What We Lost in the Fire

Saturday evening my mother Assemblymember Brown called to invite me to join a delegation of her colleagues at a briefing on the Blue Cut Fire, a wildfire that scorched 37,020 acres in West Cajon Valley destroying 105 homes and 216 outbuildings, and leaving tens of thousands of residents displaced for days. She had already been on the ground at the assistance center talking to residents affected by the disaster and meeting the first responders who bravely fought to save as many communities and lives as they could. And she had also seen some of the major destruction as well. “We lost The Summit,” she said. The landmark Route 66’s Summit Inn Restaurant, located at the crest of the 15 Freeway, was completely destroyed.

While I didn’t tour with the group the next morning, I did spend the afternoon with photographer Benoit Malphettes documenting the destruction and talking to the fire and safety crews who were still on the ground. We photographed what was left of homes as well as the charred landscape on Highway 138 before making our way to the town of Wrightwood whose entire population of 5,000 had been evacuated and allowed to return to their homes just the day before. Located east of that mountain town is Lone Pine Canyon bordered by the Blue Ridge running along the San Andreas Fault. At the time of our visit spots of trees on the ridge were still smoldering and the air was full of wind-whipped ash. A fire crewmember warned us to be careful as we drove along Lone Pine Canyon Road. “This is an historic area,” she told me as she pointed to a small red house in the middle of the canyon, “you should get some pictures of that.” I didn’t realize it at the time, but she was pointing to one of the oldest homesteads in San Bernardino County, and the remnants of one of our region’s oldest buildings.

Clyde Ranch, originally a 160-acre cattle ranch, was purchased by the Clyde family from one of the county’s early Mormon settlers in 1862. They built a small cabin on the site to house their large family of eleven. Over the

Blue Cut Fire—Recovery, Cautions and Victims' Relief

San Bernardino

The Blue Cut Fire is now fully contained but in its wake is a swath of devastation and a community struggling to recover.

The Blue Cut Fire started a week ago Tuesday at approximately 10:36 a.m. in the Cajon Pass near Kenwood Avenue, west of Interstate 15. The flames quickly spread across Cajon Creek and grew into a large wildland fire.

During the dangerous fire fight railroad lines, local roads, Highway 138 and Interstate 15 were closed, as was a large evacuation area that included Lytle Creek, Wrightwood, Summit Valley, Baldy Mesa, Phelan and Oak Hills—approximately 36,000 residents were forced to leave the area.

At the peak of the fire fight more than 2,684 personnel from all over the country worked together to contain it. By the time the fire was largely contained it burned through 37,020 acres and destroyed 105 homes.

The cause of the fire is still unknown and investigators are asking for the public's help. If you saw or heard anything, have photos or videos, officials ask that you call We tip at (800) 47-ARSON or submit your tip on line at <http://wetip.com/>.

In the wake of the Blue Cut Fire, San Bernardino County District Attorney Mike Ramos warned fire victims to be award so they are not to be victimized a second time. He cautioned them to be on alert for criminal types determined to perpetrate scams and fraud at the expense of fire victims.

In the wake of such disasters, contractors often go door to door in the impacted neighborhoods offering to clean up and/or provide construction services. Most of these contractors will be legitimate; however, there are also a lot of scam artists out there.

Homeowners should also watch for price gouging. For at least 30 days after an emergency is declared businesses and individuals are not allowed to increase prices by more than ten percent for rental houses, hotels/motels, food and drink (for humans and animals), tools, construction materials, etc. The rule extends to 180 days for emergency cleanup and reconstruction services. Homeowners should also save copies of all estimates and receipts.

Fire victims should also understand the role of public adjusters who seek to represent them in their dealings with insurance companies. The adjusters get a percentage of the money an insurer pays for any loss. Remember, public adjusters must be licensed and can be checked with the Department of Insurance. Ramos also warned of vendor fraud, charity scams, fraudulent contractors and fake disaster officials. For additional information visit wp.sbcounty.gov/cao/countywire/?cat=18.

As families began their long journeys toward recovery, the nonprofit Community Foundation has encouraged everyone to help the fire victims to the extent that they can by donating to the Blue Cut Fire Relief Fund. The Inland Empire United Way established the Fire Relief Fund in collaboration with other community and nonprofit partners for the collection of financial donations to help residents impacted by the Blue Cut Fire. The Community Foundation, which serves both San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, committed the first $100,000 to the fund.

"We are deeply concerned about the High Desert community and the devastation we are witnessing in the wake of this horrific fire," said Dr. Jonathan Lorenzo Yorba, President and CEO of The Community Foundation. "By providing this grant, we hope to inspire more giving to the Fire Relief Fund at the Inland Empire United Way, and to support the recovery efforts of the many nonprofit organizations that are providing critical services to fire victims in our region."

Contributions will be used to address the short and long-term needs of those affected by the fire. Also, the United Way has expressed its commitment to working with other local nonprofits and service providers to identify the greatest needs and best resources for helping the community recover in the weeks and months ahead.

Donations can be made online at www.IEUW.org/help or by a check made payable to Inland Empire United Way. Checks can be mailed to: IEUW Fire Fund, 9644 Hermosa Avenue, Rancho Cucamonga, CA 91730.

The Inland Empire United Way is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization with a long-standing track record for responsibly managing funds and assisting those in need in our community.

The San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools would like to wish students, families, teachers, and staff a successful and safe 2016-17 school year.

Federal Judge to Rule on New Vaccination Law

San Diego

A federal judge is expected to make a decision this week on whether to block California's new immunization law, SB277.

The law, which became effective July 1, made it mandatory for all students who attend public or private schools or child care centers to be vaccinated against several serious, communicable diseases. The law impacts all students with the exception of those with a medical exemption.

Previous to the law's implementation, parents were able to send their unvaccinated children to public and private schools and child care centers without immunizations if they were opposed to vaccinations based on their personal beliefs.

A Sacramento advocacy group, Education 4 All, was disappointed with the delay. They had filed for a temporary restraining order hoping to block the law's implementation before California schools opened this year. The restraining order was requested as part of the group's lawsuit that is seeking to overturn the law.

The lawsuit was filed July 1 against the California Department of Education and other state agencies. In the complaint Education 4 All, among others, claimed the law violates the right to education guaranteed in the California Constitution. If the judge rules in favor of the complainants and the restraining order is authorized, the injunction would temporarily reinstate the personal belief exemption to vaccination requirements until the lawsuit is settled.

The case cites a 1971 decision by the California Supreme Court that determined society "... has a compelling interest in affording children an opportunity to attend school." The plaintiffs further asserted the mandates of SB277 denies thousands of children access to schools and day care centers and as a result, is placing them in the, "... separate and unequal position of learning in isolation, in permanent quarantine." The plaintiffs further asserted that as a result of the law, parents are irreparably harmed, with no adequate remedy at law.

The state on the other hand has expressed its belief that for years the courts have upheld the state's right to enact vaccination requirements in the interest of public health.

Healthcare Reform: Why Your Vote Counts

Your vote is your voice. When we vote, we are actually telling elected officials and lawmakers how we feel about education, public safety, social security, health care, and other important issues.

No doubt about it, the Affordable Care Act, (also called Obamacare), is one of the most influential and controversial laws up for debate in this presidential election. Should we build on the law, repeal it, or scrap it and start over? Voters have a lot to gain -- or lose -- when health care reform is on the table.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, or Obamacare, was passed in 2010 and upheld by the Supreme Court in 2012 and 2015. Its goals: make health care more affordable, make sure as many Americans as possible are insured, and shut down generally terrible practices by insurance companies.

Obamacare also instituted a huge new change to the health care system in this country: the individual mandate. This change aims to drive down the cost of health care for everyone by avoiding the expensive current situation, where taxpayers pay for uninsured people's care.

Why should you care? Because you or someone you know probably got health insurance because of Obamacare. The percentage of young people without health insurance is now the lowest it's been since 1997. More than 4.5 million young adults (ages 18 to 34) have gained insurance under the ACA.

Research has shown that the percentage of 18-25 year olds with mental health disorders who actually got mental health treatment has increased by 5 percentage points since Obamacare went into effect.

Studies show that Millennials will totally influence the future of health care (medical apps, anyone?), and your vote will have an impact in the very near future.

Remember: there is power in numbers, and when we vote and get our family members to vote, we can truly make a difference. If you don't vote for what you believe in, others will -- and you may not like the outcome.

Lastly, voting is a way of honoring our history! As long as our country has existed, there have been people who didn't want us to vote. There were several freedom fighters that stood up for the right to vote. Well, those times may seem ancient, but there are still people today who don't want us to vote. It's now our turn to stand up and vote to preserve the honor of those who went before us.

Solving San Bernardino's Violence Problem

You are the ones who can solve this," said Rev. Norman Copeland of St. Paul AME Church as he addressed the mayor and city council at Mondays council meeting in San Bernardino. He was acting as one of the many speakers during a presentation by Inland Congregation United for Change (better know as ICUC) regarding Measure Z tax money for violence intervention and prevention. Sergio Luna, an ICUC organizer, presented the council several documents with over 1,000 signed petitions from voters demanding a change in the direction the city leaders are following to fight crime and violence.

I wish to add my voice as a member of the community to the calls for the mayor and council to act and not wait for other cities to solve our violence problem. We did not elect you to wait on other cities to solve their violence problems before you attempt to solve ours. While I understand the need to gather information and data, no two situations are alike, and this urgent situation requires your action now. Some of you have even stated you have visited other cities but that "more study is needed before any commitments could be made." According to Ryan Hagen of the Sun Newspaper, "you have a city that has over 44 homicides this year which is one more than were killed all of last year, including the 14 killed in the December 2nd terrorist attack."

As I watched the televised council meeting from home I found myself agreeing with Rev.

Copeland's remarks, " We are the ones dealing with the pain of the loss to grandmothers, fathers, nieces" from these senseless killings. Rev Copeland is speaking to you also as a pastor of St. Paul AME Church with a 112-year history of service and activism in this community, and almost half of his members reside in every ward of the city. So when he says we are the ones who can solve the problem he is speaking from a reference point of proven history of people who are willing to lead and not follow.

According to the city's website: the voters of San Bernardino approved Measure Z on November 7, 2006. The measure enacted a .25% district tax for a period of 15 years, beginning April 1, 2007. Voters also approved the advisory Measure YY, which stated that the proceeds of Measure Z "be used only to fund more police officers and support personnel, and to fund anti-gang and anti-crime operations, including drug resistance education and supervised after-school youth activities." Measure Z Citizens Oversight Committee Members are: Andy Machen, Gary Walbourne, Robert "Bob" Evans, Matthew Martel, Rev. Bronica Martindale, John Maxwell, Phillip M. Savage III and Howard Grossman.

In the Oversight Committee agenda meeting of 3/4/2015 it appears that 100% of Measure Z money in the year 2012 was used to help fund the Police Department's budget, with none being spent on intervention and prevention programs, which is not what the voters wanted to happen.

Having been a leader in both the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, a board member of the Boys and Girls Club, a Sunday School teacher, raising four children of my own with their friends included, and having served 12 years on the Board of Education, I know the value and investment of intervention and prevention programs.

I do not think the request made by ICUC is unreasonable.

In my years as coordinator of Kaiser Permanente's Summer Youth Employment Program I learned the quickest way to get a student to learn the value of education and being a productive citizen in the community was getting a paycheck. I would like to see a collaborative effort by the city, school district, and private companies that do business in the city, establishing an employment program for city youth allowing them to work in various departments in the city, especially the Police Department. It is time we grow our own employees who want to live, work, raise their family, and spend money in the city.

Now that you know the problem and have done your research, now is the time to put a plan of action together and ACT to address the concerns of the citizens you took an oath to protect. Like Rev. Copeland said, you can solve this problem.

Higher Minimum Wage May Reduce Crime

Washington D.C.

Between 79 and 100 million Americans, almost one in every three adults, have a criminal record of some kind. Also, nearly half of all children in America have a parent with a criminal record.

Having a criminal record makes securing employment almost impossible no matter how minor or how old the record is; and even if one's arrest never led to a conviction. As a result, a parent's criminal record can have a long lasting negative impact on the economic well-being of children.

A report published by the White House this year, Economic Perspectives on Incarceration and the Criminal Justice System, suggested that a 10 percent increase in wages for non-college educated men can lead to a 10 to 20 percent reduction in crime rates.

The Council of Economic Advisers (CEA), an agency within the Executive Office of the President that advises the president on economic policy, conducted cost-benefit tests of three policies related to crime, one of which was raising the minimum wage.

Drawing on literature that found higher wages for low-income individuals reduces crime by providing viable and sustainable employment, CEA determined that raising the minimum wage to $12 by 2020 would result in a three to five percent crime reduction (250,000 to 510,000 crimes) and a societal benefit of $8 to $17 billion dollars.

The report further highlighted how crime and poverty are correlated and criminal behavior is often motivated by a lack of economic opportunity. "If legitimate employment opportunities with sufficient wages are available," it stressed, "then the necessity and relative attractiveness of criminal activity will decline." Ultimately, according to researchers, higher wages for low-skilled workers reduce both property and violent crime, as well as crime among adolescents.

In April, California Governor Jerry Brown signed legislation to raise California's minimum wage to $15 per hour by 2022. Also that same day, the governor of New York signed similar legislation. Together California and New York became the first states in the nation to do so.

2016 Congressional Elections—No Contests

Riverside

The Center for Responsive Politics, a nonprofit, nonpartisan and independent organization that tracks and analyzes the influence of money in politics, recently assessed the influence money will ultimately have on this year's congressional elections.

The Center reported that most congressional contests in the 2016 election cycle are not really contests at all. Despite the illusion of electoral competition it explained, many of those contests may already be decided.

The Center based this assessment on two key factors. Firstly, better funded campaigns nearly always win; and secondly—incumbents also usually win. In addition, these two points often reinforce each other as incumbents most always have an easier time raising money than their challengers.

This year, 28 of the 34 (82 percent) Senate races are either uncontested or feature an incumbent. And as expected, incumbents are outraising their challengers. The same is true in at least 90 percent of this year's House races.

Occasionally, there are well funded candidates who manage to make races competition but that is far from the rule and it gets much more difficult as the incumbent's financial advantage increases. For example, this year in the 284 congressional races where the challenger is being outraised, the incumbent has raised more than twice as much money as his/her challenger; and in 243 of those races, the incumbent actually has a three-fold advantage in fundraising.

There are only four congressional races this year, barely one percent, where the challenger is actually outraising the incumbent. They include three House races, one each in California, Florida and New Jersey; and a Wisconsin Senate race. In all four instances the incumbents are Republican.

There are however a number of open seat races this year where the money battle is more even. In the House, there are 45 open seat races, including five no contest races (races where no one filed to run against the incumbent) and five open seat races in the Senate.

State Revenues Down Four Months in a Row

Sacramento

In July, California state revenues were down for the fourth month in a row—the revenue collections for the month were ten percent less than projected.

In mid-May Governor Brown revised the two-year budget plan to help the state manage in light of the lower tax revenues. At the time, the governor cautioned the state needed to prepare for a recession and avoid major spending in light of the already flattening tax receipts. The budget plan revision considered revenue shortfalls in both April and May.

The four months of revenue shortfalls came on the heels of strong revenue performances earlier in the year. Revenues exceeded budget projections in February by nearly $440 million and again in March by almost $220 million.

The positive trend in revenue collections took a radical turn in April when the state's revenue collection for that month fell by almost $1.2 billion—fully 6.6 percent short of the state's December projections. The negative trend continued with a $150 million shortfall in May followed by a $980 million revenue shortage in June.

Sacramento has offered a variety of explanations for the shortfalls including the number of workdays in July being fewer than usual and as a result, reduced the number of days that taxes were withheld from workers. Consideration must also be given to volatility in the stock market earlier this year that included concerns over growth in China, drops in the price of oil, overall weakness in the global economy and the impact of Brexit.

Financial experts report sudden shifts in the market can sometimes have an impact on revenue collections down the line because big investors have to project their earnings when filing quarterly statements. However, the good news is that with recent improvement in the markets California will eventually get its share—possibly enough to offset the revenue losses experienced in the last four months.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Moreno Valley College Awarded Grant for Talent Search Program

Moreno Valley - Moreno Valley College was recently awarded a five-year, $1.2 million grant from the United States Department of Education in support of the college's Education Talent Search Program.

The Talent Search initiative identifies and assists individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds who have the potential to succeed in higher education. The program provides academic, career, and financial counseling to its participants and encourages them to graduate from high school and continue on to and complete their postsecondary education. The program also encourages individuals who have not completed education programs at the secondary or postsecondary level to re-enter.

The ultimate goal is to increase the number of youth from disadvantaged backgrounds who complete high school and enroll in and complete their postsecondary education.

San Bernardino County Sheriff Department's Covert Stingray Operation

Contributor

Late last May, technology news and information website Ars Technica, published a startling report that exposed the covert use of cell-site simulators or stingrays by the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department.

“As technology improves, privacy as evaporate; the best we can hope for

It is highly probable a number of individuals were arrested and/or convicted based on evidence secretly obtained by the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department with this telephone monitoring technology—purportedly, in some instances, the department may even have provided misleading information regarding how the evidence was acquired.

Cell site simulators, commonly referred to as “stingrays” mimic cell towers and are frequently used to determine where a cell phone is located. They also intercept phone calls and text messages. What is also concerning about how this technology works is that once it is deployed it not only has the ability to intercept information from the target phone—but from other phones in the vicinity as well.

And if this is not concerning enough, there are reports that at times police departments have purportedly provided misleading information regarding how stingray gathered evidence was obtained—falsely claiming it was provided by an informant.

Documents sent to Ars Technica (Ars) by the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department (SBCSD) in response to a public records request and recently reviewed by The Voice, showed that since the department acquired a stingray during the latter part of 2012, it used the equipment more than three hundred times between January 1, 2014 and May 7, 2015.

SBCSD, like other agencies who use this technology around the country, advised Ars it maintained a non-disclosure agreement (NDA) with the FBI that professed the agency would work with the local prosecuting authority to dismiss cases rather than reveal information in court about stingrays. However, on May 15, 2015, the FBI released a statement (published by Ars and reviewed by The Voice), that contradicted the NDA provided by SBCSD.

It read in part, “The NDA should not be construed to prevent a law enforcement officer from disclosing to the court or a prosecutor the fact that this technology was used in a particular case. Defendants have a legal right to challenge the use of electronic surveillance devices, and not disclosing their use could inappropriately and adversely affect a defendant's right to challenge the use of the equipment.” Previous to the release of this statement the Justice Department that oversees the FBI announced it was reviewing its stingray policy.

As part of its response to Ars, SBCSD also provided a template for a “pen register and trap and trace order” application. In the correspondence, county attorneys claimed it was a warrant application template.

San Bernardino, like other places in the country where stingrays are being deployed, typically go to a local judge and apply for a “pen register and trap and trace order.” Such orders are normally sealed and remain so even after the case is concluded, even though state law requires warrants be made available for public examination once served and complete.

Such orders initiated by SBCSD read in part, “Detective Name, a detective for the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department. hereby applies to the Court for an Order (1) authorizing the use of a PEN register on the telephone lines currently designated by the numbers; Telephone Number (The “Telephone Line”); (2) authorizing the use of a trap-and-trace device on the Telephone Line; and (3) requiring the disclosure of subscriber name and address, whether listed or unlisted for numbers called by the Telephone Line or numbers calling the Telephone Line; or found during investigation of this case upon oral or written demand of agents of the San Bernardino County Sherriff's Department.”

This order however, is very misleading because the type of information provided by communications companies in the pre-cell phone era, police can now obtain directly with the use of a stingray. The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) described the language used by SBCSD in the orders as “very unusual,” and told Ars, “The template is likely to mislead judges who receive applications based on it because it gives no indication that the Sheriff's Department intends to use a stingray.”

The ACLU's assessment was reinforced this July when a United States federal judge in New York rebuked the government's warrantless use of stingrays.

The appeals court judge threw out the evidence in question in the case, United States v. Raymond Lambis, and ruled the government could not use stingray equipment to locate a drug suspect, asleep in his apartment. As a result, the judge suppressed the evidence found in the man's bedroom—effectively putting an end to the case.

The federal judge strongly affirmed that the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution requires police to get a warrant to use a stingray.

“Absent a search warrant, the government may not turn a citizen's cell phone into a tracking device,” US District Judge William Pauley wrote.

Although this was the first such ruling in federal court, it came on the heels of a similar ruling made earlier this year by a judge in a state appeals court in Maryland.

... we know it will inevitably is the power to watch the watchers.”

- Big Brother is Watching by Tom Head

In the last couple of years stingrays have been the subject of increased scrutiny. A number of states including California, Washington, Virginia, Minnesota, and Utah, have mandated that a warrant be issued for use of this equipment.

In 2015, both the Homeland Security Department and the Department of Justice implemented new policies that now require that a warrant be obtained for the use of stingrays in most cases. In the case detailed above the stingray device was deployed by the Drug Enforcement Agency. In the warrant application issued in the United States v. Raymond Lambis case the agent stated, “. . . the prospective location information will be obtained by requiring the Service Provider to provide the information.”

In his ruling in this case the federal judge made it abundantly clear that not only is a warrant required for use of a stingray, but that the court authorizing the surveillance must be told that they are authorizing the use of a stingray.

In the federal ruling in the New York case the judge also addressed another sticky issue related to the use of stingrays. It involved the so called third-party doctrine which in essence states that citizens do not have a privacy interest in data they hand over to third parties like telephone companies for example. This

1979 Supreme Court ruling has been quoted as precedent by police agencies again and again to justify the use of information/evidence obtained by stingrays in other cases—herein lies a problem for the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department—and other jurisdictions.

Most of the requests for warrants that resulted in the use of stingrays either directly or by inference led judges to believe the warrants were authorizing the use of pen registration information and/or cell-site location information (CSLI) provided the telephone companies—cell site simulators or stingrays operate differently. Although a service provider may provide pen registration information/cell-site location information (CSLI) it only points officers in the general direction—it is the cell site simulator or stingray that takes officers directly to their subject of interest. As a result, the information or communication obtained via a stingray is not initiated by the user nor is it sent to a communications company—the stingray equipment in essence, allows the police to obtain information directly—it cuts the communications companies out of the loop; and as a result, the third-party doctrine referred to in the 1979 Supreme Court ruling does not apply.

With this in mind, San Bernardino County Sheriff John McMahon was asked by The Voice to comment on the department's use of stingrays and the recent ruling by the federal judge in New York in regards to what impact it might have on the criminal cases pending in San Bernardino County that may hinge on evidence secured as a result of the 300 plus times stingrays were used in San Bernardino County; in addition to how the ruling might impact the future use of stingrays in the county. McMahon declined to comment and instead referred The Voice to the county's legal department.

The legal department also failed to respond directly to The Voice's inquiry and instead provided a copy of the county's newly implemented temporary order regarding the Use of Cell-Site Simulators (stingrays). The guidelines are dated effective April 2, 2016. The policy reads in part, “. . . a search warrant supported by probable cause shall be obtained prior to use of a cell-site simulator. When making any application to a court, a deputy must disclose appropriately and accurately the underlying purpose and activities for which an order or authorization is sought. Applications for the use of a cell-site simulator must include sufficient information to ensure that the courts are aware that the technology may be used.”

Knowing the Department put a policy in place for the deployment of stingrays effective April 2, 2016, does little to explain the fate of the potentially hundreds of suspects arrested in San Bernardino whose cases were impacted by evidence questionably collected with stingray technology between January 1, 2014 and April 1, 2016.

On October 8, 2015, Governor Jerry Brown signed SB178, the landmark California Electronic Communications Privacy Act. The law became effective January 1. Described as the most comprehensive digital privacy law in the nation, it is supposed to assure that police go to a judge and secure a warrant before accessing electronic information about any citizen. The law requires a probable cause warrant for “all digital content, location information, metadata, and access to devices like cell phones.” Now, some are questioning whether SBCSD ever bothered to follow this law in regards to stingrays.

Ars Technica was established in 1998. It publishes news, reviews, and guides on issues such as computer hardware and software, science, technology policy, and video games.

Oh What a Night with the Social Lites

San Bernardino

On Saturday during a special event at the National Orange Show, the Social Lites, Inc. celebrated 60 years in the Inland Empire. The celebratory theme was "Be It Blue, Lavender, or Lace, These Are the Women of Style and Grace."

More than 200 guests attended the affair including Beautillion alumni, former program participants, community leaders, and various community organizations.

Masters of Ceremonies for the evening included the Honorable Rikke Van Johnson, Former San Bernardino City Councilman and Beautillion Knight 1973; and Anthony S. Blacksher, Professor of Sociology, and Sir Knight 1999. Dr. Reginald Woods, Senior Pastor, Life Changing Ministries of San Bernardino and Sir Knight 1976, offered the invocation. The evening's entertainment was provided by Edwonda White and Soul Brothers Band.

Los Angeles County Deputy District Attorney and Beautillion Sir Knight 1978, Robert Grace was the evenings keynote speaker. Grace reflected on how, as a young man growing up on the West Side of San Bernardino, women in The Social Lites, Inc. inspired him to go to college. "Education continues to be a road map to meaningful employment," he stressed.

Grace also shared how the Beautillion program provided himself and others with meaningful, lifelong experiences which included a trip out of the community during which they stayed in a nice hotel. They also attended cultural events, performed community service, and were awarded scholarships to help finance their education beyond high school. Grace also reminded attendees, "All lives matter, however, we need to know how important it is in the spirit of all lives matter, to remind others [that] "Black Lives Matter!"

Several awards were presented during the evening including a financial donation towards The Social Lites, Inc. 501 c3 scholarship foundation from the Riverside Chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi, Inc.; a recognition certificate from Assemblymember Cheryl Brown, who represents the 47th District; and San Bernardino 6th Ward Councilwoman Bessine Littlefield Richard was presented with a plaque from The Swans Club, just to name a few.

For over thirty years, this organization has raised funds by bringing the Ebony Fashion Show to the community annually. In addition, this organization was one of the first to donate a sizeable scholarship to California State University, San Bernardino; contributed to the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. statue located in downtown San Bernardino; and holds memberships with the NAACP and the Chamber of Commerce. Also, the group was recognized earlier this year by The San Bernardino League of Women Voters.

The 50th Beautillion Season will start the second weekend in October—mentoring young men toward a better future is their mission. For additional information regarding the upcoming Beautillion season, please contact Mrs. Bettye Brewster, President at (951) 204-0022 or Mrs. Helen Thomas, Correspondence (909) 854-7730. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

Note: Because the Beneficiary reserves the right to bid less than the total debt owed, it is possible that at the time of the sale the opening bid may be less than the total debt

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <http://www.altisource.com/MortgageServices/DefaultManagement/TrusteeServices.aspx> using the file number assigned to this case 2014-09164-CA. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

Note: Because the Beneficiary reserves the right to bid less than the total debt owed, it is possible that at the time of the sale the opening bid may be less than the total debt

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <http://www.altisource.com/MortgageServices/DefaultManagement/TrusteeServices.aspx> using the file number assigned to this case 2015-03715-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. CSUSB President Tomás Morales Named One of Nation's Most Influential Leaders

San Bernardino

Last week, California State University- San Bernardino president Tomás D. Morales was named by Latino Leaders Magazine, one of 2016's Most Influential Latino Leaders in the country.

Now in his fifth year as CSUSB's president, Morales was recognized for his successful efforts to improve college readiness in the Inland Empire while also increasing student retention and graduation rates at the university.

Others honored by the publication include actress Jessica Alba; California Congressman Xavier Becerra; Julian Castro, U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development; Nely Galan, entrepreneur, producer and author; Eric Garcetti, mayor of Los Angeles, Antonio Flores, president and CEO of the Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities (HACU); Maria Teresa Kumar, president and CEO of Voto Latino; Maria Hinojosa, journalist, radio and television producer; Rosie Rios, treasurer of the United States; Antonio Ramiro "Tony" Romo, quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys; and musician Carlos Santana.

"I'm deeply honored and touched to be listed among this group of outstanding and prominent Latinos who by their hard work, dedication and determination are making a difference in their communities, this great country and internationally, and also inspiring people of all ages to get involved," Morales said in a statement to reporters.

Morales is both innovative and determined to make a difference. He was instrumental in the introduction of the award-winning Coyote First STEP (CFS) Student Transition Enhancement Program, an initiative to increase college readiness and graduation rates for incoming first-year students. Under CFS, incoming freshmen live on campus in university housing for the duration of the three to four-week program while they complete courses and engage in activities designed to promote college success.

Under Morales' leadership, CSUSB is working with school districts in San Bernardino and Riverside counties to increase high school graduation rates and college readiness.

Morales and other educational and business partners lead the Southern California Initiative for Education and Prosperity, a collaborative consortium that consists of two universities, 11 community colleges and 67 school districts, along with county and business leaders. Its goal is to increase baccalaureate degree attainment. The consortium was the recipient of the governor's $5 million Innovation in Higher Education grant.

Annual Moreno Valley Family Reunion

The African American Coalition hosted the 4th Annual African American Family Reunion at Celebration Park in Moreno Valley last Saturday. Hundreds of community members came out to participate. Founded by Dr. Denise Fleming, Moreno Valley Unified School Board member and candidate for the mayor of the city, the coalition consists of many different organizations, entrepreneurs, community leaders and residents working together in one voice. The group meets monthly and organizes activities throughout the year including the Red & Black Ball in February.

years they played host to the Earp brothers, including Wyatt, who was known to be a frequent visitor to the ranch with his brother Virgil. Almost half a century later the family planted 70 acres of apple trees that became a popular and profitable orchard, and built a little red house closer to the road and a gas station for motorists. Over the years the cabin expanded, with the addition of bedrooms, a kitchen, and living room, eventually it became known as the Earp Cabin, in honor of the Clyde family's famous guests. The red house and gas station are still standing, but after the Blue Cut Fire last week, only the chimney of the cabin remains.

Unfortunately some things cannot be replaced, with the loss of the Summit Inn Restaurant and the Earp Cabin at the Clyde Ranch, important bits of our past are lost forever.
