event will be held at San Bernardino Valley College, 701 South Mt. Vernon St., B100 (Lot 11), San Bernardino, CA 92410 on Sunday, May 7 from noon to 4:00 p.m. You can register on line at www.womenleadingtheway.eventbrite.com or by email mcdfounder@gmail.com.

Aided by Strong Winds, Wildfires Burn Across the Inland Region

Riverside

On Sunday, several wildfires raged across the inland region fueled by strong winds. They included the Jameson, Opera, and Rosa Fires in Riverside County, and the Tower Fire in San Bernardino County.

The Jameson wildfire was reported around 6:30 p.m. in the hills of Temescal Valley in Riverside County. It burned about 15 acres and set some palm trees ablaze in the 23200 block of Jameson Road.

The Opera Fire started at about 3:45 p.m. at the intersection of Opera Loop and East Palmyrita Avenue in the community of Highgrove. CAL FIRE/Riverside County firefighters responded to reports of a vegetation fire in a field near that location. When responders arrived on scene, the fire was approximately 30 acres in size, burning in light fuels and spreading rapidly toward radio towers on Box Springs Mountain.

At 6:45 p.m., there were reports of drones flying in the area, impeding the department’s ability to fight the fire. CAL FIRE reminded the community: “If you fly, we can’t,” and asked that the drones be grounded immediately. It is illegal to fly drones near active wildfires.

By 9:50 p.m. Sunday, the fire had grown to approximately 1,350 acres and was 25 percent contained. In addition, approximately 40 homes were threatened by the fire. At least 150 fire fighters continued to battle the blaze.

By mid-morning Monday, the fire was 60 percent contained and no longer provided any threat to structures.

Another fire erupted Sunday in the unincorporated area of Temecula. Labeled the Rosa Fire, it started around 2:00 p.m. in avocado fields with an abundance of thick vegetation.

According to the Riverside County Fire Department, the fire burned about five acres and involved more than 100 firefighters. Fire officials reported air crews dumped retardant around the perimeter fire and it was fully contained by 6:30 p.m.

San Bernardino County had its own conflagration to deal with Sunday, when a wildfire burned along both sides of the 15 Freeway in Cajon Pass.

Help Fight Medicare Fraud – Prevent Identity Theft

Identity theft is a serious crime that happens when someone uses your personal information without your consent to commit fraud or other crimes.

Personal information includes things like your name and your Social Security, Medicare, or credit card numbers.

- Don't give your personal information to someone who calls or comes to your home uninvited to get you to join a Medicare plan.

Give personal information to only:

- Doctors, other health care providers, and plans approved by Medicare.
- Any insurer who pays benefits on your behalf.

Trusted people in the community who work with Medicare, like your State Health Insurance Assistance Program (SHIP) or Social Security.

- Be familiar with how Medicare uses your personal information.

If you join a Medicare plan, the plan will let you know how it will use your personal information. Medicare fraud wastes a lot of money each year and results in higher health care costs and taxes for everyone. Con artists commit Medicare fraud by getting people's Medicare number. You can fight Medicare fraud with a few simple steps:

- Never give your Medicare number to get a free offer or gift.
- Always check your Medicare statement for errors, like equipment or services you never got.

Protect your Medicare by protecting your Medicare

- Ask questions. You have a right to know everything about your medical care including the costs billed to Medicare.
- Educate yourself about Medicare. Know your rights and know what a provider can and can't bill to Medicare.
- Use a calendar to record all of your doctor's appointments and what tests or X-rays you get. Then check your Medicare statements carefully to make sure you got each service listed and that all the details are correct. If you spend time in a hospital, make sure the admission date, discharge date, and diagnosis on your bill are correct.
- Be wary of providers who tell you that the item or service isn't usually covered, but they "know how to bill Medicare" so Medicare will pay.
- Don't be influenced by certain media advertising about your health. Many television and radio ads don't have your best interest at heart.

Fulbright Fellowships Awarded

Riverside

Last week, three scholars in humanities and social sciences at the University of California, Riverside were awarded Fulbright U.S. Scholar fellowships.

The scholars include Heidi Brevik-Zender, associate professor of French and comparative literature, Derick Fay, associate professor of anthropology, and Ajay Verghese, assistant professor of political science.

The fellowships will support their research on the role of women in 19th century French architecture, the relationships between conservation, law, and resource rights in South Africa, and whether increasing socioeconomic development is causing a decline in religiosity in India, respectively.

In 2017-18, Brevik-Zender will be a visiting professor at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, where she will do research for a book project exposing the role of women in 19th century French architecture.

Fay plans to return to South Africa, where he has conducted extensive field studies since 1998. As a Fulbright scholar, he will investigate the relationships between conservation, law, and resource rights represented in the 2012 trial of three fishermen arrested in the Dwesa-Cwebe Nature Reserve.

Verghese, a political scientist, will spend a year in India determining whether increasing socio-economic development is causing a decline in religious belief but an increase in religious practice, a form of secularization that is distinct from the Western world.

Established by legislation in 1946, the Fulbright Program is considered the leading international education exchange program sponsored by the U.S. government. Its goal is to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and people of other countries. Each year, it awards nearly 8,000 new grants. It is sponsored by the U.S. State Department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. Today the program operates in more than 150 nations.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Court Blocks Attempt to Withhold Funds from Sanctuary Cities

Sacramento-Last week, a federal judge in California issued a nation-wide block against any attempt by President Trump to withhold funds from sanctuary cities, which choose not to cooperate with the immigration officials.

According to the court, Trump has absolutely no authority to attach such conditions to federal funds. Therefore, the court issued the preliminary injunction in two separate lawsuits, one brought by the City of San Francisco and the other by Santa Clara County. Both jurisdictions sought to push back against the president's executive order that targeted communities who chose to protect its residents from deportation.

In his ruling, the judge stated, "Federal funding that bears no meaningful relationship to immigration enforcement cannot be threatened merely because a jurisdiction chooses an immigration enforcement strategy of which the president disapproves."

The injunction should remain in place until the lawsuits work their way through the courts.

La Sierra Pipeline Construction Update

Riverside

According to the Western Municipal Water District (WMWD), work on the La Sierra Pipeline Project is set to begin.

The $36 million project is designed to provide locally sourced, drought-proof drinking water to agency customers. It includes the placement of five miles of 30-inch pipe underground, along La Sierra Avenue. It will connect two desalter facilities - Chino Desalter and Arlington Desalter - to the La Sierra Tank.

According to WMWD, the Chino Desalter will increase its water production by 3,500 acre-feet per year, and production capacity at the Arlington Desalter is also expected to increase largely as the result of a new 5,400 horse-powered pump station. Desalter facilities are used to reduce the salinity of water for human and animal consumption.

The connection between the two desalter facilities and the La Sierra Tank will facilitate the delivery of the added water supply to 80,000 WMWD customers.

WMWD said it is limiting construction hours to 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. to avoid noise during early mornings and late evenings. Motorists are advised to expect some traffic interruptions along La Sierra Avenue during the construction period; officials recommend seeking an alternate route when possible.

The project is funded by a grant from the Federal Bureau of Reclamation, and agency within the U.S. Department of Interior that oversees water resource management, and the agency's Water Reliability Fund as earmarked in its existing rate schedule. As a result, the project is not expected to increase rates currently charged to customers.

The pipeline is expected to take nearly eighteen months to complete. To learn more about the pipeline, its construction, and/or to view a short video on the La Sierra Pipeline Expansion visit wmwd.com/432/La-Sierra-Pipeline-Project.

25 Remarkable Teens Shine in the Riverside Community

Shiane D. Jacocks

On Tuesday, April 25, the Riverside Youth Council held this year's ceremony for the 25 Most Remarkable Teens at City Hall. Parents, relatives, and other loved ones gathered downtown to watch their children be recognized for their achievements and hard work.

Of the 100 who applied, these 25 students, nominated by mentors, family members, or teachers, received an award of achievement. Schools represented included La Sierra, Arlington, Norte Vista, Encore Performing, and Woodcrest Christian High School, and the California School for the Deaf.

One of the teens recognized at the ceremony was Nathaniel Colbert, Sophomore at Riverside STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math) Academy High School. On December 13, 2016, Colbert became an Eagle Scout, the first African American in his Boy Scout Troop. An Eagle Scout is the highest achievement attainable in the program of the Boy Scouts of America (BSA).

Colbert, since the age of seven, has been working toward this achievement. This is a huge accomplishment, which only four percent of scouts ever attain. Colbert also serves as a Patrol Leader, to reinforce patrol methods and set goals for peers. Another way he has demonstrated leadership is through Tae Kwon Do, where he is a part of the Black Belt Team, Action Team, and is a junior instructor volunteering his time to teach the form and principals of Tae Kwon Do.

24 other remarkable students were recognized at the event for their volunteer work, excellent grades, and passion. These students, challenged

A MATTER OF CHOICE

CALIFORNIA'S TUMULTUOUS
RELATIONSHIP WITH CHARTER SCHOOLS

PART 1 OF 4

S. E. Williams
Contributor

The National Alliance for Public Charter Schools reported more than 400 new public charter schools opened during the 2015-16 school year, adding an estimated 250,000 students to the charter school movement.

There are now more than 6,800 public charter schools across the country, with an estimated 2.9 million students. Over the past six years, these schools sustained a six-fold growth rate, and charter school growth has been most expansive in the state of California.

Enrollment in Charter Schools, 2000-01 through 2015-16

Source: Data for 2000-01 through 2013-14 are from the U.S. Department of Education, National Center for Education Statistics, Common Core of Data, Public Elementary/Secondary School Universe Survey. Data for 2014-15 are collected from each state's departments of education. Data for 2015-16 are estimated from prior-year data and calculated average growth rates (see methodology).

California led the nation in public charter school growth in 2014-15. That year, the state added 87 new charter schools and 34,500 charter school students. In 2015-16, California again led the nation in charter school expansion, adding 80 new charter schools and 36,100 students. That year, California's total public charter school enrollment reached 581,100 students at 1,234 charter schools.

Unlike traditional public schools, public charter schools are not monolithic in management nor approach to education. From a management perspective, charter schools can be independent, single-site schools or be part of a network of schools run by a management organization. Such organizations, identified as charter management organizations (CMOs) are typically non-profit. In addition, some states, including California, allow for-profit companies to manage charter schools, identified as education management organizations (EMOs).

The National Alliance for Public Charter Schools (NAPCS) reported that of the more than 6,800 charter schools operating nationwide, nearly 60 percent are independent schools. Of the remaining schools, about two-thirds are managed by CMOs, and one-third by EMOs.

According to the NAPCS, CMOs and EMOs play an important part in the scalability of the charter school movement because they enable the replication of models that work. This not only creates economies of scale, but also encourages collaboration between similar schools. California leads the nation in CMOs.

Charter schools now educate nearly ten percent of California's 6.2 million public school students. As these schools engage larger segments of the K-12 population, the push and pull between traditional public schools and charter schools has intensified.

This year, there are several pieces of legislation aimed at the charter school industry, fostering debate between the two educational systems.

The California Teachers Association (CTA) is the force behind one major piece of legislation, Senate Bill 808. SB808 would limit the ability of charter schools to open new campuses or renew existing agreements by requiring approval to operate from local school districts only. The legislation would also limit the appeals process that would be utilized if a charter school is turned down by a school district. The California Charter Schools Association is opposed to this legislation.

Although SB808 is the most controversial piece of charter-school-focused legislation being considered this session, two other pieces of legislation are making their way through the state assembly—Assembly Bill 1360 and Assembly Bill 1478, which have raised concerns in the charter school community.

AB1360 would establish new regulations regarding suspension and expulsion from charter schools, and would prevent charter schools from requiring parents to volunteer for school activities. On April 26, AB1478 passed from the Assembly Committee on Education to its Committee on Appropriations.

Last year, the legislature considered a similar measure, SB322. It successfully passed the Senate, but was reportedly defeated in the Assembly due to pressure from the California Charter Schools Association.

Charter school supporters claim the measure curtails their autonomy, while the opposition claims the measure permits charter schools to utilize discriminatory enrollment and disciplinary practices.

The final measure, AB 1478, is rooted in the application of conflict of interest laws to charter schools. It would ban charter school board members from having any financial dealings with the schools on whose boards they sit.

The charter association has argued the legislation would seriously harm the financial viability of their schools because so many of them rely on loans and/or property leases from board members.

This measure moved successfully from the Assembly Committee on Education to the Assembly Judiciary Committee on Thursday. Simultaneously, a separate and opposing measure, SB806, supported by the charter schools' association, is also winding its way through the Senate.

The aim of SB806 is to allow members who sit on charter school boards to provide financial assistance to their schools. The measure successfully passed out of the Education Committee, but failed its first hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee last Tuesday. However, it was granted reconsideration.

Charter Schools by Management Type, 2015-16

"Charter schools get overwhelmingly positive press and make a lot of claims about their success. But actually, numerous studies confirm that their achievement is indistinguishable from that of traditional public schools. Some are very successful, some are troubled and struggling, and the rest are somewhere in between just like traditional public schools."

- Change.org

This year's charter school legislation demonstrates the ongoing tension between traditional public school advocates and charter school supporters, though both, according to experts, are focused on the same goal: educating the state's children.

When America's first charter school law was passed in Minnesota in 1991, it established three basic values for this system of education: choice, opportunity, and responsibility for results.

This idea and belief in the possibilities it offered would eventually be embraced by the nation. California enacted the second charter school law, the Charter School Act, in 1992. By 1995, more than nineteen states had embraced and adopted the charter school legislation. Today, 43 states and the District of Columbia have charter schools in place.

California's Charter School Act initially capped the number of charter schools permitted in the state at 100, but that limit was soon dissolved. The impetus to transition from traditional public schools was enhanced and accelerated as traditional public schools continued to falter in students' educational success and as campus infrastructure deteriorated, particularly at many inner-city campuses.

Over time, more parents felt their children were trapped in failing and crumbling traditional public schools and charter schools appeared to offer a vibrant, creative, innovative approach to education that many believed had been lost in the traditional public school environment.

Charter schools gave parents something they longed for regarding their children's education—choice. Many charter school proponents also theorized that competition would naturally evolve between traditional public schools and public charter schools, which would lead to better a educational experience for all children. Next week, The Voice/Black Voice News will explore whether, after more than twenty five years, the implementation of charter schools delivered on that promise.

by diversity and struggle, also found solace in extra-curricular activities, and do not let adversity stop them. The Riverside City Council took note that these teens have a bright future, and that when they reach their goals, the Council hopes that they will come back home to share their talents and aspirations.

The event shined a light on how these students, who successfully balanced school, relationships, and extra-curricular activities, are on the right track as they look toward the future. Colbert plans to pursue a degree in Computer Science and later start his own business where he can help young gifted adults pursue their dreams in the field of computer technology. ## Changing How Sex Offenders are Registered

Sacramento

Newly proposed legislation, SB421, could change the way sex offenders are registered in the state of California.

Under current law, all sex offenders are registered for life, regardless of severity of the crime. SB421 seeks to change that and establish a three-tiered registration system based on the type of offense a sex offender has committed.

Each tier has a different requirement for the number of years an individual would be required to remain registered. Offenders placed on Tier 1 or 2 would remain on the registry for ten to twenty years, while Tier 3 registrants would be required to remain on the registry for life.

The bill would also provide an opportunity for offenders to petition to be taken off the registry. To do so, however, an offender must be on the registry for at least one year before petitioning local law enforcement to be removed, before forwarding the petition to the district attorney's office for removal.

Many inaccurately believe the sex registry is a recent phenomenon. Although it has evolved over the years, it had its beginnings in the late 1930s. In 1938, the Los Angeles Police Department opened its Bureau of Sex Offenses. The agency kept records, fingerprints, and photographs of people convicted of sex crimes, and operated a clinic to conduct psychiatric evaluations of those arrested on sex crime charges.

Senator Scott Wiener (D-San Francisco) introduced SB421

Two years later, the City of Los Angeles implemented a sex crime division. It was followed several years later by the County of Los Angeles. Then in July 1947, the California legislature added Section 290 to the state Penal Code, which required anyone convicted of any of a list of sex crimes to register with local police.

SB421 is still in the very early stages of the legislative process. Last week it had a hearing before the Senate's Public Safety Committee.

said it's time for civil debate. "Instead of focusing on winning," he explained, "we must work to build a basis of understanding." I guess Speaker Rendon forgot that he agreed on that point.

According to a recent Pew Research Center poll, Americans are more comfortable listening to opposing views if their political perspective is the strong majority. Clearly the Golden State is not like the rest of America. President Harry Truman once said speaking on "the principle of silencing the voice of opposition," that it has only one way to go. And that way is oppressive, tyrannical, and undemocratic.
