The Spirit of Ripley

I spent yesterday in Ripley, Ohio, one of my favorite cities in the United States. It's a village planted 52 miles southeast of Cincinnati, considered the "Frontier to Freedom" because of its position on the "free" side of the mighty Ohio River.

During the antebellum period, given its location on the river, it became a destination for freedom seekers escaping bondage in Kentucky. The little town of Ripley was so engaged in abolitionist activity that it has a street still referred to as "Freedom Row" a group of homes that belonged to a diverse community of businessmen, elected officials, and others who worked in concert to assist freedom seekers in their journey out of enslavement. But the relationship between two operatives – John Parker, a former slave and Rev. John Rankin, a Presbyterian minister – can teach us how the spirit of cooperation and a shared conviction can overcome barriers of race, economic status, and cultural heritage.

John Parker was born into slavery in 1827 and at the age of eight was sold and forced to walk from Virginia to Alabama – chained to other slaves, a journey which ignited a hatred of bondage that fueled his life long passion for helping others gain their freedom. After earning extra money to purchase his own freedom, he eventually settled in Ripley where he opened a foundry strategically located on the banks of the Ohio River and by day employed over 25 men and helped to free over 1000 by night.

Rev. John Rankin believed so fervently in the anti-slavery cause that he risked his own life as well as the lives of his wife and 13 children to help over 2,000 people escape slavery...all from his home on Liberty Hill at the highest peak in Ripley. Parker and Rankin often worked together. One guiding freedom seekers across the river, through the small town, then up the hill. The other clothing, feeding, and providing solace until they could safely travel further north.

Ripley's historical spirit of cooperation is not only admirable, it's inspiring.

While Harriet Tubman may be considered the most well-known operative of the Underground Railroad, helping hundreds of enslaved individuals, both John Parker and Rev. Rankin are credited with assisting over a thousand times as many to freedom. Parker and Rankin's collaboration can serve as a lesson for us today. They worked for a greater good in the spirit of cooperation. They sacrificed the personal for the collective. And they fought for freedom, even under the threat of imprisonment or death.

Time is Running Out

Riverside-Business and residential property owners in Riverside County are reminded they have until August 1 to file for unclaimed property tax refunds. A list of all unclaimed property tax refunds from the tax year 2012 and before, in addition to filing instructions, are available on the Treasurer-Tax Collector's website: <http://www.countytreasurer.org/TaxCollector/UnclaimedMoney/PropertyTaxUnclaimedRefund.aspx>.

According to Treasurer-Tax Collector Don Kent, 575 refunds totaling $586,728.78 remain unclaimed. Most of the unclaimed refunds resulted from valuation reductions by the county Assessor and are related to corrections or cancellations to the tax roll after taxes had already been paid.

Any property tax refunds that remain unclaimed for four years after the payment date – or one year after a requested claim form has been mailed back to a taxpayer by the county, whichever is later – can be ordered transferred to the county general fund by the Board of Supervisors.

Veterans Will Be Honored with High School Diplomas

Riverside

Shiane Daima Jacocks

In 2016, veterans from World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War, who made a choice to fight and serve our country over graduation caps and gowns, finally sought out high school degrees through the Operation Recognition Program.

On November 13, 2017, these veterans from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, and Coast Guard will be honored with high school diplomas.

More than 300 veterans have earned diplomas through Operation Recognition since 2007. They are awarded as a joint effort of the Riverside County Board of Education, the Riverside County Office of Education, and the Riverside County Department of Veterans' Services.

This year's Operation Recognition ceremony will be held at 2:00pm on Monday, November 13 at the Moreno Valley Conference and Recreation Center, 14075 Frederick Street, Moreno Valley. To be recognized at the ceremony, completed application forms and supporting documentation must be received by 5:00pm, on Wednesday, October 4, 2017. As previously, this year's program is open to current Riverside residents whose education was disrupted by military service in World War II, the Korean War, or the Vietnam War. Degrees can also be conferred posthumously.

Education Code Section 51440 authorizes granting retroactive high school diplomas to eligible veterans. Section 51430 also authorizes retroactive diplomas to Japanese-American citizens whose internment by federal order in World War II prevented them from graduating from high school.

For application information visit www.rcoe.us/operationrecognition. Applications can also be requested by telephone. Interested persons may contact Tracey Case at (951) 826-6570 or email her at tcase@rcoe.us.

On Saturday, August 5, fans of all ages are expected to come together in Upland for one epic show featuring the music of legends in concert presented by Affordable Music Productions.

Also performing: The Flamingos, singing "I Only Have Eyes for You" and "Lovers Never Say Goodbye" written and sung by lead singer by Terry Johnson; Chris Montez, influenced by his Hispanic culture, known for his own original songs like "Let's Dance," and his hit song with Kathy Young "All You Had to Do Was Tell Me;" and Carla Cooke, whose talent mirrors that of her father, Sam Cooke, and whose music was crafted in the church and connects to her family.

This show hopes to bring joy, memories, and entertainment that will last. Those who remember these artists can reflect on the songs what made them music lovers and

NEWS IN BRIEF

Valdivia Tosses Hat in the Ring

San Bernardino—Last week, San Bernardino City Councilmember John Valdivia, announced his plan to run for mayor in 2018, against the City of San Bernardino's incumbent mayor, Carey Davis, who has already announced his intention to seek re-election.

"San Bernardino needs new leadership with the capacity to unite our community, to engage our residents, and attract employers, investors, and resources that our community desperately seeks and deserves," Valdivia told those in attendance when he made his intention public last week.

Valdivia grew up in San Bernardino. Other than the years he spent away at college, he has lived in the community his entire life. Valdivia has represented the city's Third Ward since 2011.

Keeping Water Sports Fun and Safe

Water, water everywhere! The I.E. has a bevy of sparkling public pools and splash pads. Within an hour, you can be on the lake or at a great beach or water park. Water is a big part of family fun here and water safety should be, too.

With temperatures soaring, it is important to stay vigilant around children and adults alike while enjoying activities involving bathing and swimming at a pool, river, lake or beach. For children younger than five, drowning is a leading cause of injury, or lifelong disability. And it is the leading cause of accidental death.

Careful vigilance can prevent tragedy and knowing how to prevent drowning is a critical step in keeping children safe.

- Keep constant eyes on young children playing in or near any body of water, public pool, spa, or bathtub. A child can drown in the time it takes to answer a text message. Babies and toddlers have drowned in items as seemingly harmless as shallow buckets of water when left briefly unattended.
- Never leave a child alone near water while you answer the telephone or doorbell, attend to another child or turn to household chores, even for a few seconds.

- Designate an adult to watch children at play at large gatherings. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends staying close enough to reach out and touch the child while being supervised in water.
 - Fence your pool on all four sides with a barrier that is at least five feet high. Move lawn chairs, tables and other potential climbing aids away from the fence to help keep out children. Any gate or door leading to the pool area should be self-closing and self-latching, opening outward, with the latch placed on the poolside and out of reach.
 - All children should wear life vests (personal flotation devices approved by the U.S. Coast Guard; Swimming aids such as blow-up “water wings” are not approved).
 - Swimming lessons do not ensure safety. A child who falls into water unexpectedly may panic and forget his or her swimming skills. Adults who serve as caretakers for children who swim should know how to swim themselves, and also be certified to perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) in an emergency. Immediate CPR could prevent death or brain damage.
- For more information, go to Drowning Prevention Foundation (www.drowningpreventionfoundation.org).

SB 103 will Increase Transportation Contract Opportunities for Minority-Owned Businesses

Sacramento

Shiane Daima Jacocks

Contributor

On July 6, the California State Legislature passed Senate Bill 103, supported by the California Legislative Black Caucus, to increase procurement opportunities for minority-owned small business enterprises from the California Department of Transportation (DOT).

SB103 mandates the DOT to develop an outreach plan intended to increase procurement opportunities for small businesses owned by women, minorities, disabled veterans, the LGBT community, and other important, though often unrecognized, groups. The plan will be reviewed and audited by the Inspector General while the DOT actively reports on its diversity progress.

"Taxes on gas and transportation hit disadvantaged communities the hardest," said Christopher Holden, Assemblymember (AD-41) and Chair of the California Legislative Black Caucus (CLBC). Holden is in the California Democratic Party and his district includes the northern San Gabriel Valley. He was first elected to the California State Assembly in 2012, and re-elected in 2014 and 2016.

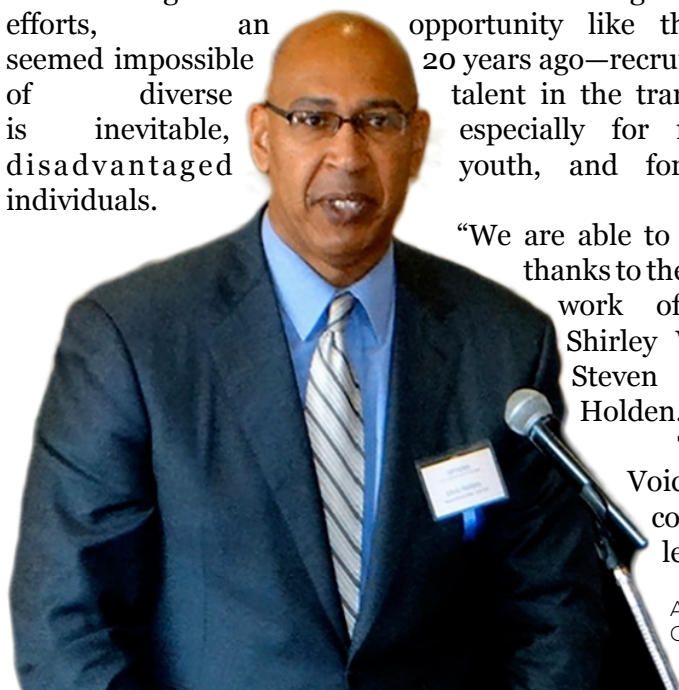

Holden continued, "SB103 helps empower these communities by making sure minority-owned small businesses are included in contracting opportunities for transportation projects made available through these funds."

According to the CLBC, SB103 will also create greater opportunities for marginalized groups in apprenticeship programs, pre-bid meetings, and trainings for new contractors. Through targeted outreach efforts, an opportunity like this—something that seemed impossible 20 years ago—recruitment and retention of diverse talent in the transportation industry is inevitable, especially for minorities, women, disadvantaged youth, and formerly incarcerated individuals.

"We are able to pass this legislation thanks to the leadership and hard work of Assemblymember Shirley Weber and Senator Steven Bradford," said Holden.

The Voice/Black Voice News will continue to follow this legislation.

IT'S OUR ANNIVERSARY...

Look for our POP UP PARTIES All Summer Long

It's our anniversary...

In the past 45 years since a group of students founded the VOICE, we have witnessed some of the most radical changes and advancements in the world of media. We have gone from typesetting and printing presses to desktop publishing to digital platforms and social media. But as we have seen with the creation and dissemination of fake news and blatant propaganda, thoughtful and truthful news and information continues to play a vital role in our society. We believe, as a community media company celebrating our 45th anniversary in July, that these new technologies have not made us weaker, they have helped us become stronger. Whether it's publishing award-winning news articles and columns on significant regional and national issues weekly, producing independent films, mounting photography exhibits that tell our story in vivid imagery, or providing leadership in outreach campaigns for the public good, "community" remains our core value.

Health Care and the Theory of “Disposable Peoples”

Tom Patterson
Contributor

Why are the President and most Republicans in Congress trying to steal our health care? Who benefits from their theft? Are we disposable people in their view?

About a month ago, House Republicans passed a healthcare bill. A few days later, the independent Congressional Budget Office (CBO) said the bill would take away health insurance from 22 million people covered under the Affordable Care Act (ACA, Obamacare). A couple of weeks ago, Senate Republicans passed their own version of the bill, which, according to the CBO, would take health insurance away from 24 million people. Last week, the President announced his own plan. It is even more draconian and would drop 32 million people from health coverage, according to the CBO.

They claim their goal is to reduce the cost of health care to the federal government by about one trillion dollars over the next decade. However, there is another way of looking at what they want to do. The Republicans also want to lower the maximum federal income tax rate. This does not have much impact on people earning $60,000 or less a year, but it dramatically cuts the taxes owed by individuals earning a million or more per year. The government savings from cutting health care would replace the money it loses by lowering the tax rate. In other words, it is a massive redistribution of wealth from the poor and working classes to the wealthiest Americans. It increases income disparities that already exist.

While federal, state, and municipal laws facilitating upward income redistribution have existed for more than a century, changes in the 1970s intensified the process. Corporations and their lobbyists promoted the new legislation. Companies, which had paid some attention to the welfare of their workers, shifted their focus to maximizing profits for their shareholders. Health care and retirement plans were reduced or eliminated altogether, as the costs were steadily downloaded on individuals. Both federal and state governments slashed the social safety network—health, education, social services, and social security.

Since the 1970s, the primary beneficiaries of these cuts have been multinational companies in the finance, insurance, real estate, energy and defense sectors of the US economy. While the federal government bailed out banks and insurance companies in the wake of the economic

POLICE + YOUTH TOWN HALL MEETING ATTRACTS OPPOSING VIEWS

Gail Fry
Contributor

A Town Hall Meeting billed to open channels of communication between youth and police in the City of San Bernardino was held at the Boys and Girls Club of San Bernardino on June 27. The event drew about 200 people, two protesters, and many of the youth's questions remained on the table.

FEATURE STORY

The City of San Bernardino enlisted the help of Fight Crime: Invest in Kids' Police Training Institute, the Youth Action Project, and the Young Visionaries Leadership Institute to kick off a multi-day training session between youth and members of the San Bernardino City Police Department.

A panel of local youth and police was seated at the front of the room. From the San Bernardino Police Department (SBPD), the panel included Captain Raymond King, Sergeant Shauna Gates, Detective Nelson Carrington, Officer Araceli Mata, and Captain Vickie Cervantes. Tyrese Collins represented the Young Visionaries Leadership Institute. And seated on the panel from the Youth Action Project were Darnell Collins, Lamonte Evans, Malik Collins, Emmanuel Lorenzo, Corey Gully, and Kevin Peterson.

The program flyer obtained by The Voice/The Black Voice News of the Town Hall meeting indicated a time for questions and discussion between the youth and representatives of SBPD, which became questions from adults in the audience.

One audience member questioned the integrity of members of the local sheriff's and police department, citing the killing of Philando Castile in Minnesota on July 6, 2016, claiming Castile "did everything right," and questioning "how are we supposed to trust you?" The audience member also alleged off-duty law enforcement participated in the Anti-Sharia Law protest held Saturday, June 10 (demonstrations were held in San Bernardino and nationwide), and added many Muslims are African-American. The audience member compared law enforcement having a few bad apples to minority communities who "have a few bad people" on the whole. "Why should the youth trust you, they have no reason to?" The question was met with applause from the audience.

"Just like any other human beings I don't trust anybody until I get to know them, and once I get to know people, then that's how that trust is built," SBPD Sergeant Shauna Gates responded. "I think there is a misunderstanding just because we all wear the same uniform that we're going to back each other up no matter what and that's just not the case."

"I have been on a call where I have seen somebody use excessive force—that person no longer works for this organization," Gates shared, explaining that police officers "in all honesty we become jaded. People don't call us for good situations, I'm a human being."

"In order for us to trust and for us to gain everyone else's trust we have to have this conversation," Gates voiced, and suggested that, here in San Bernardino, "We need to start working on what's happening now and start changing things and teaching the kids that are in this room."

Another audience member claimed, regarding law enforcement, there is a "line in the sand" and "they do what they want to do. It is extremely rare to see any accountability from any police department including the San Bernardino

Sheriff's."

The audience member decried police silence, quoting Martin Luther King as saying, "There will become a time when your silence is betrayal."

The two audience members then shouted, "Your silence is betrayal," "no justice, no peace" and "justice delayed is justice denied" for several uncomfortable minutes.

In response to the protests, Fight Crime: Invest in Kids' Police Training Institute Director John Shanks explained, "I want to talk for just a minute about what we just saw and why we're here tonight; with all the incidents going on across the country, there is a lot of mistrust, there is a lot of conversation that needs to be had, that's why we are here."

"We want young people to be empowered to be able ask questions, we want you to grow and be good strong adults," Shanks said, and explained he has been very impressed with the "pro-active things [SBPD] is doing."

"We are going to be talking to police officers about de-escalation," Shanks said, and explained that all people, including police officers and youth, "all want to go home" and police officers just want to "be able to talk you through whatever you are experiencing and be on our way."

"Everybody in this world has biases; it is what you do with those biases," Shanks reasoned. "Kids think different" because "science tell us" the adolescent brain does not develop until age 26. This is something that many law enforcement officers are not trained to understand.

"So, cops see a kid and automatically think he is bad. Why? I don't know," Shanks admitted. "Because we haven't learned about why kids act the way they do, why they think the way they do, why they respond the way they do, we want to help share that with the police so they understand that better."

Shanks encouraged youth to sign up for the police training at a cost of $25.00 where they will learn how to interact with police officers and develop an understanding of each other.

At the end of the Town Hall meeting, two bikes and other prizes were awarded to random youth in the audience. One lucky member of Community Coalitions for Change won a mountain bike.

Community Coalitions for Change had a substantial presence at the meeting, with fifty members in attendance. The organization is a neighborhood group whose purpose is to build "strong relationships with local law enforcement and have meaningful conversations about reducing underage drinking and drug use."

One mother explained to The Voice/The Black Voice News the Town Hall meeting was presented as a forum where the youth could ask questions of the police and receive answers, and shared her disappointment that did not occur.

"We want young people to be empowered to be able ask questions, we want you to grow and be good strong adults...We are going to be talking to police officers about de-escalation."

Studying the Underground Railroad

Laura L. Klure
Contributor

It can be interesting to study the history of the Underground Railroad (UGRR), to read about the lives admirable folks, such as Harriet Tubman, mentioned in that Walter Robinson song. Born in about 1822, Tubman began helping people escape slavery in 1850. She later worked with the Union forces, leading expeditions and tending to liberated slaves. Her long life ended in 1913 (check out Wikipedia for a good, fairly detailed biography).

We may think of the UGRR happening around the time of the American Civil War, but some sanctuaries were given to slaves much earlier, including in the late 1600s through the 1700s in Florida. According to the National Park Service (NPS), in 1817, 200 years ago, “U.S. Federal troops waged a war against Seminole Indians and freedom seekers in Florida.”

When the Civil War was ending in 1865, the 13th Amendment abolished slavery. Later the 14th and 15th Amendments improved the rights and protections of former slaves. We’re still working to preserve some of those rights.

But other than the famous folks, such as Harriet Tubman, Frederick Douglass, John Brown, and others – who else participated in the UGRR? Who escaped slavery through the UGRR? Who were the White and Black people who helped the escapees, and in what ways? There are no easy answers.

The UGRR was not a railroad or a single pathway, and it was not an underground tunnel. The concept refers to multiple paths to freedom, different routes followed in various ways by those escaping slavery, helped along by good people. The paths north were through many houses where travelers could be hidden, rest, and get help to continue the journey. The NPS website has maps with six main escape routes and many more sub-routes (see www.nps.gov/nr/travel/underground/detailedroutes).

The travelers on the UGRR wanted to keep their names and escape routes secret, to avoid capture and return to slavery. Those who helped also needed to remain anonymous to protect the escapees. Even in the Northern U.S., some people did not believe the UGRR should exist, and some tried to catch slaves, to earn money by returning them.

Most public libraries have many books about the Civil War in general, but far fewer books about the UGRR specifically. These books generally cover only the main subjects and events, mentioning only well-known people. It is difficult to find any documents with a more complete list of UGRR workers, let alone names of those who escaped by traveling the UGRR.

There are some internet resources; search the web using your family surname, plus “Underground Railroad” or “UGRR.” Depending on how common the surname was, this may result in some interesting information. A problem for the descendants of slaves can be that their surnames were uncertain or were changed when they escaped slavery.

If you know the state where your ancestors resided (before or after escaping), or if you know a county where they lived, you can add that name to the search. Some local governments have more detailed information on their websites. According to the National UGRR Freedom Center, “Most public records are not yet on the internet – but some are. These include the records of the U.S. Census Bureau...” The Freedom Center site lists 8 people who were Heroes, Enabling Freedom (see www.freedomcenter.org, located in Cincinnati, OH).

An example of a rather thorough website is the one covering the UGRR in Southern Ohio. This site lists over 80 operators of UGRR “stations.” (see www.angelfire.com/oh/chillicothe/ugrr). Short stories are given about 11 African-Americans in Southern Ohio (click on People).

The NPS website lists a few of the UGRR sites in 23 states; clicking on the locations can provide more details. This list is by no means complete, but it includes some photos (see www.nps.gov/ugrr). NPS lists 7 “Conductors” along the UGRR, just a few of the many. Under the heading “People, Places and Stories,” the NPS site gives links to over 140 bits of text. This information is often fairly short, but it sometimes gives details that may assist in locating your ancestors. Note that the names given are often only first names.

If you think that California was too far from the “South” to have any slaves, think again. An article on Wikipedia, about the “History of slavery in California,” outlines the enslavement of Native Americans and people of African ancestry. The California Gold Rush intensified the desire for cheap or enslaved workers.

Doing family genealogy may be helpful to those wanting to learn about connections to the UGRR, but access to sites with the most family data can be fairly expensive. Even with a full subscription, such as to ancestry.com, it can be difficult and time consuming to find detailed information about the mid-1800s, unless some other family member posted or linked to documents. The Freedom Center in Ohio offers some free help with genealogy, for those able to visit in person.

When searching for a very common surname, such as Brown, there can be a lot of genealogical data online. For example, ancestry.com lists many thousands of family trees for folks surnamed Brown, and even searching with a first name hardly only narrows the search to more than 100 family tree listings. And, it can be difficult to discover the race of the folks mentioned in a family tree.

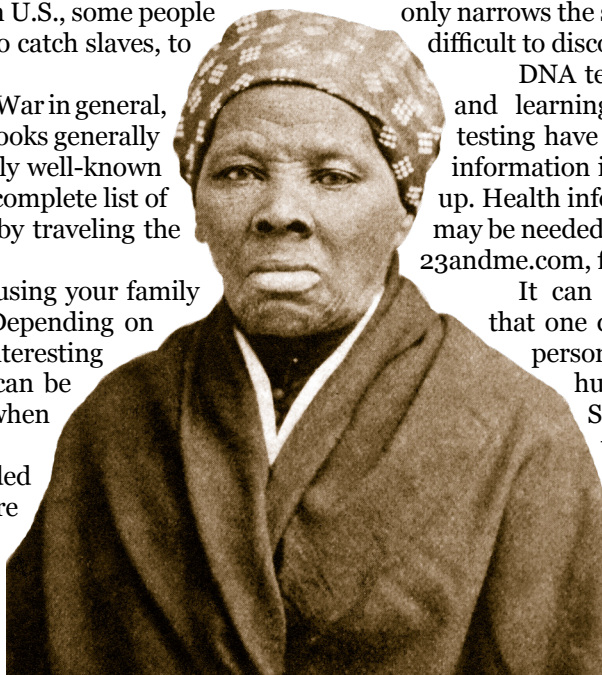

DNA testing has become an important tool for finding relatives and learning about ethnic ancestries. The rules governing DNA testing have been changing recently, so it is important to learn what information is available from a particular DNA test site before signing up. Health information, for example, can be minimal, and subscriptions may be needed to learn much about one’s ancestry (see ancestry.com and 23andme.com, for example).

It can be surprising to discover genes associated with races that one did not know were present in his or her background. A person generally considered to be “White,” such as this writer’s husband, might learn that he has a small percentage of Sub-Saharan African ancestry. Those who consider themselves to be “Black” can learn about countries in Africa where ancestors originated, and they might also learn about having ancestors who were slave owners.

Both Black and White people worked on the UGRR. Did any of them respectfully fall in love with the African-Americans they were helping? Sounds like a potentially pleasant aspect of the UGRR.

“She said her name was Harriet Tubman, and she drove on the Underground Railroad...”

COMMUNITY VOICES

crisis of 2007, it did almost nothing to help families that invested their life-savings and futures in homes and lost them to foreclosure.

There was a small conference in the mid-1990s. The participants were diverse and came from many parts of the world—Africa, Latin America, the Middle East, and minority communities in the United States. As they discussed assistance policies adopted by the International Monetary Fund, World Bank, and US government, they coined the term “disposable peoples” to describe what was happening. The idea takes on new meaning given the voter suppression legislation passed in many states, and the grinding poverty and inequalities that prevail in many cities, including those in the Inland Empire.
