PUBLIC NOTICE

Final Environmental Impact Report/ Final Environmental Impact Statement and Section 4(f) Evaluation Approved for Interstate 10 Corridor Project

WHAT IS BEING PLANNED?

The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) is proposing to improve Interstate 10 (I-10) by constructing freeway lane(s) and other improvements through all or a portion of the 33-mile long segment of the I-10 from the Los Angeles/San Bernardino (LA/SB) County line to Ford Street in San Bernardino County. The I-10 Corridor Project (I-10 CP) consists of a No Build Alternative (Alternative 1) and two build alternatives (Alternatives 2 and 3). Alternative 3 was selected as the Preferred Alternative. Implementation of the build alternatives would reduce congestion, increase throughput, enhance trip reliability, and accommodate long-term congestion management of the corridor. The project is currently expected to be open to traffic in year 2025.

WHY THIS NOTICE?

The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and Caltrans have approved the Final Environmental Impact Report/Environmental Impact Statement (FEIR/EIS) and Section 4(f) Evaluation, pursuant to Division 13, California Public Resources Code, 42 U.S. Code 4332(2)(C) and 23 U.S. Code 327 and 49 U.S. Code 303.

WHAT IS AVAILABLE?

The FEIR/EIS and the related technical studies are now available for public review from May 22, 2017 to June 21, 2017. It is also being distributed to applicable state, regional, and local agencies, as well as those who made substantive comments on the draft version or requested a copy.

Exceptional Leadership Under Pressure

As a second-generation alumna of California State University, San Bernardino who started my teaching career and gained my early experiences in community leadership on that campus, I have been enthusiastic and supportive of President Tomás Morales' leadership and stewardship of one of our region's most important assets. He has proven to truly be the multidimensional leader needed to lead a 21st century university who is accountable to the myriad of stakeholders that make-up the complex constituencies of a modern institution of higher education: from students, faculty, staff and the board of trustees to alumni, donors, legislators, and community and business leaders. He has been an advocate for the predominately first generation ethnically diverse student population, a regional collaborator, and responsive to the surrounding community's needs.

As a former tenure-track professor at another university, I have witnessed the adversarial world of shared governance and the fragile nature of the faculty-administration relationship. So when I learned of the CSUSB faculty senate's decision to pursue a vote of no confidence in the leadership of its president, I understood the dynamic. We recently experienced similar issues at the University of California, Riverside, my other alma mater, with similar complaints: the administration has "abandoned long-standing shared governance practices" and is "failing to involve the university community in key decisions." While that is how the senate resolution reads and what senate leadership is quoted as saying in local newspapers, I see a different motivation. None of the number of senate resolutions posted on the university's website since 2013 show concern about campus climate and morale until June of 2015 when three resolutions are passed in a two week span after the firing of the senate-supported provost.

June 16, there is a call for the reinstatement and retention of Provost Andrew Bodman;

June 26, a rebuke of President Morales for firing the provost;

June 29, a request to Chancellor Tim White for assistance in assessing and addressing potential issues.

It seems to me the "campus climate and morale" problems are more about the firing of the provost and less about maintaining "an educational environment where student learning is central."

I took a look at the results from a graduating class survey taken the same year and those students overwhelmingly felt they were leaving the university committed to life-long learning and wanted to pursue higher degrees. They felt they grew significantly both intellectually and personally, and 86 percent felt a sense of camaraderie and collegiality. That sounds far from the campus of toxicity outlined in the resolution.

Chancellor White agrees. "The campus is thriving: graduation rates, student retention rates, tenure-track faculty and fundraising are all moving in a positive direction. Achievement gaps have narrowed. Education colleagues and community leadership overwhelmingly view your campus, your work and the leadership of your president as an uplifting force," he stated in a strongly worded open letter to the CSUSB campus community after the faculty senate's 21-15 vote of no confidence.

In a letter sent to the campus community a day prior to Tuesday's vote, President Morales addressed the inaccuracies in the senate resolution, many of the issues, he noted, were addressed in his message to the senate sent earlier this year outlining the meetings with faculty groups, department chairs, and staff and professional growth and development initiatives his administration has held since the release of the faculty's campus climate study the year before. "Shared governance is clearly embedded in our actions and decisions. Our achievements could not have been accomplished without the contributions of the faculty senate, ASI and

An Environmental Victory

Washington, D.C.-Last week, the U.S. Senate failed to repeal a rule established by the Department of Interior under the Obama administration aimed at reducing methane gas emissions. The rule was designed to prevent nearly 180,000 tons of methane gas from entering the atmosphere each year.

Methane, a potent greenhouse gas, when released into the atmosphere, traps heat at 25 times the rate of carbon dioxide. Nearly a third of the nation's methane emissions result from gas and oil drilling.

The U.S. House of Representatives voted to repeal the rule earlier this year and the Senate was expected to follow suit. Surprisingly, however, Republican Senators Susan Collins, Lindsey Graham, and John McCain joined Senate Democrats and voted to defeat the legislation by a margin of 61-49.

First Latino to Serve on Riverside County Board

Shiane D. Jacocks
Contributor

On May 9, Governor Jerry Brown appointed former Assemblymember and Majority Leader V. Manuel Perez to the Riverside County Board of Supervisors.

This appointment will initiate Perez as the first Latino to serve on the Board, a change reflective of a county that now consists of a majority Latino and other ethnicities.

“We applaud Governor Jerry Brown for having the vision to appoint Manuel Perez to the Riverside County Board of Supervisors. Manuel Perez has an outstanding record of public service to both Imperial and Riverside Counties,” stated James Ramos, Latino Caucus of California Counties President and San Bernardino County Supervisor. “I am confident he will be a great advocate for the diverse communities that make up the 4th Supervisorial District of Riverside County.”

When the appointment was announced, Governor Brown highlighted Perez’s accomplishments as chief government and public affairs officer at Borrego Health since 2015, serving as an Assemblymember in the California State Legislature from 2008 to 2014, and as serving Director of Community Health and Advocacy at Santa Rosa Del Valle-Borrego Health from 2004 to 2008. Perez also earned his Master’s in Education, Administrative Planning, and Social Policy from the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

The Latino Caucus of California Counties expressed their endorsement of Manuel Perez in a letter to the Governor in January of this year.

Luis Alejo, Latino Caucus Vice-President and Monterey County Supervisor said, “Perez is the face of a growing Latino community in Riverside County and his leadership is needed now more than ever on the Board of Supervisors. He will be someone that can make sure all voices are included at a time when immigration and healthcare are under attack by our federal administration.”

Perez will complete the term of Riverside County Supervisor John Benoit who passed away last December.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Local Councilmember Indicted

Beaumont-Another inland region official was indicted Friday, this time in the City of Beaumont. City Councilmember Mark Orozco was charged with nine counts of perjury rooted in allegations that he falsely identified campaign funds on a disclosure document required by the Fair Political Practices Commission, Form 460. Form 460 requires politicians to disclose the names of campaign contributors, the amount received, and how the money is spent, including who received money from the candidate. Orozco’s bail is set at $25,000. If convicted, he could serve up to 13 years in prison.

Prepping for Your Colonoscopy

If you shudder at the thought of having a colonoscopy, a test to check for hidden colon cancer, chances are it's the "prep" that's stoking your apprehension. It's certainly a major inconvenience: getting ready for the procedure takes much longer — an average of 16 hours, according to one study — than the three hours or so you'll spend at a medical center the day of your colonoscopy. But what's most off-putting is the purgative part: taking a powerful bowel-clearing substance and coping with the resulting diarrhea.

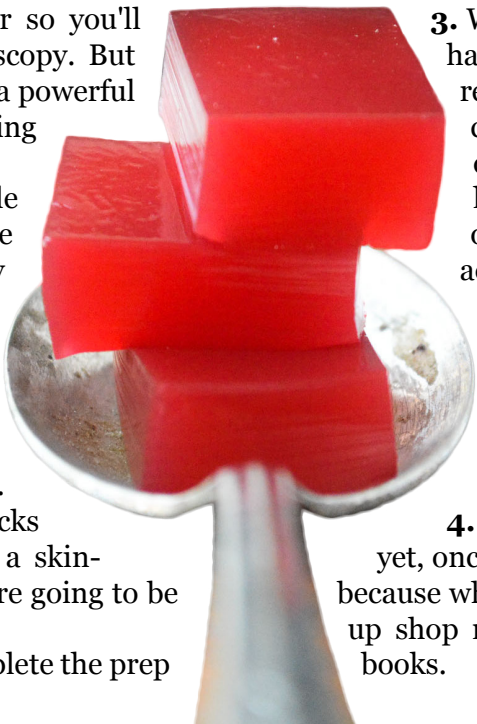

Preparing for a colonoscopy may be uncomfortable and time-consuming, but it needn't be an ordeal. Here are some things you can do to help it go as smoothly and comfortably as possible:

1. Make sure you receive your colonoscopy prep instructions well before your procedure date, and read them completely as soon as you get them. This is the time to call your clinician with any questions and to buy the bowel prep she or he has prescribed. Pick up some medicated wipes (for example, Tucks or adult wet wipes with aloe and vitamin E) and a skin-soothing product such as Vaseline or Desitin — you're going to be experiencing high-volume, high-velocity diarrhea.
2. Arrange for the time and privacy you need to complete the prep with as little stress as possible. Clear your schedule, and be at home on time to start your prep. If you have children or aging parents who need attention, have someone else be available to them while you're indisposed.

3. Water can get boring, so keep a variety of clear liquids on hand. On the day before your colonoscopy — when you're restricted to clear liquids — you can have popsicles, Jell-O, clear broth, coffee or tea (without milk or creamer), soft drinks, Italian ice, or Gatorade. To make a bad-tasting liquid prep like magnesium citrate easier to swallow, try one or more of the following if it doesn't come flavored: add some Crystal Light or Kool-Aid powder (again, not red, blue, or purple); add some ginger or lime; drink it chilled; drink it through a straw placed far back on your tongue; hold your nose and drink it as quickly as possible; quickly suck on a lemon slice after you finish each glass; hold a lemon or lime under your nose while you drink; suck on a hard candy after each glass.

4. Wear loose clothing, and stay near the bathroom. Better yet, once the preparation starts to work, stay in the bathroom — because when the urge hits, it's hard to hold back. Consider setting up shop near the toilet with music, your laptop, magazines, or books.

Former Voice News employee, Doreen Ayala-Brooks, died suddenly at the age of 46. Her funeral was at Mt. Rubidoux SDA Church and she was buried at Riverside National Cemetery last week. On July 4, 1970, Doreen Ayala-Brooks was born to Jose Ayala and Nilda (nee Pacheco) Ayala, at Brooklyn Hospital in New York City. She was the youngest of three children.

Her family moved to Puerto Rico when she was six months old. Growing up, Doreen was so skinny that her nickname was "Olive Oyl," a character from the cartoon Popeye.

In 1978, her family returned to Brooklyn. After graduating from high school in 1986, Doreen worked part-time and attended college at Kingsborough

Community College in Brooklyn. She majored in Travel and Tourism. Doreen also worked for a few years as a Dental Assistant.

In 1991, while working part-time as a clerk on Governors Island, U.S. Coast Guard military base in New York, Doreen met her future husband, Glenn, whom she fondly referred to as "Papito." Glenn was serving on Active Duty in the Coast Guard. Doreen and Glenn dated until 1993, when Glenn was discharged from the Coast Guard, and decided to return to California along with his son, Hasaan, from a previous marriage.

In 1994, after engaging in a long-distance relationship, Doreen and Glenn decided it would be best if she moved to California. She left her family and friends in New York City and slowly adjusted to the laid-back lifestyle of California, so unlike the fast-

Inland Region Bids Farewell to Beloved Colleague and Friend

San Bernardino

Residents of the Inland Empire were saddened to learn of the loss of Dr. Albert Karnig who passed away last week.

Dr. Karnig was a pillar of the region at large. He served on The Community Foundation’s Board of Directors (Board) for 13 years. Those who worked with him on the Board agreed Dr. Karnig served with compassionate wisdom and always provided thoughtful input for the benefit of The Community Foundation and its mission.

Sean Varner of The Community Foundation confirmed: “The value of his contributions to the Board have left a legacy in our organization and he will be missed, not only for his professional presence, but, more importantly, as a friend. Our thoughts and prayers go out to Marilyn, the Karnig family and all his friends who mourn this profound loss to our community.”

Dr. Karnig also served as President Emeritus of California State University, San Bernardino (CSUSB) where he held the position of University

President from 1997 to 2012.

Remarking on this loss, current CSUSB President Dr. Tomás D. Morales said, “Dr. Karnig was a central figure in the history of our university and remains a vital part its legacy of academic excellence and community outreach. His 15 years of leadership as CSUSB’s third president helped this institution grow in size, scope and direction, all while making a concerted effort to maintain the close, cordial environment of a smaller school.”

Dr. Tomás shared that Dr. Karnig was committed to diversity and worked to ensure the university not only attracted students of color, but also helped them stay in school and graduate; many became the first in their families to earn a college degree.

In conclusion, Dr. Tomás stressed, “None of us who knew or were influenced by Al will ever forget him, and his passion for this university, its students and this community will continue to inspire us.” A memorial service/celebration of the life of Dr. Karnig was held Thursday, at the CSUSB’s Coussoulis Arena.

Inland Seniors Join Sacramento Rally for Repair of a Shattered Support System

S. E. Williams
Contributor

Last week, seniors from all over California and their advocates rallied at the State Capitol in Sacramento to make their voices heard by legislators on issues important to the state's aging community.

Inland Empire seniors, sponsored by a San Bernardino seniors organization and led by Maricela Ferguson, journeyed by bus to participate in the event. They were joined in their effort by the Honorable Cheryl Brown, a newly appointed member of the California Commission on Aging (Commission), who was also a key speaker at the event.

Approximately 5.1 million persons aged 65 and over called California home at the close of 2015, and the aging Baby Boomer population is expected to grow that number to 8.4 million by the year 2030. In addition, as the state becomes more ethnically diverse, there is certain to be increased demand for service that is also culturally competent.

Each year, Senior Rally Day serves as a catalyst, bringing together the state's aging community and its advocates to push state legislators to continue efforts to establish and maintain the rights of this vulnerable demographic.

A 2015 report by the Senate Select Committee on Aging and Long Term Care, A Shattered System: Reforming Long-Term Care in California, noted that seniors, their families, caregivers, and state and local governments frequently find themselves caught in "a costly and fragmented non-system of long term care services and support because the state had failed to make efficient and effective long term care a priority."

In her presentation at the rally, Brown pointed to the work that needs to be done to help resolve this concern. Among the issues Brown and the seniors pressed upon the legislature Thursday was the need to restore funding to programs cut during the recession. Brown stressed that SSI rates are currently at poverty levels, that there is a need to resolve the increasing problem of senior homelessness, and there is a need to build more affordable and accessible housing for the state's growing elderly population.

Another area of concern involved the number of adults with disabilities

“Caring for our seniors is perhaps the greatest responsibility we have. Those who walked before us have given so much and made possible the life we all enjoy.”

– Senator John Hoever

in California, which is expected to grow by nearly 20 percent in the coming years. Add to that the increasing number of residents diagnosed with Alzheimer’s disease and other dementias, projected to impact more than 1.1 million Californians by 2030.

California’s continued reliance on the patchwork of current programs and services is not adequate to meet the growing needs of the state’s ever-increasing elderly population. As the study pointed out, such reliance is destined to result in unnecessary expenditures, inequitable access, and irrelevant services.

Current programs designed to assist the state’s dependent adults are stretched across a minimum of six major state departments without a designated leader to champion a statewide vision, develop a statewide plan, or implement a statewide strategy.

Brown explained that this year, the Commission, the state voice for older residents, is advocating for programs and services that will help lift seniors out of poverty, provide protections for the most vulnerable, and support the desire of all Californians to age healthily, securely and purposefully.

In her presentation, Brown stressed, “We are asking the Legislature to take a more comprehensive view by expanding the jurisdiction of the Assembly Committee on Aging and Long Term Care.”

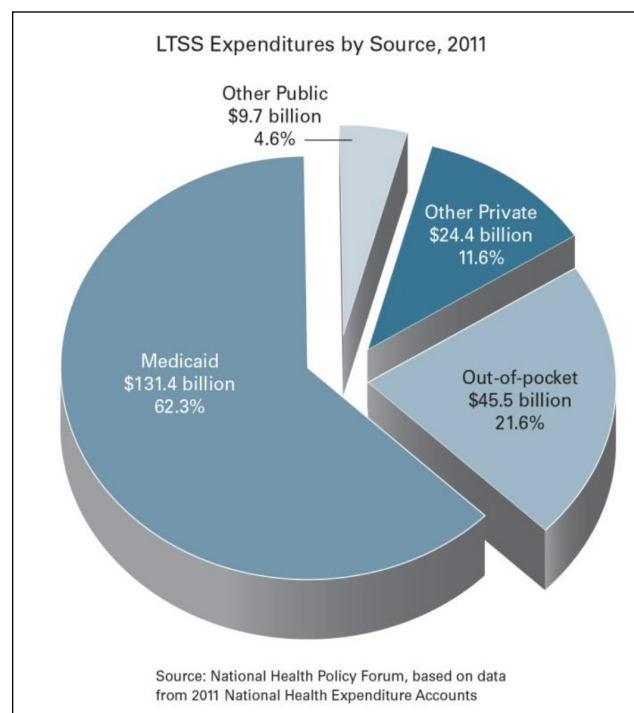

She further called for the creation of a Standing Committee on Aging and Long Term Care and called for the Assembly and Senate to conduct, “Joint Hearings among the respective Budget committees and relevant Standing Policy Committees to focus on aging and long term care budget items only.”

The 2015 report made more than 30 legislative recommendations for action and provided a strategy to achieve improved coordination and a high-functioning, comprehensive system.

As part of last week’s rally, seniors and their advocates visited the offices of their legislators to discuss issues related to aging and long-term care.

Nearly 70 percent of those aged 65 years and older will need Long-Term Care (LTC) services and support. Additionally, approximately 80 percent of LTC care givers are family members, may become more vulnerable to health issues and economic hardship than the person for whom they care.

It may be surprising to learn that, in California, 4.4 million family caregivers provide more than four billion hours a year of unpaid care, valued at nearly $57 billion. In her presentation at the rally, Brown noted,

“California has the highest number of family caregivers in the nation.”

However, the availability of family caregivers in the state is on the decline. The 2010 ratio of caregivers for every person in what is considered the high-risk years of 80 plus was 7 to 1. That ratio is projected to decline to 4 to 1 by 2030.

Unfortunately, only 37 percent of seniors have adequately planned for their future in-home care needs. This is largely because many of them believed Medicare would cover in-home LTC—it will not, and a majority of seniors cannot afford it. As a result, 64 percent of all LTC needs are accommodated by government programs. California’s LTC cost could increase by nearly 88 percent from $6.6 billion in 2013 to a projected $12.4 billion by 2023.

The state’s concern over how to best serve its growing senior population is further exacerbated by issues of poverty. One in six of the state’s seniors live in poverty, including 43 percent of Hispanic women and 34 percent of Black women who live alone. Unsurprising, considering the gross disparity between wages paid to men versus women, and the further disparity of wages paid to White women versus women of color. These disparities have a real impact on lifetime ability to contribute to retirement savings accounts and the level of earnings-based Social Security contributions.

This dilemma is further compounded by the reality that 20 percent of California adults over 65 live below the poverty threshold of about $16,000 a year, compared to only 15 percent nationwide.

California seniors have even greater fear of the possible impact the proposed America Health Care Act on their already stressed existence. As Brown highlighted, the law is bad news for caregivers, as it could result in the loss of 1.8 million jobs. Many believe the impact on seniors would be catastrophic.

Additionally, Californians over 65 are the fastest growing homeless population.

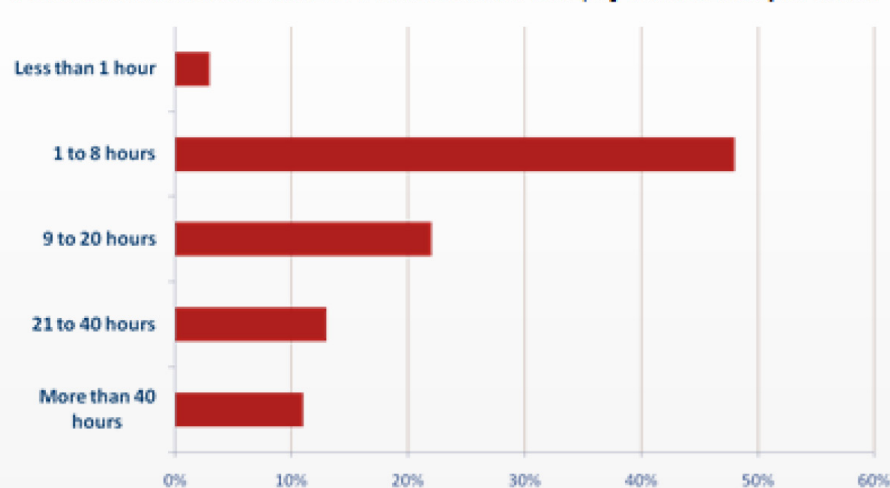

Due to state budget constraints forced by the Great Recession, at least nineteen state programs supporting California seniors experienced major budget cuts or were eliminated; many others had their funding frozen. Since the economic recovery, only seven programs have had their funding partially restored.

This data makes clear that California legislators must work harder to keep pace with the needs of a growing senior population, particularly regarding LTC. Seniors in California, like seniors around the country, prefer to remain at home and avoid institutionalization to every extent possible.

This year's Senior Rally Day once again pushed legislators to act. Seniors demanded wise use of state resources to ensure the financing and delivery of services will enable seniors to, "live to their fullest capacity without being treated like patients or as burdens to society."

CALIFORNIA'S TUMULTUOUS RELATIONSHIP WITH CHARTER SCHOOLS, PART 3 OF 4

The future of K-12 education under the stewardship of Department of Education Secretary, Betsy DeVos

"Charter schools get overwhelmingly positive press and make a lot of claims about their success. But actually, numerous studies confirm that their achievement is indistinguishable from that of traditional public schools. Some are very successful, some are troubled and struggling, and the rest are somewhere in between just like traditional public schools."

Increasingly, charter schools are becoming integral to America's system of public education. Although there continues to be a push and pull between traditional public school and charter public school education advocates, many in these camps coalesced in their opposition to the appointment of Betsy DeVos as Secretary of Education in early February.

DeVos' appointment was opposed by every Senate Democrat as well as some prominent Republicans; as a result, Vice President Pence was called in to push her confirmation through.

DeVos is a wealthy philanthropist with no experience in public education as a teacher or administrator. Over the years, her billionaire family has worked diligently to help build today's conservative movement, and has been instrumental in pushing the conservative movement to the far right.

Like many others, she is an advocate of charter schools; however, she is also a strong supporter of vouchers for private, religious schools and a champion of the privatization of public education in general. This raised the concerns for advocates who support both traditional and charter public education.

Those concerns only heightened during her confirmation hearing where DeVos' limited and/or lack of understanding of federal education law was on full display. Further, she remained ambiguous about whether she would adhere to education regulations established during the Obama administration.

In one of her first official press statements, the newly-appointed secretary addressed the full staff of the Department of Education and stated in part, "Together, we will find new ways in which we can positively transform education."

If the past is prologue, it is easy to understand concerns regarding the future for America's children if DeVos is successful in her commitment to "transform education."

An analysis of her twenty-year charter school initiative in Detroit, Michigan revealed warning paced city where she grew up. As a proud “Bouricua,” who loved Puerto Rican food and culture, Doreen initially missed the various dishes she grew up eating, and missed dancing Salsa. Over time, she would grow to love living in California, especially because of the weather.

Doreen worked for years as a receptionist at the Black Voice Newspaper. She also worked as a clerk for the County of Riverside, Child Support Division. She eventually decided to return to the dental field. She found work at SmileCare Dental as a receptionist, and was eventually promoted to Front-Office Supervisor. She also worked at Gentle Dental as a Treatment Coordinator.

In February of 2000, Doreen gave birth to a baby girl, Jazmin Imani Brooks. Doreen was quite the doting mother. She was very proud of her daughter, always sought ways to make her happy, and provided advice and support. Doreen was also very fond of her step-son, Hasaan, whom she protected and adored.

Doreen spent a great amount of time with her husband—they were always together; they never argued or distanced themselves from one another.

Doreen was very loyal to her family and friends. She did not believe in being pretentious. She had a way of letting others know how she felt without being disrespectful. She had an infectious laugh that those who knew her will never forget.

Doreen enjoyed dancing Salsa, going to the gym, spending time with her family, dining out, going to the movies and the beach, and listening to music. Her favorite colors were beige and brown. She loved life and lived it to the fullest. She was outgoing and could always found in a good mood. She normally greeted those she knew with a warm embrace. Doreen, often called “Dora,” was the epitome of kindness, grace, and class. She was truly one of a kind. Everyone who knew her, loved her.

Doreen leaves to celebrate her life and legacy her husband Glenn “Cito” Brooks, daughter Jazmin Imani Brooks, step-son Hasaan Rasheed Brooks, mother Nilda Pacheco Ayala, sister Jeannette Carrasco, and a host of loving family members and friends.

signs. Firstly, the district operated with less oversight than any education system in the nation. Reportedly, nearly two-thirds of charter schools in the state were run by for-profit management companies that were not required to make the same financial disclosures expected of schools that are not-for-profit or public.

The recent string of failures by for-profit colleges creates a strong sense of foreboding regarding what could happen if for-profit education became the only template for K-12 schools.

Finally, students’ academic performance at for-profit charter schools during the DeVos era was only on par with students in the city’s public schools.

When these results are combined with DeVos’ on-record sentiment regarding the limited, if any, role she believes the government should play in the education of America’s children, it is easy to see why many opposed her appointment.

A former Superintendent of Education in Michigan summed up the DeVos impact on his state’s approach to K-12 education when he said: “In a number of cases, people are making a boatload of money, and the kids aren’t getting educated.”

Critics wonder whether this is the outcome DeVos has planned for all of America’s children.

across our region...this year, I am certain there will be more great news and recognitions for our countywide literacy efforts in the future,” said San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools Ted Alejandre.

Alejandre and California State University San Bernardino President Tomás D. Morales are leaders of the countywide Vision Project’s Education Element group. The Education Element group is charged with developing strategies to achieve the Vision’s Cradle to Career Goal. The group identified early childhood literacy as a critical step on the path to success in school, likelihood of going to college, and future earning potential, according to a 2010 report from the Annie E. Casey Foundation.

In September 2015, Vision2Read was launched at a Family Reading Rally, where the Molina Foundation donated 50,000 books to schoolchildren. Donations like this can encourage children to start adventures in reading, especially by authors across all ethnicities, genders, and sexualities in the Young Adult (YA) genre. Some of these YA authors include Julia Alvarez, Nalo Hopkinson, Gabby Rivera, Kai Cheng Thom, and Sandra Cisneros.

However, in the bookstalls, statistics show that literature is still dominantly written by White cisgender (someone who exclusively identifies as their sex assigned at birth) males. According to an article in The Guardian, “In the US, the New York Review of Books shows a stronger bias. Among authors reviewed, 83 percent are men (306 compared to 59 women) and the same statistic is true of reviewers (200 men, 39 women).”

So far, more than 170,000 people have been connected to literacy programs through the Vision2Read campaign and its events.

The community-driven Countywide Vision project took on literacy as its first public-facing campaign in September 2015 after learning that 69 percent of San Bernardino County third-graders did not meet state English language/literacy standards that year.

To read is to learn, to challenge, and think differently. Critics believe if one is just reading books written by the majority, then perspective of others is being missed. Vision2Read has made it possible for children to reach that perspective of others.
