Honoring a Living Legend: Saraella Green-Jones-Urserly, Celebrates 104 years

Visiting Historic Sites

Next week at Voice Media Ventures we celebrate a historic 45 years of publishing community news.

I was in high school when I first started with the newspaper and worked after school as our Subscription Manager. We bought a Kaypro personal computer to manage the database of a few hundred subscribers and stored the important information on various large floppy disks.

My next job was typesetting and layout. Prior to the technological advancements in desktop publishing, newspaper type was set on large machines that didn't easily allow users to make edits or variations in font style or size. Typographical errors were corrected during the layout phase. And Xacto knives and wax machines were important tools of the trade. I became so skilled at cutting and pasting that I could cut out a period and replace it with a comma without disrupting the letters on either side. I soon graduated to editing special issues and creating content by writing stories and selecting graphics from the various clip-art catalogues.

Now as publisher, things have changed dramatically. With desktop publishing and digital photography, we can complete our layout efficiently. Instead of simply printing a physical newspaper weekly, we print the paper, write, design and distribute two digital products a week, produce two websites, and manage six social media sites by sending daily tweets and sharing daily posts. We lead a weeklong annual study tour that has successfully educated over 1,300 participants on the American freedom movement known as the Underground Railroad, and we remain committed to our advocacy roots through our strategic communications and outreach firm.

Every year I make a pilgrimage to visit two significant places in journalism history. The first is the printing press that belonged to Mary Shadd Cary, the first woman to edit a newspaper in North America. As the editor of the Provincial Freeman that circulated in both the northern United States and western Ontario Canada, Ms. Shadd was committed to equal rights advocacy. Her printing press is housed at the Elgin Settlement Historic Site in Buxton, Ontario, Canada. Her story is a reminder of our duty as a community newspaper.

The second is the Talman Building at 25 Buffalo Street in Rochester, New York. That building is considered a historic site in journalism because it housed the first offices of the North Star Newspaper, the first newspaper founded by the abolitionist Frederick Douglass. Standing outside that building and reading the plaque that marks its significance, reminds me that I am part of a grander tradition in journalism where success is measured by our ability to make a difference not just a dollar.

After 45 years of publishing, we continue to strive to be an important source of information for the community and consider our role in educating and informing our citizens to be a crucial one. Thank you for your continued partnership, engagement, and support.

Sickle Cell Breakthrough

Los Angeles-The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has just approved a new treatment developed by the Los Angeles Biomedical Research Institute that will improve the lives of many patients who suffer from Sickle Cell Anemia.

Sickle Cell is a painful blood disorder that primarily affects people of African descent. Until now, treatment for the condition involved medications that include a long list of debilitating side-effects. The drug developed by the LA Biomedical Research Institute, called Endari, is the first drug ever approved for the treatment of sickle cell anemia in children, and the first drug in twenty years approved for the treatment of sickle cell anemia in adults, according to a report by ABC News.

Millions Awarded for Public Health

San Bernardino

The California Department of Public Health (DPH) has awarded the County of San Bernardino more than ten million dollars for the Public Health Emergency Preparedness (PHEP) and State General Fund Pandemic Influenza (Pan Flu) programs.

The County Director of Public Health, Trudy Raymundo, reported the grant will cover a five-year period, July 1, 2017 through June 30, 2022, and will enable support for public health emergency preparedness.

Raymundo further explained that DPH will use the PHEP and Pan Flu programs funds to prepare, plan, respond to, and mitigate public health emergencies, and to improve pandemic response plans, mass vaccination clinics for seasonal influenza, and strengthen alternate care sites for all residents countywide. The grant includes $9,648,555 for the PHEP program and $646,710 for the Pan Flu program.

DPH has received funding for the PHEP and Pan Flu programs from the DPH since 2002. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention provides PHEP program funding for public health emergency preparedness and response activities and to enhance preparedness in response to large-scale bioterrorist events throughout California. Pan Flu program funding is appropriated from the California State General Fund to assist local health departments in developing and maintaining pandemic influenza preparedness.

Also, according to Raymundo, although the grant award is for five years, "Annual PHEP and Pan Flu programs' funding is contingent upon DPH submitting annual work plan and budget documents to the State and the State's subsequent review and approval."

If the State of California issues an amendment to the grant award, DPH will be required to seek further approval from the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors.

Property Values Increase for Average Homeowners in Riverside County

Riverside

Shiane Daima Jacocks
Contributor

The County Assessor/Clerk-Recorder Peter Aldana recently announced that, concurrent with the fiscal year that began July 1, property owners will benefit from a five percent increase in home prices.

According to Aldana, market growth in all real estate sectors drove up the assessment roll by more than five percent to $269 billion for the current fiscal year.

Property values in all sectors of the market have rebounded steadily over the last few years. Home prices rose five percent in the area, as the median price of a home went from $330,000 in December 2015 to $346,500 in December 2016, according to CoreLogic, a real estate information services firm.

"Rising property values are good news for residents. Property owners build equity, and local government will have the needed funds for the educational, recreational, and safety services that make Riverside County a great place to live and work," said Aldana.

Occupancy and rent have risen as well in the commercial office market, while new industrial and apartment construction grew by more than eight percent.

Despite increases such as these, however, the average property owner will not see a comparable rise in property taxes because the assessment enrolls more properties at their Proposition 13 value.

Proposition 13, the People's Initiative to Limit Property Taxation, was amended to California's Constitution in 1978. It prevents property-taxes from increasing more than two percent annually.

By July 1, state law requires the county assessor to complete the property roll and enroll the lower values as mandated under Proposition 13, adjusted for inflation or current market value.

Another measure, Proposition 8, also passed by California voters

NEWS IN BRIEF

Unbelievable

Washington, D.C.-Last week during a CNN discussion regarding how to pay for the border wall advocated by President Trump and his supporters, U.S. Congressional Representative Steven King (R-IA) not only suggested redirecting funds from Planned Parenthood but also added, "And the rest of it, could come out of food stamps and the entitlements that are being spread out for people who have not worked in three generations."

Last week, a leading member of the House Freedom Caucus made it clear he is willing to let the government shut down if Congress does not pass a budget that includes funding for the wall's construction along the country's southern border, and claimed the caucus has enough votes to do just that. The Voice will continue to follow this story.

U.S. Congressional Representative Steven King

Talking with Children & Teens about Hate and Intolerance

America is a deeply divided nation. Regardless of politics, there is conflictual, sometimes hateful rhetoric being spoken everywhere we turn... even within families, among aunts, uncles, grandparents, cousins. So, how are parents supposed to address this complicated reality with their kids?

Our job is to prepare them to stand their ground for what they believe in – and fight for it while being understanding and respectful that there are good people who may even love us and we love who believe something different.

Treat all young people’s opinions and questions with respect. Rather than ignoring or dismissing an opinion or question about hate or intolerance that makes you feel uncomfortable or anxious, ask yourself why you feel that way. It’s important to be clear, concise and factual even if their views are different than yours. When voicing your opinion or answering their questions, keep it simple. Don’t give long lectures or speak in platitudes.

- Acknowledge that hate groups exist and that their messages are threatening.
- Keep children and teens away from the scene of hate demonstrations or events. Find alternative and safe places to discuss the issues and voice opinions.
- Recognize that children, especially those older than age nine, often are more aware of what’s happening

- in the news than parents realize.
- Take time to talk about your personal reactions in age-appropriate language. It is helpful for children and teens to understand their parents’ perception of hate and intolerance.
- Encourage children and teens to talk about their feelings and help them find ways to express themselves in non-violent ways.
- Involve children and teens in deciding how to respond. When they are uncomfortable or outraged by a situation, it is comforting for them to voice their opinion.
- Encourage respect for diversity by teaching understanding and talking in a positive way about differences.
- Seek out multicultural activities, books or websites that encourage family participation.
- Make children and teens aware of your disapproval if you hear them use insensitive language.
- Remember that you are a role model and you can teach your child tolerance and acceptance.

 Statement filed with the County of Riverside

San Bernardino Seeks to Strengthen Trade, Investments with China

San Bernardino

Shiane Daima Jacocks

Contributor

Earlier this month, the County Board of Supervisors gave a unanimous “green light” to establish a foundation for strengthening bilateral trade and investment opportunities with China.

The county’s Economic Development Agency (EDA) is engaged at the local, regional, and state levels to increase international trade and attract foreign direct investment by leveraging assets and collaborating with regional partners to enhance and grow the local economy.

China was identified as a country of focus for the EDA in its pursuit of expanding local markets, enhancing supply chains, supporting businesses for growth through exports, and the attraction of investment. According to the agency, an opportunity currently exists to sign a Letter of Intent with the Foreign Affairs and Overseas Chinese Affairs Office of Lianyungang Municipal Government in China.

A letter of intent was approved between San Bernardino County and Lianyungang, Jiangsu, China by Dena Smith, currently serving as the county’s interim Chief Executive Officer and County Counsel. It will be authorized and signed by the Chairman or the Vice Chairman of the Board during a meeting between County officials and the Office of Lianyungang Municipal Government representative.

The State of California and the Ministry of Commerce People’s Republic of China (MOFCOM) signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) on April 10, 2013, to bolster economic ties and cooperation between California and China. The agreement established a joint working group that includes California, MOFCOM, and leaders from seven provinces – autonomous regions and municipalities directly under the central government – Jiangsu, Inner Mongolia, Shanghai, Shandong, Guangdong, Chongqing, and Hebei. Key objectives of the MOU include expanding trade and investment cooperation, strengthening communication, enhancing trust, boosting economic growth, and creating jobs.

This MOU between California and China included the formation of a “Joint Working Group” on trade and investment cooperation. The EDA is an active participant in the Southern California Joint Working Group.

Since there is an existing MOU, a Letter of Intent to establish a foundation for strengthening bilateral trade and investment opportunities between the San Bernardino County in California and the Office of Lianyungang Municipal Government in China is reasonable.

POP UP PARTIES
All Summer Long

It's our anniversary...

In the past 45 years since a group of students founded the VOICE, we have witnessed some of the most radical changes and advancements in the world of media. We have gone from typesetting and printing presses to desktop publishing to digital platforms and social media. But as we have seen with the creation and dissemination of fake news and blatant propaganda, thoughtful and truthful news and information continues to play a vital role in our society. We believe, as a community media company celebrating our 45th anniversary in July, that these new technologies have not made us weaker, they have helped us become stronger. Whether it's publishing award-winning news articles and columns on significant regional and national issues weekly, producing independent films, mounting photography exhibits that tell our story in vivid imagery, or providing leadership in outreach campaigns for the public good, “community” remains our core value.

An Over Indulgence in Opioids

Federal Government Targets Health Care Professionals Complicit in Opioid Misuse and Abuse

S. E. Williams
Contributor

When U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced the results of the Justice Department's recent Health Care Fraud Takedown event he said, "Too many trusted medical professionals like doctors, nurses, and pharmacists have chosen to violate their oaths and put greed ahead of their patients. Amazingly, some have made their practices into multi-million-dollar criminal enterprises. They seem oblivious to the disastrous consequences of their greed."

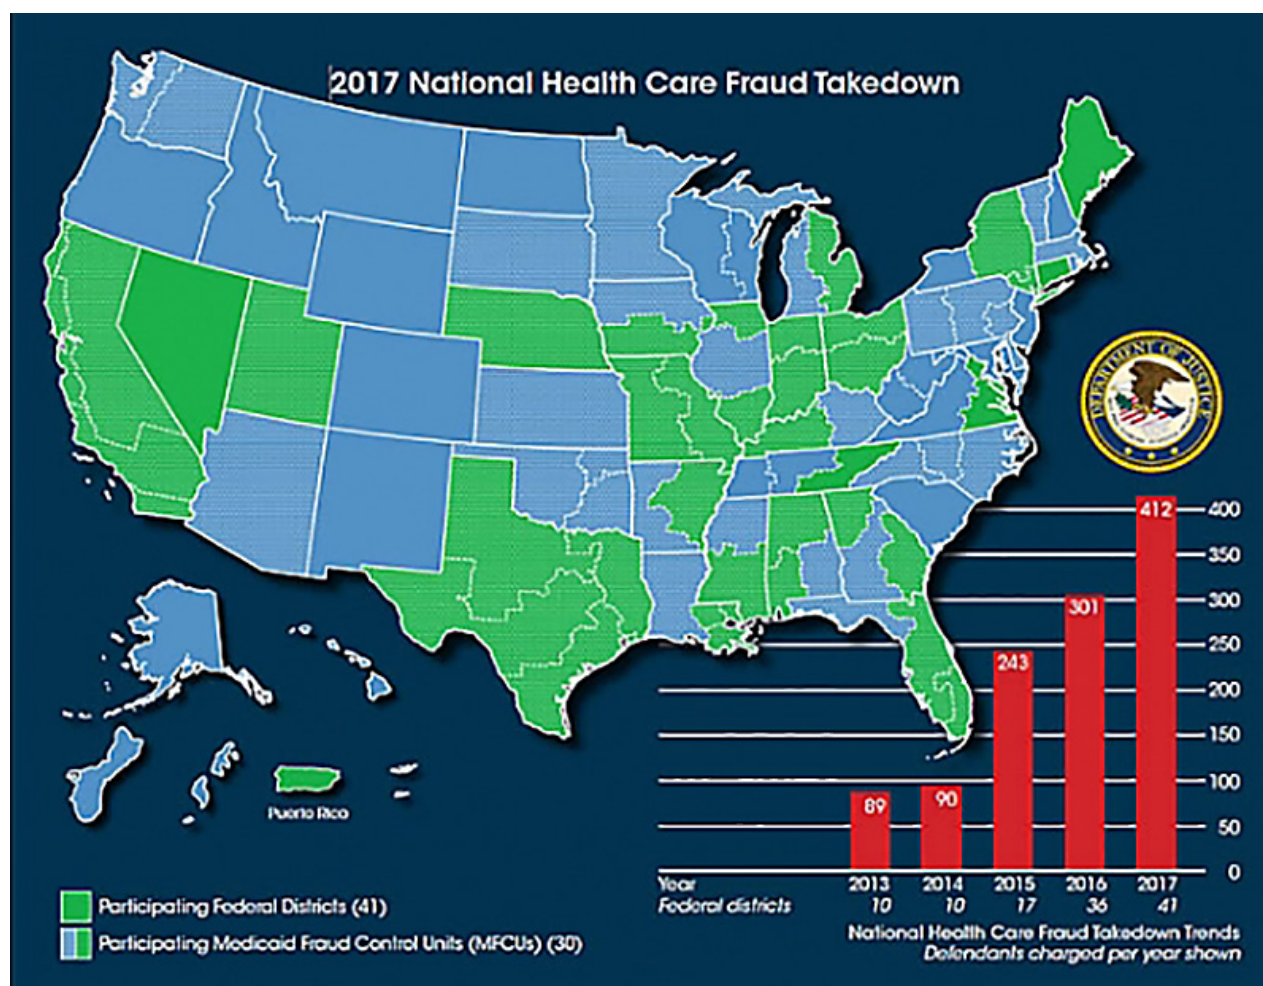

Sessions made this statement last Thursday, when the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) shared results of the largest health care fraud enforcement action in its history. The action, led by the Medicare Fraud Strike Force, resulted in the arrest and charge of 412 defendants across 41 federal districts, including 115 doctors, nurses, and other licensed medical professionals for their alleged participation in health care fraud schemes that involved nearly $1.3 billion in false billings.

According to the DOJ, among those charged, more than 120 of the defendants, including doctors, were charged for their roles in prescribing and distributing opioids and other dangerous narcotics.

The charges, officials explained, targeted schemes that billed Medicare, Medicaid, and TRICARE (a health insurance program for veterans and members of the armed forces and their families) for, "medically unnecessary prescription drugs and compounded medications that often were never even purchased and/or distributed to beneficiaries."

At least thirty state Medicaid Fraud Control Units, including California, participated in the arrests. In addition, the Department of Health and Human Services initiated suspension actions against 295 providers, including doctors, nurses, and pharmacists.

Many of the charges involved individuals contributing to the opioid epidemic, with special focus on medical professionals involved in the unlawful distribution of opioids and other prescription narcotics. According to the Center for Disease Control, approximately 91 Americans die every day of an opioid-related overdose.

Sessions said the actions of these professionals not only enrich themselves often at the expense of taxpayers, but they also feed addictions and cause addictions to start and the consequences are very real: “emergency rooms, jail cells, futures lost, and graveyards.”

According to court documents reviewed by the Voice/Black Voice News, some of the cases involved patient recruiters, beneficiaries, and other co-conspirators who were purportedly paid cash kickbacks in return for supplying beneficiary information to providers, so the providers could then submit fraudulent bills to Medicare for services that were medically unnecessary or never performed.

Last year, nearly 59,000 Americans died due to drug overdoses, many related to the use of prescription drugs. As noted in the DOJ report, the number of medical professionals charged this year is particularly significant because virtually every health care fraud scheme requires a corrupt medical professional to be involved for Medicare or Medicaid to pay the fraudulent claims. “Aggressively pursuing corrupt medical professionals not only has a deterrent effect on other medical professionals, but also ensures that their licenses can no longer be used to bilk the system,” the DOJ reported.

Last week’s enforcement action reached up and down the state of California. In the Central District of the state, 17 defendants were charged for their roles in schemes to allegedly defraud Medicare out of nearly $147 million. Two of the defendants were indicted for their purported involvement in a $41.5 million scheme to defraud Medicare and a private insurer. They allegedly submitted fraudulent claims and received payments for prescription drugs that were not filled by the pharmacy, nor given to patients.

In the Eastern District of California last week, cases and investigations by the U.S. Attorney’s Office resulted in the execution of search warrants in those investigations.

In the Northern and Southern Districts of California, four defendants, including at least one doctor, were charged for their roles in a drug diversion scheme and health care fraud scheme that involved kickbacks.

The Voice/Black Voice News reviewed court documents related to the Southern California case: United States of America v. Thomas S. Powers, M.D. and Anthony Paduano. This review revealed that Paduano, through his business, Accolade Equity LLC, entered into a contract agreement with a pharmacy, TC Medical Pharmacy (TCMP) in Corona. Beginning at an unknown date and continuing to about June 2015, in Orange and Riverside Counties, an individual described as Schemer #1 allegedly paid Paduano a fee of about 40 percent of the reimbursement that TCMP would receive from TRICARE for filling compounded medication prescriptions, for referral his referral to TCMP.

Compounding is a practice by which a licensed pharmacist or physician combines, mixes, or alters ingredients of a drug or drugs to create a drug tailored to the needs of an individual patient. Compound drugs are not FDA approved but can be prescribed by a physician when an FDA approved drug does not meet the needs of a particular patient. According to Express Scripts, “compounded drugs” ranked as the third most expensive drug class in 2014, after diabetes and high cholesterol medications.

Paduano would allegedly solicit TRICARE beneficiaries to seek compounded medications in exchange for payment and to refer other TRICARE beneficiaries to him, in exchange for payment of a referral fee. Paduano and Powers purportedly had an agreement by which Paduano paid Powers $200 per individual to write a prescription that called for compound medications.

“One American overdose every and more than Americans are addiction to prescription painkillers.”

- U.S. Department of Justice

Schemer #1 and others would then fill the prescription on behalf of TCMP, referred by Paduano, and submit a claim to TRICARE for reimbursement. Schemer #1 would subsequently pay Paduano a referral fee for each prescription.

While the Attorney General praised the success of last week's operation and pointed to the 295 health care providers in the process of being suspended or banned from participation in federal health programs, he also stressed the significance of the 120 defendants charged with opioid related crimes. As an example, he cited the Michigan scheme of six doctors who allegedly have prescribed patients with unnecessary opioids, some of which ended up for sale on the street.

In another example, he cited an illegal clinic in Houston that allegedly gave out prescriptions for cash. Just one doctor at this clinic reportedly wrote 12,000 opioid prescriptions for over two million illegal painkiller doses.

Locally, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties are working to keep abreast of the growing impact of opioid abuse in the inland region. This week, Dr. Cameron Kaiser, Riverside County Health Officer, Department of Public Health, shared his insights regarding the impact of opioid addiction in the Inland Empire.

From 2012 to 2016, the raw number of opioid-related deaths in the area were 491 according to the department. This was just an estimate, as there are many deaths labeled multi-drug or other. Also, the deaths identified as opioid-related were not solely the result of opioids; some may have resulted from a combination of fentanyl and alcohol, or heroin and cocaine, or a concoction of oxycodone and alcohol and other drugs.

When Dr. Kaiser was asked about the impact of opioids on residents of Riverside County he replied, "I think the best way to describe it is that it is going to become a larger and larger problem over time."

He continued, "When you deal with it in the health care setting, you see it from a different perspective." According to Dr. Kaiser, about ten years ago, it appeared the medical community was not doing enough to help patients manage their chronic pain. It is possible the pendulum may have swung too far in the other direction.

"As a result," Dr. Kaiser said, "we have a generation of people who are more dependent."

Dr. Kaiser expressed his belief that as the federal government cracks down on other kinds of drugs, opioids can become a gateway to addiction. "In Riverside County, even though we have relatively low numbers, we see people going on to use these drugs on a lifetime basis, so we want to get ahead of the problem."

According to Dr. Kaiser, when it comes to opioid abuse, Riverside has a supply problem and a demand problem. From a supply perspective regarding prescription pain killers (not heroin), "When people get hooked on Vicodin and Norco in our county, we have the Inland Empire Opioid Task Force in partnership with San Bernardino County." He explained that the Task Force identifies emergency room best practices to assure opioids are not being handed out indiscriminately. From a demand perspective, Dr. Kaiser stressed, "Patients need to realize that [pain] medications come at a cost—some people can handle them, others cannot." He added, "We need to make sure non-opioid alternatives have been tried, such as diet, exercise, etc."

Dr. Kaiser further noted that demand can come from people already hooked. "We need to get them connected to care." The biggest challenge in Riverside County, he shared, is, "We have limited pain management and drug abuse programs. We need more. We want to intervene before they get involved in the legal system... There are many patients that are willing, but our resources are so limited."

Dr. Kaiser also addressed concerns that a growing number of seniors may be becoming dependent on opioid medications due to chronic pain. "We've had some discussion about people who have accrued chronic pain," he said and stressed the need for even more discussion.

In conclusion, Dr. Kaiser shared one of his key concerns regarding the potential opioid crisis is the inland region: "I think it is worth pointing out that we don't want this to exacerbate existing disparities between communities. We don't want it to impact communities without resources."

Honoring a Living Legend

Saraella Green-Jones-Ursery, Celebrates 104 years

Perris

In a small place called Ellisville (now Fordyce), Arkansas in 1913, James and Ollie Green welcomed the birth of a baby girl. They named her Saraella.

More than 100 years later, Saraella's birth was again cause for celebration as family, neighbors, and friends gathered around her in Sun City at an event hosted by George and Marietta Givens in honor of her 104th birthday.

Saraella's life has been one of service to her church and her community. As a child growing up in Arkansas, she was very active in the church. Saraella recalled, "My mother and I made communion bread every second Saturday." Those early years in the church appear to have established a moral compass that has guided and sustained Saraella throughout her life.

In 1943, Saraella arrived in California and settled in the City of Perris. Over the years, she established herself as a pillar in the historic African American community. In 2011, during the city's centennial year, Saraella was recognized as a "Local Living Legend" by the city's African American community at an event sponsored by the Dora Nelson African American Art & History Museum.

When Saraella first settled in Perris, she attended First Baptist Church—the only "colored" church in the valley at that time. Also, in the early to mid-1940's, she and her father built a home in Perris. Saraella continued to live in that home until she re-married at the age of 90 and moved to Sun City.

In 1946, Saraella was a founding member of Bethel AME, and is the last surviving founder. In recent years, the church produced a documentary about her contributions as a founding member titled, "Sara Ursery—Pillar of Bethel AME Church, Perris."

Also in 1946, Saraella had the opportunity to star in a movie produced by Clarence Muse titled, "The Peanut Man." The Peanut Man told the story of the life of George Washington Carver. Muse made the movie with an all-Black cast of local Perris residents. Muse, also a Perris resident, was a community activist, actor, composer, playwright, and director. He made the movie as a fundraiser to bring water to the Good Hope Community of Perris.

Among some of Saraella's many contributions to the community of Perris was a Home and Garden column she wrote for the Perris Progress for nearly five years. Members of Perris' African American community view Saraella's contributions to their history as immeasurable.

Those who know Saraella best came to celebrate her life and honor her legacy at the birthday celebration. This week, The Voice/Black Voice News proudly joins with members of the Perris community in congratulating Saraella Green-Jones-Ursery on her amazing 104 years of life. May her journey continue . . .

The Voice/Black Voice News would also like to thank Louvella Singer, Curator of the Dora Nelson African American Art & History Museum in Perris for her contributions to this story.

in 1978, allows the assessor to enroll a property's market value when it falls below the Proposition 13 value.

This fiscal year, the assessor reduced more than 101,000 such properties with single-family homes. Because of the improved economy, that number fell from 120,000 last year. Aldana noted that as a property's market value recovers, the assessor must restore previous reductions. When property-tax bills are distributed in October, property owners will be notified of any changes in value made pursuant to Proposition 8.
