Why We Advocate

Last Thursday I was asked to make two presentations, one for the Women's Wellness & Business Conference in Ontario organized by Hispanic Lifestyle and the other my annual presentation to the Grier Leadership Academy in Riverside hosted by the African-American Historical Society and Riverside County Fair Housing Council. Both presentations focused on my family's legacy, specifically the legacy of this newspaper.

"We know that a legacy, generally speaking, is an inheritance," I said to both groups. "A gift bequeathed to others." In preparation for the workshop I found myself thinking about the institutions I have inherited and the legacy of advocacy that has also become a family trait.

As publishers my parents' philosophy was in alignment with the founding credo of the Black Press of America, "We wish to plead our own cause. Too long have others spoken for us. Too long has the public been deceived by misrepresentations, in things which concern us dearly." I have continued to believe that this philosophy is central to the work we do, whether it's advocating for a group, a cause, or a community.

This week's issue includes two important stories we are following that have far reaching implications: one is the historic increase in homicides in the City of San Bernardino and the other is our continuing investigation of the Albert Moyer criminal case in Riverside County. Fresh out of bankruptcy and with a court directed charter change, the City of San Bernardino is at a crossroads. City leaders will need to invest in programs that are measurable and results oriented to change the current negative trends in the crime rates. We will be monitoring the initiation of Operation Ceasefire, a program designed to address the growing crime rates in the city. The other story is a follow-up on the domestic violence case that is illustrative of the racial disparities in the criminal justice system.

This newspaper continues to public stories in the grand legacy of the advocacy genre of journalism. It is our goal to continue to work toward meaningful change here in the region and beyond.

Caution: Roadwork Ahead

San Bernardino—The Daily Bulletin recently spoke with Chief Public Information Officer Terri Kasinga of Caltrans District 8 regarding why the agency performs road work, particularly the placement of guardrails along the 210 Freeway, during daylight hours when traffic is heaviest. Many drivers have asked themselves this question when stuck in traffic there during the day.

According to Kasinga, Caltrans is careful to ensure its guardrail and maintenance repair crews do not work at night for safety reasons. “We request closures in advance and every once in a while have an emergency closure during the day. We do not work at night unless it is an emergency,” she explained.

Also according to Kasinga, the contractors for construction projects are usually the ones that work nights to reduce the impact their work has on traffic, but there are always risks, such as accidents when someone drives into a work zone and hitting equipment or from those driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs. “Unfortunately, the statistics show that it is typically the motorist or their passengers who are injured or killed when they enter a work zone,” Kasinga confirmed.

Please Be a Part of My Healing

Riverside

My name is Nicole Aubert and I am a 32-year-old Sick Cell warrior. I have been fighting this painful chronic illness all of my life.

Sickle Cell Anemia is a blood disorder in which your red blood cells lack oxygen which causes the cells to become hardened and deformed. Where normal red blood cells are soft and round, sickled cells are hard, sticky, and crescent shaped, which causes the cells to get caught in the vessels and decreases the flow of blood and oxygen throughout the body. This can increase the chances of complications, such as blood clots or organ failures. Sick Cells lead to the deterioration of the body; some more quickly than others.

The most obvious complication of Sick Cell is the pain it generates throughout the body. This pain can originate wherever blood flows and it is excruciating. You never know when the pain is going to hit. I can be having the best day and in mid-sentence or stride the pain can hit. I have been in and out of the hospital for as long as I can remember, dealing with a number of Sick Cell related issues.

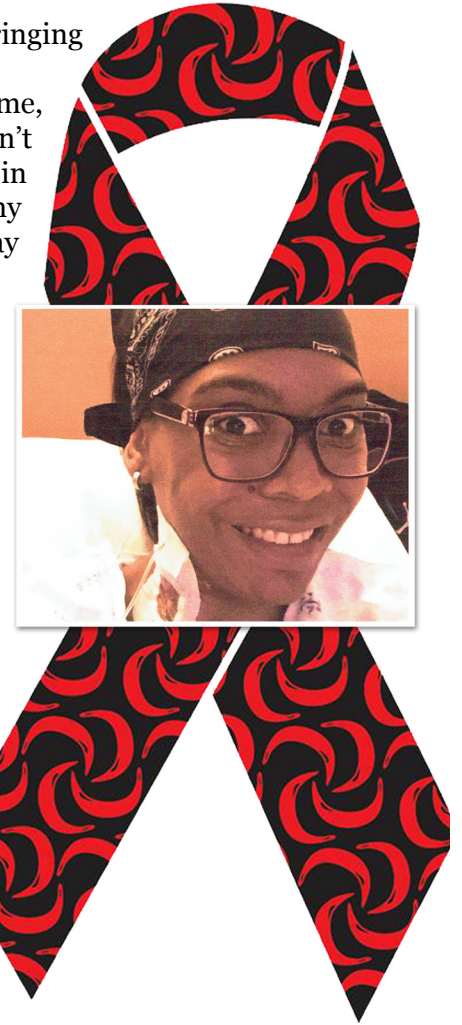

The illness has definitely put limits on my life. I wasn't allowed to play sports and it has given me a fear of going out and being social, because I worry about ruining my friends' and family's time. I had to quit college because I was unable to keep up due to numerous hospitalizations. I have suffered from infections, pneumonia, chronic chest syndrome, blood clots, minor strokes, and even a heart attack before the age of 30. This has taken a huge toll on me mentally, bringing on bouts of anxiety and depression.

This has not only been an ongoing battle for me, but for my family as well. Taking care of me hasn't been easy. My loved ones have to constantly see me in pain, go back and forth to the hospital, and watch my mental state decline. It is a constant struggle to stay positive and keep a smile on my face.

I was recently offered a unique opportunity to be part of an amazing program. The program involves a stem cell transplant that could be the answer to my prayers. God has blessed me with a loving and willing brother that is a perfect donor match. There is only one problem: the program is in Maryland and lasts 6 to 7 months; and I live here in California. I have to bring a caregiver as well, meaning we have to find funds for travel, housing, and the cost of living for this time period. All the while, my retired mother still has to maintain our primary household.

I am asking for you to help me make this journey for my cure. I know not everyone is able to give financially; prayers are also appreciated. Every little bit helps. Contributions are now being accepted at <https://www.gofundme.com/be-a-part-of-my-healing>.

New Tower Opened at Riverside Community Hospital

Riverside

A new, seven-story tower opened at Riverside Community Hospital last month. The addition has expanded the hospital's capacity from 373-licensed beds to a 478-licensed bed acute care medical facility.

The new 285,000 square-foot tower, referred to as the G-tower, includes 105 private patient rooms, 35 Intensive Care Unit beds, 70 medical and surgical beds, a pre- and post-operative surgical recovery area, a cafeteria, kitchen and state-of-the-art laboratory.

The new patient tower also opened space for the construction of four more operating rooms, including one for Transcatheter Aortic Valve Replacement, an advanced, minimally-invasive cardiac procedure to replace heart valves. This will allow Riverside and surrounding communities the access to some of the most advanced procedures available so patients can stay close to home to receive excellent care.

The hospital is expanding its ability to provide cutting-edge technology and services to critically ill patients, and evidence-based design features that will enhance clinical operations, safety, and quality, as well as a more comfortable place for patients to receive care.

According to the hospital's President and CEO Patrick Brilliant, "RCH has come a long way over the last decade and the completion of the new tower is a remarkable milestone for us as we continue to support the health and well-being of a growing community."

Brilliant also stressed, "Our patients will receive the same exceptional care by our staff regardless of which tower they reside in. The addition of our new tower is a representation of our continued commitment to providing high quality, compassionate care in a healing environment for our patients."

Riverside Community Hospital is a part of the Healthcare Corporation of America. The expansion project, which began in March of 2013, cost $460 million.

Riverside Community Hospital is located at 4445 Magnolia Avenue, Riverside.

Childhood Obesity

There are a lot of reasons for obesity: bad eating habits, poor nutrition and low or no physical activity. This trifecta puts our community’s children at risk for serious health issues that start when they’re young.

As kids grow they have a voracious demand for calories and nutrients to fuel their growth and development. Getting healthy meals, encouraging healthy eating habits and incorporating greater physical activity takes family involvement, strong programs and changing behaviors that will get more kids healthy. In some local communities the childhood obesity rate is as high as 40 percent. Obesity is the second leading behavioral contributor to death in the U.S.* A lack of nutritious food during childhood can have lasting physical effects.

Many children and families today have busy schedules. These make it hard to sit down to homemade meals every day. Many kids’ diets involve a lot of convenience and takeout food. But these foods can be unhealthy. They can have a negative effect on your child’s health. Some of the problems unhealthy eating causes can continue into adulthood. They can even develop into lifelong diseases. Healthful eating has many benefits for children.

Plus, having a healthy diet and focusing on nutrition are some of the simplest and most important ways to prevent the onset of disease. Healthy eating can help prevent many chronic diseases. These include obesity, heart disease, high blood pressure, and type 2 diabetes. Around half of all Americans have one or more of these illnesses.

Healthy eating habits are more likely to stay with you if you learn them as a child. That’s why it’s important that you teach your children good habits now. It will help them stick with these eating patterns. Start the day with a healthy breakfast. ...

- Let kids help plan and prepare 1 meal each week.
- Eat together as a family as often as possible. Take time eating, and chew slowly.
- Eat more vegetables and fresh fruits.
- Eat more whole grains.
- Drink plenty of fluids.

Get kids involved. Have your kids help you shop for groceries and choose foods to eat. Teach them how to read a food label so they know the nutrition in the foods they’re choosing. They can also help fix meals and take some ownership in what they’re eating.

Grant Awarded in Support of S.T.E.M. Riverside

The University of California Riverside (UCR) and Riverside Community College (RCC) are working in partnership to encourage undergraduate students to pursue majors in science, technology, engineering, and math.

The new partnership between these institutions of higher learning has started the Riverside Bridges to the Baccalaureate Program (B2B) to get underrepresented RCC students into S.T.E.M. fields.

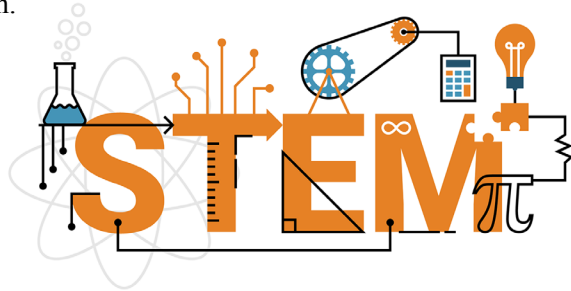

The program is being funded by a five-year $816,000 grant from the National Institute of General Medical Sciences of the National Institutes of Health. The program's goal is to identify RCC students who are already pursuing careers in science, and make it easier for them to transfer to and graduate from UCR.

During the five-year grant period, the program is expected to assist approximately 200 B2B students per year. In addition, up to ten students will be selected each year as B2B scholars, and will receive a stipend and travel allowance to attend a scientific meeting.

The RCC to UCR program is similar to programs established in 2016 between Cal State San Bernardino and local community colleges. Cal State San Bernardino was awarded two $5 million federal grants to provide scholarships and academic support to Hispanic and low-income students pursuing S.T.E.M. degrees.

Around the country, there is an increased focus on encouraging and preparing minorities and women to pursue careers in science, technology, engineering, and math, yet studies reveal there is still much work to do in this regard.

With the new partnership between UCR and RCC, they join a growing list of higher learning institutions participating in the Bridges to Baccalaureate program around the nation.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Sealed—Awarding Civic Engagement

Riverside—In October, Senate Bill 24 became law in California, authorizing a new seal graduating seniors will be able to earn for their high school diplomas. Called the Seal of Civic Engagement, it will honor meritorious service and must be earned like the Seal of Bi-literacy—which recognizes fluency in multiple languages—and the Golden State Seal Merit Diploma—which recognizes overall academic excellence.

The legislation is an effort to revive civics education in California. By 2021, the Department of Education is expected to determine who will be eligible and the criteria for awarding the seal. The challenge will be to find a balance between encouraging students to get involved civically while also maintaining focus on accomplishments that earn the attention of colleges and employers.

Injustice?

The Strange and Curious Case of Albert Joseph Moyer IV Continued . . . Facing the Triad

Justice has never been blind when it comes to race in America. This reality is a searing and ever-present thought in the minds of Albert Joseph Moyer IV and his family as he awaits sentencing in a Riverside County jail on six felony counts, including Attempted Involuntary Manslaughter, related to a 2013 incident of domestic violence. Despite Moyer’s conviction, questions remain regarding his innocence as a result of evidence that jurors were not allowed to hear at trial.

Although Moyer has no previous felony convictions which should weigh in his favor, that reality provides little solace while he anxiously awaits the judge’s decision, mindful the odds are against him. As a special report on sentencing by Florida’s Herald Tribune titled, Bias on the Bench noted, “Blacks were first at the mercy of slave masters. Then came Jim Crow segregation and the Ku Klux Klan. Now, prejudice wears a black robe.”

It’s been half a century since the Civil Rights movement, yet blacks are still sentenced to harsher punishment than whites and it not only happens in Florida. A report released in June 2016, by the Sentencing Project titled, The Color of Justice: Racial and Ethnic Disparity in State Prison, confirmed this.

According to the report, “African Americans are incarcerated in state prisons across the country at more than five times the rate of whites, and at least ten times the rate in at least five states. As noted in the report, “The particular

“Decades of research have shown that the criminal courts sentence black defendants more harshly than whites.”
- New York Times Editorial

drivers of disparity may be related to policy, offending, implicit bias, or some combination.”

Regardless of what has driven this phenomenon, the reality should not only be disturbing to African Americans and Hispanic communities impacted by such disparities but to all members of a civil society that professes to rest on the foundation of equal justice under the law. A question posed in the report really helped drive home this point, “One has to wonder whether there would have been more of an urgency to understand and remedy the disparity directly had the ratios been reversed?”

The truth is the racial disparity in regard to incarceration has been baked into the criminal justice system for generations and according to the Sentencing Project, California is among the top ten states in the nation with the highest black/white differential.

Analyses from a number of studies have reached very similar conclusions—“a sizable proportion of racial disparities in prison cannot be explained by criminal offending.” Dozens of studies have identified three recurrent explanations. Firstly, policies and practices that drive disparity; the role of implicit bias and stereotypes in decision making; and finally, structural disadvantages in minority communities that are associated with high rates of criminal activity.

The report also highlighted multiple points in the criminal justice system where race seems to play a role, and how such disparities mount as individuals like Moyer, are pushed through the criminal justice process. This normally begins at the point of arrest, as noted in previous reports

Homicide in the City of San Bernardino

S. E. Williams
Contributor

When the newly released FBI report, Crime in the U.S., confirmed the number of homicides in California had increased in 2016 for the second consecutive year, and the City of San Bernardino rated second among municipalities with the highest murder rates, it once again focused attention on a devastating period in the city's history.

Yet, the State of California and cities like San Bernardino were far from national aberrations. On average in 2016, the nation's homicide rate increased by 8 percent. Between 2014 and 2016, the nation's homicide rate increased by a combined total of 20 percent. In addition, according to the FBI, the country's 2015 to 2016 violent crime rate increase of 3.4 percent was the largest, single year increase in 25 years.

The Crime in the U.S. (CIUS) Report, which covers the period January through December 2016, reaffirmed the 2015 increase in violent crime after years of decline, had continued through a second year. The Justice Department also confirmed the increases in 2015 and 2016, each represented the largest single-year increases in the violent crime rate since 1991.

In commenting on the findings, U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions noted, "For the sake of all Americans, we must confront and turn back the rising tide of violent crime." He added, "The Department of Justice is committed to working with our state, local and tribal partners across the country to deter violent crime, dismantle criminal organizations and gangs, stop the scourge of drug trafficking, and send a strong message to criminals that we will not surrender our communities to lawlessness and violence."

The new CIUS report also corrected numbers reported in 2015 to reveal an even more concerning picture of violent crime committed that year. Violent crime in 2015 actually increased by 3.3 percent versus the 3.1 percent as originally reported.

The 2016 CIUS report also corrected the number of homicides in 2015, and as a result, confirmed the homicide rate had actually increased 11.4 percent over the previous year.

As noted in last week's Voice report titled, "San Bernardino Rates Second Among California Cities with the Highest Murder Rates," although homicides increased nationally and in California for the second consecutive year in 2016, the increase impacted some cities more than others. The data also pointed to a direct correlation between high rates of homicides and poverty. As stated, "Cities with low rates of poverty have very few, if any homicides at all. On the other hand, cities with high rates of poverty experience high rates of murder." 86 percent of the cities in California with the highest murder rates in 2016, also experienced high rates of poverty, including 35 homicides in 2016, the good news is, it appears the tide is turning. The comprehensive resource guide, City Rating's 2017 Crime projections, predicted the City of San Bernardino will end 2017 with approximately 22 incidents of murder/manslaughter, a projected 44 percent decrease in homicides when compared to 2016. The 2017 murder/manslaughter projection, according to City Rating, was projected from 14 years of actual data.

A reduction in San Bernardino's year over year homicide rate is certainly good news; however it offers little comfort to the families of San Bernardino murder victims like 33 year-old Tiburcio Madrigal Cisneros, who was kidnapped from his home on North Mountain View Avenue and murdered in February; or the families of San Bernardino teacher Karen Smith and her eight year-old student, Jonathan Martinez who were victims of a murder-suicide in April; or the family of 23-year-old Gregory Adkins who on the night of September 7, was shot at an apartment complex on Date Street and later in other California cities like Oakland that experienced a 30 percent decrease in homicides, Stockton experienced a 55 percent decrease in homicides, and Richmond that experienced a reduction in homicides of nearly 63 percent.

For the program to have the best chance of success, five factors must be considered. They include and are not limited to: a thorough, in-depth risk analysis; communication that is both direct and respectful; intensive, relationship-based management; targeted enforcement based on procedural justice; and finally, a continuous and, closely coordinated city-wide strategy to reduce shootings/homicides. In addition, community involvement is essential to the program's viability.

In May, the city announced plans to begin its search for a crime intervention manager to lead the program. The manager's responsibilities are expected to include planning, organizing and the statistical analysis of crime intervention procedures. In addition, he/she will v

"Where there is no human connection, there is no compassion. Without compassion, then community, commitment, loving-kindness, human understanding, and peace all shrivel. Individuals become isolated, the isolated turn cruel, and the tragic hovers in the forms of domestic and civil violence."

- Susan Vreeland

the City of San Bernardino.

Despite the direct, data driven correlation between poverty and violent crime in America, President Trump and U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions appear to have ignored that glaring implication and chose instead to push the same harsh, get tough on crime approach that produced such disastrous results in many low-income communities across the nation.

In May for example, Sessions issued a mandate for all federal prosecutors nationwide to charge suspects with the 'most serious offense' they can prove. "Prosecutors should charge and pursue the most serious, readily provable offense," he proclaimed at the time and continued, "... those that carry the most substantial guidelines sentence, including mandatory minimum sentences."

As discouraging as violent crime/homicide results were over the previous two years at the national, state and local levels, the recent spike in violent crime is still far less impacting than the previous peaks experienced in the early 1990's.

Although the City of San Bernardino experienced succumbed to his injuries.

Such inexplicable violence scars both the families and the community. In regard and in the City of San Bernardino, citizens have joined forces with the police department to help change their destiny.

In October, 2016 at the behest of the organization, Inland Congregations United for Change, city council members voted 4-0, to move forward with a crime prevention approach, Operation Ceasefire, that can be specifically tailored for the city. The approval came after a year of protests led by the Inland Congregations for Change on the heels of a 2015 study by the city's police department and elected officials regarding how the program had been implemented in selected cities across the county.

When the council reached agreement to move forward with the initiative, Mayor Carey Davis explained, "The city has tried other programs with limited success and it's left a residual impact on the community, so I think we owe it to the city to put forward something that is sustainable and that we can document and report."

Operation Ceasefire has seen very encouraging results with citizen groups while also managing staff.

For the most part, the program's advocate, Inland Congregations United for Change, is encouraged by the city's progress on the initiative, though allegedly there was some concern expressed about the organization not being consulted when the crime intervention manager job description was developed by city officials.

According to city officials, "The Ceasefire Program seeks to reduce violent crime and its effects on the community through methods other than traditional law enforcement approaches." It will not replace traditional law enforcement but instead, provide alternative methods within that context. The success of the program accordingly, will rely heavily on the performance of those involved, especially the community intervention program manager.

Funding for this effort will be provided by proceeds from Measure Z sales taxes approved by voters in 2008.

The reduction in homicides in the City of San Bernardino as predicted for 2017, will hopefully see even greater reductions in the coming years as Operation Ceasefire is fully implemented and the much hoped-for reduction in the city's homicide rate is more fully realized.

Riverside Seeks Rose Parade Float Volunteers

Riverside

For the first time in several decades, Riverside residents will have an opportunity to help construct a Rose Parade float.

“Riverside residents have expressed great interest in helping to build the first float from Riverside in nearly 60 years,” Mayor Rusty Bailey said. “It’s an exciting time for our city, and I encourage anyone who wants to be a part of this amazing process to go to the website and secure their spot in this great group of volunteers.”

According to city officials, dry decorating day will be held on Saturday, November 18 and Sunday, November 19 from 8am to 4pm in Irwindale. Floral decorating days will be Tuesday, December 26 through Saturday, December 30 from 8am to 10:30pm, also in Irwindale. A final shift will begin at 10:30 pm on December 30 and continue until the float is completed, including, if necessary, into the morning of December 31.

Shifts on dry decorating days are four hours long, and shifts on floral decorating days are eight hours long in the morning/afternoon and 6.5 hours in the afternoon/evening. The final shift on December 30 will continue until the float is completed, regardless of the hour. Volunteers are responsible for their own transportation and must bring a pair of scissors.

Those who wish to have a role in the float’s development but cannot travel to Irwindale will be able to play a part as well. During the Festival of Lights, the City of Riverside will provide an opportunity on the Main Street Mall for people to honor a person who has made a difference in their lives by writing a message on a plastic tube that will contain flowers on the Riverside Rose Parade float, bringing the float to life.

This effort, which includes a suggested $5 donation, enables local people to know that their message is part of the float as they watch the January 1 parade, either in person or on television. A booth will be available for this purpose on Main Street Mall between Ninth Street and Mission Inn Avenue in downtown Riverside, Thursdays-Sundays from November 24 to December 17. The booth will be open 5 to 10pm Thursdays and Sundays, and 5 to 11pm Fridays and Saturdays. Funds from this effort will be used to defray the cost of the float effort, which has been funded by private donations.

Riverside’s 2018 float celebrates 25 years of The Mission Inn Hotel & Spa’s annual Festival of Lights, which has drawn millions of people to Riverside. The float is also designed to thank Duane and Kelly Roberts, Keepers of the Inn, who have invested so much in the historic hotel and the Festival of Lights and helped promote Riverside as a destination.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS:

If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <http://www.altisource.com/MortgageServices/DefaultManagement/TrusteeServices.aspx> using the file number assigned to this case 2017-01572-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.

in the Voice regarding the Moyer case, to the final point of sentencing and imprisonment—where Moyer currently stands at the threshold.

On February 27, 2017, the California Legislative Analyst's Office (LAO) issued an Overview of Felony Sentencing in California. The report referred to the “sentencing triad” applied under determinate sentencing (where individuals, like Moyer, receive fixed terms and are released after serving those terms). Under determinate sentencing, statute specifies low, medium and high terms of incarceration, known as the “sentencing triad,” presents sentencing options for each offense. For example, first-degree burglary is punishable by a term of two, four or six years.

According to the LAO, individuals like Moyer, who are convicted of multiple offenses, receive terms for each offense and can be required to serve them consecutively or concurrently. In determining whether terms must be served consecutively, various criteria are considered, such as whether the crimes were committed at different times or places.

For consecutive terms, offenders generally serve an amount of time equal to one of the triad terms for the offense that would yield the longest term. In addition, they must serve one-third of the middle triad term for each of the other offense. However, if an offender is allowed to serve the terms concurrently, they will only serve an amount of time equal to one of triads in the longest term.

Albert Moyer III, father of the accused noted how the judge in his son's case had stated, “that the lesser charges would run concurrent.” Meanwhile, the District Attorney purportedly told Moyer's attorney Acer Chiang, he planned to ask for the maximum sentence of ten years.

Individuals like Moyer who have no previous felony conviction can, “generally be sentenced to county jail and could be required to serve part of their sentence being supervised in the community by county probation.” Sentencing in the Moyer case will be rendered in the Riverside Superior Court on Tuesday, November 14.

Moyer III expressed sentiments echoed by African American fathers and mothers around the nation, “that the punishment should fit the crime.”

From the beginning of this case, it appeared Moyer was set up for failure and conviction. It began with the action/inaction of the officers on the scene who never tested either the victim or the accused for alcohol/drug consumption although they both admitted to drinking, who also failed to test the blood splatters found throughout the apartment, and never weighed the version of events provided by Moyer in their decision to arrest Moyer rather than both or the alleged victim, even though Moyer had lacerations to his face and required medical attention while the alleged victim refused medical care.

Next, the district attorney stacked on a plethora of felony charges with overlapping definitions, in an attempt, as it appeared to many, to secure a conviction at any cost, particularly after Moyer was offered and refused two plea deals only to have the District Attorney subsequently up the ante to include the charge of Attempted Murder.

Next, the judge allowed the alleged victim's testimony at the preliminary hearing to be entered in evidence during Moyer's trial even though the alleged victim's statements during that testimony contradicted previous statements she had given to police/investigators and because she is now deceased, Moyer's attorney could not cross examine her. On the other hand, the judge would not allow any evidence regarding the alleged victim's abuse of prescription and street drugs and alcohol abuse; or records of her hospitalization for the same; or official records of her arrest history for the same aberrant and aggressive behaviors Moyer always claimed caused him to react to her unexpected attack in self-defense.

Finally, there is the jury's verdict. At least two jurors reported confusion in relation to the number of charges that appeared, from a layperson's perspective, to overlap and as a result, felt compelled to find him guilty on most counts because of the similarities in the charges. In addition, according to one juror, although the judge was asked for clarity—it was not provided.

Moyer's future hangs in the balance of a tilted judicial system. As indicated in The Color of Justice Report, an abundance of research has confirmed beliefs about how, “dangerousness and threats to public safety overlap with individual perceptions about people of color.”

Research has found that, “assumptions by key decision makers in the justice system influence outcomes in a biased manner.” Also, research on pre-sentence reports revealed that people of color are frequently given harsher sanctions because they are perceived as, imposing a greater threat to public safety and are therefore deserving of greater social control and punishment.”

The data speaks for itself. Although African Americans are less than 14 percent of the nation's population, the Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Blacks represent fully 38 percent of the nation's state prison populations.

The Moyer family is determined their loved one must not become another statistic in a criminal justice system never designed to render justice to Black men.
