My "Throwback Thursday" An Example of Constructive Protesting

Since I first published this piece at the end of 2014, there has been an ongoing national conversation about police shootings of unarmed African-Americans and there have been non-stop protests in response them, especially since most are now captured on video. In 2015 there were 102 fatal incidents. So far in 2016 there have been over 194, not including three in the past week in Charlotte, Tulsa, and San Diego. First published in December 2014, this piece reminds us what a constructive protest can achieve.

This morning I drove by the spot where Tyisha Miller took her last breath, the corner of Central and Brockton in Riverside, an intersection I drive by several times a week. And every time I pass the corner, or stop at the gas station I think of her. I think about that night she sat in her car in medical distress. I think of how her cousins and friends must have felt after they called for medical assistance but within a few minutes of the call - seven to be exact - four police officers had shot over 24 bullets into her car with 12 of them reaching their target, 3 of them fatal. And I think about the pain her parents felt and the outrage the community felt in the months and years after the horrific shooting of an innocent teenage girl in the heart of Riverside.

I remember that there were protests immediately after the shooting. National civil rights leaders converged on the city and participated in demonstrations. A diverse community joined in solidarity and instead of holding their collective breath, they "exhaled" yelling for justice. They demonstrated every week for a year. They shut down the 91 Freeway and protested in front of City Hall, making demands of their city leaders to insure that there was never another incident like the Miller shooting in their city.

We are quickly approaching the 16th anniversary of Tyisha's death on December 28 (now 18th), and a new wave of high profile use of force cases involving the police and citizens of African-American descent have sparked massive protests in cities across the nation with a message to our government that all lives matter, even those of young Black men and women. There must be accountability and as then - US Attorney General Eric Holder said in a Justice Department report on the Cleveland Police Department, "there needs to be genuine collaboration between police and the citizens they serve."

Riverside Welcomes Milky Mama

Riverside—Breast milk contains all the vitamins and nutrients a baby needs in the first six months of life. On September 24, Riverside welcomed a new enterprise heralded as the first-ever store to cater to the needs of breastfeeding mothers. The groundbreaking business was founded by Krystal Duhaney, a registered nurse and mother of two, who created the company following the birth of her first son. After returning to work, Duhaney experienced increased stress that led to a decrease in breast milk. Luckily, she was able to draw upon family recipes for lactation treats, which quickly helped her boost her milk supply. Realizing she could help other mothers to breastfeed, she created lactation cookies, lemonade, a tropical iced tea, and her signature chocolate brownies, which comprise Milky Mama's core product line. For more information about Milky Mama visit <http://www.milky-momma.com/>

In Pursuit of Justice

Washington, D.C.—Years after the near collapse of the American economy that was experienced as intensely in the inland region as it was in other communities around the nation, the United States Department of Justice (DOJ) continues to seek restitution from some of the institutions that allegedly participated in bringing about the crisis.

Recently, the DOJ demanded $14 billion dollars to settle a lawsuit it filed against Deutsche Bank for its alleged role in the collapse of the U.S. housing market. It was this collapse that laid the groundwork for the Great Recession. The bank vowed to fight the demand.

New Requirements for Public Meeting Notices, Public Records Requests and Parcel Tax Notification

Riverside

Legislation signed by California Governor Jerry Brown earlier this month provided additional flexibility and requirements to public agencies for the posting of public meeting information; responding to public records requests; and established added requirements for notification to non-resident property owners regarding new parcel taxes.

With the signing of AB 2257, sponsored by Assemblyman Brian Maienschein (R-San Diego), beginning in January 2019, school districts and other local government agencies will be able to fulfill public meeting notification requirements using the internet. The legislation further states an online meeting notice must provide a prominent, direct link to the current agenda and be posted in a consistent, visible location on an agency's homepage.

The agendas must be posted in an open format and be retrievable, downloadable, index-able and electronically searchable by commonly used internet search applications; platform independent and machine readable; and available to the public free of charge and without any restriction that would impede the reuse or redistribution of the agenda. The 1953 Ralph M. Brown Act should be updated to account for these and other technology driven changes.

The legislation also allows agencies added flexibility to respond to requests made under the California Public Records Act. It gives public agencies the authority to direct requests to online records when available rather agencies physically retrieving those records and making disclosure determinations for each new request. According to the legislation, agencies are authorized to post a response to a records request to its website. Under existing law, government agencies are required to respond to public records requests within ten days.

Protect Yourself and Family From West Nile Virus

In California, warm summer and fall nights and more outdoor activities often mean more mosquito bites. While mosquitoes leave an itchy reminder of their presence, there’s a more serious souvenir the bugs may leave behind: West Nile virus.

The majority of West Nile virus cases do not have symptoms, but 20 percent to 30 percent of people infected will have mild symptoms. Symptoms last for a few days and include fever, muscle aches, vomiting, joint pain and diarrhea. Only about one percent of cases are severe, known as neuroinvasive West Nile virus, and can cause seizures or meningitis.

Adults over 50 years of age and others with compromised immune systems, such as organ transplant recipients, are at a higher risk of a symptomatic West Nile virus infection.

When dealing with West Nile virus, prevention is your best bet. Fighting mosquito bites reduces your risk of getting this disease, along with others that mosquitoes can carry. The California Department of Public Health (CDPH) reported increased West Nile virus activity across the state and reported the first human death from West Nile virus in August. The state is investigating other suspected cases in humans and has detected the virus in birds and mosquitoes in 30 California counties.

In 2015 the California Department of Health reported 860 human West Nile virus infections in California and 53 deaths. The CDPH advises everyone to practice the “Three Ds.”

1. DEET – Apply insect repellent containing DEET, picaradin, oil of lemon eucalyptus or IR3535 according to label instructions. Repellents keep mosquitoes from biting. DEET can be used safely on infants and children two months of age and older.

2. DAWN AND DUSK – Mosquitoes bite in the early morning and evening, so it is important to wear proper clothing and repellent if outside during these times. Make sure doors and windows have tight-fitting screens to keep out mosquitoes. Repair or replace screens with tears or holes.

3. DRAIN – Mosquitoes lay their eggs on standing water. Eliminate or drain all sources of standing water around homes and properties, including buckets, old car tires, rain gutters, birdbaths and pet bowls. If a swimming pool is not being properly maintained, please contact the local mosquito and vector control agency. If West Nile virus symptoms arise after a mosquito bite, be sure to tell your health-care provider.

Palm Springs Approves Gun Control Initiative

Palm Springs

Late last Wednesday evening the Palm Springs City Council gave final approval to the city's controversial gun control ordinance. The battle over its approval was contentious and the vote was split three to two; but in the end—the gun control measure prevailed.

Scheduled to take effect in thirty days, the law established a number of requirements that include the need for gun owners to report lost or stolen guns to the police within 48 hours of the gun's disappearance; it requires guns not in the immediate control of the owner to have either a trigger lock or be kept in a locked container; and it requires concealed firearms or ammunition be kept out of unattended vehicles unless they are stored in a locked container or the vehicle's trunk. Those found in violation of the requirements could face misdemeanor charges and/or be fined $1,000.

The initial proposal included two additional recommendations, a ban on large-capacity magazines that can hold 10 or more rounds and a requirement that firearm merchants maintain an ammunition sales log. Those requirements were removed previous to the council's final vote.

The legislation was introduced by City Councilmember Geoff Kors shortly after the June massacre at the gay nightclub in Orlando Florida that left 49 people dead and 50 wounded—in addition to being a favored vacation destination, Palm Springs also has a large gay and lesbian population. Kors received support in passing the law from Mayor Robert Moon and Councilman J.R. Roberts.

Councilwoman Ginny Foat and Councilman Chris Mills voted against the ordinance. During Wednesday's meeting Foat declared, "How do you control morality and how do you control common sense by writing laws?" Both Foat and Mills also expressed their belief that the new law was an infringement on the rights of local homeowners.

When the gun control issue received its first vote of approval on September 8, Pastor Andrew Green of the Saint Paul in the Desert Episcopal Church seemed to sum up the sentiments of those in the community and on the council who favored the law, "I think the ordinances that are in line today are ones that can provide better safety with minimum kinds of intrusions for people. I'm not concerned with the debate on whether people should have guns or not, but I think safe care of weapons is an important civic responsibility."

Taking of the Waters

San Bernardino

During and the summer of 2016, reports indicated the water levels at Strawberry Creek in the San Bernardino Mountains were at record lows.

According to environmental organizations, the Center for Biological Diversity, the Story of Stuff Project and The Courage Campaign, the lack of water threatens local wildlife that are already struggling with the impact of the ongoing drought—a drought that forced an unprecedented state-wide water conservation effort.

In 2015, these groups joined forces and filed a lawsuit to stop the bottle-water giant Nestlé from drawing water from Strawberry Creek by shutting down the corporation's water pumping operation until its impact on the environment could be determined. In question, Nestlé's special use permit for four miles of pipeline and other structures used to tap Strawberry Canyon's spring water—the special use permit that actually expired Aug. 2, 1988 and was never renewed by the Forest Service.

On Wednesday, a federal judge ruled in favor of the U.S. Forest Service and declared Nestlé's permit for water-bottling operations is still legal. As a result, Nestlé will continue to draw nearly 100,000 gallons of water daily from the San Bernardino Mountains with a permit that cost the corporation only $524 per year. Nestlé was not named in the lawsuit.

The judge confirmed the Forest Service had received an application for renewal from Nestlé in May 1987 that was both timely and sufficient and ruled there was no legal holding that a special use permit can be invalidated because an agency [in this case the U.S. Forest Service] failed to act [to approve the renewal] within a reasonable time. It appears from the court's opinion—28 years is reasonable.

In a statement, Eddie Kurtz the Executive Director of the Courage Campaign Institute said, "Nestlé has been pulling a fast one for

The notice must include enough detail for the property owners to calculate the amount of the tax to be levied against his/her property; the method and frequency for collecting the proposed parcel tax; and the duration of time the parcel tax will be imposed. tobacco and marijuana use.

Growing up on a tobacco farm and having smoked cigarettes as a young adult, I learned quite a bit about tobacco. I specifically discovered while some people, such as myself were able to quit easily, not everyone can. Some of my siblings continue to smoke and have said they will carry on even if Prop 54 passes. They know the harmful effects and the high costs associated with smoking tobacco, but will find a way to decrease the impact of purchasing cigarettes by the pack.

While supporters of Prop 54 believe smoking tobacco is too costly on our healthcare system and a health hazard, the same supporters argue marijuana is too costly on our criminal justice system and should be legalized for medical and recreational use. I cannot comprehend the support for smoking marijuana yet being against smoking tobacco for nearly the same reasons.

I'm a huge fan of the blues and recall a song by the late Muddy Waters entitled, “Champagne and Reefer,” also referred to as marijuana. The lyrics went something like this:

*Yeah bring me champagne when I'm thirsty.
Bring me reefer when I want to get high.
Yeah bring me champagne when I'm thirsty.
Bring me reefer when I want to get high.
Well you know when I'm lonely.
Bring my woman set her right down here by my side.*

*Well you know there should be no law,
on people that want to smoke a little dope.
Well you know there should be no law,
on people that want to smoke a little dope.
Well you know it's good for your head,
And it relax your body don't you know.*

*Everytime I get high,
I lay my head down on my baby's breast.
Well you know I lay down be quiet,
Tryin' to take my rest.
Well you know she done hug and kiss me.
Says Muddy your one man that I love the best.*

*I'm gonna get high.
Gonna get high just as sure as you know my name.
Y'know I'm gonna get so high this morning.
It's going to be a cryin' shame.
Well you know I'm gonna stick with my reefer.
Ain't gonna be messin' round with no cocaine.*

Even though I'm aware of a number of African-Americans who mess around with marijuana (weed, joint, reefer), it's considered dope to most and should not be used because of its impacts as described in the song by Muddy Waters. We have countless other issues including smoking tobacco that are destroying our people and introducing another will hinder our communities even further.

I personally think those who want to raise the cost of tobacco products and legalize the use of marijuana are in it for monetary gain, in order to build their empires off the backs of misinformed impoverished people.

I witnessed Black farmers in Sanford, North Carolina lose their land because authorities who were regulating the sell of tobacco would not grant them access to seeds or tobacco plants to cultivate the crop. Consequently, Blacks were left with providing all of the labor to harvest tobacco on White-owned farms while dipping snuff, and smoking and chewing tobacco.

I'm afraid the promises being made to Blacks in California to support marijuana legalization and pay more out-of-pocket to stop smoking habits, is just another attempt to exhaust what little money the underprivileged have to further assist the wealthy.

We are now stuck with the adverse effects of tobacco-legalized products and the same will ring true for marijuana. Muddy's description of dope, getting high and resting, is the same today.

MINORITY REPORT

Riverside and San Bernardino County Sheriff Departments' Secret Collection of Biometric Information

S. E. Williams
Contributor

"While we are proud of our history regarding the use of cutting edge technologies to help law enforcement officers keep the public safe, announcing or publicizing specific crime fighting capabilities can be counterproductive to their success."

- Lieutenant Daniel D. Anne, Riverside County Sheriff Department & Lieutenant Noel Wilterding, San Bernardino County Sheriff Department

The Privacy Act of 1964 placed strict limitations on the ability of agencies to collect, in close, and use personal information maintained in records systems.

It required any agency to publish a System of Records Notice in order to disclose which categories of individuals have their information stored in the database and the type of data being collected. This requirement was established and required for projects that involve personal data as a way to both anticipate and mitigate the possibility of any potential overreach by government agencies.

In 2013, Riverside and San Bernardino

Counties began quietly collecting iris scans as part of a pilot program with the FBI; at the same time, it also incorporated the capture of facial scans to add to the FBI database—neither the iris pilot nor facial scanning programs have privacy impact assessments.

A report by The Verge in July quoted an FBI representative who said a 2014 preliminary privacy review of the San Bernardino County program determined the privacy assessment was unnecessary, "because the pilot was conducted with very limited participation for a limited period of time in order to evaluate iris technology."

Although The Voice/Black Voice News has

"In recent years, the Riverside and San Bernardino County Sheriff Departments arrested and built a facial recognition database of nearly 2.5 million individuals. The lack of public debate or oversight that we've been able to find is very troubling."

not independently confirmed this statement, it did confirm via a public records request with the California Department of Justice (Cal DOJ) in regards to the Riverside/San Bernardino Counties' participation in the Iris Project (IP) that the Memorandum of Understanding between the Cal DOJ and the FBI was for a limited period of time—one year, to be operational from September 2013 to September 2014; however today, two years beyond the September 2014 project expiration date, the program is still ongoing with no end date in sight.

When Cal DOJ was asked directly by The Voice/Black Voice News about privacy guidelines for the Iris Pilot it responded, "Regarding privacy guidelines, the California DOJ has no responsive records."

Also, in response to this paper's request, Cal DOJ provided a redacted copy of the Memorandum of Understanding that defined the counties participation in the FBI's Next Generation Identification (NGI) Iris Pilot (IP) program.

According to Cal DOJ, the FBI's Automated Fingerprint Identification System (IAFIS) originally implemented in July 1999 required enhancements to keep pace with technology. As a result, the FBI initiated the Next Generation Identification (NGI) Program to expand the IAFIS. The IP was implemented to address and enhance the FBI NGI's iris processing capabilities; to demonstrate proof of the concept; and to establish thresholds for what it identified as light out (no human intervention) searches at the national level. It is also intended to be refined as a useful investigative and identification tool for the law enforcement community.

According to Cal DOJ Manager Jamie Tackett, "The IP will allow for the evaluation of iris capture and recognition technology in an operational setting while addressing some of the key challenges associated with the technology's use for a large-scale law enforcement application."

Also, according to Tackett, "This pilot is designed to provide participating law enforcement agencies with an automated iris recognition search of the iris pilot repository, which will be expanded and updated periodically ..."

The agency also stressed that information derived from the FBI IP search requests and responses shall only be used as investigative leads and shall not be considered as positive identifications. "The parties are prohibited from relying solely on IP search responses as the sole impetus for law enforcement action. Other indicators and factors must be considered by the submitting agency prior to taking action."

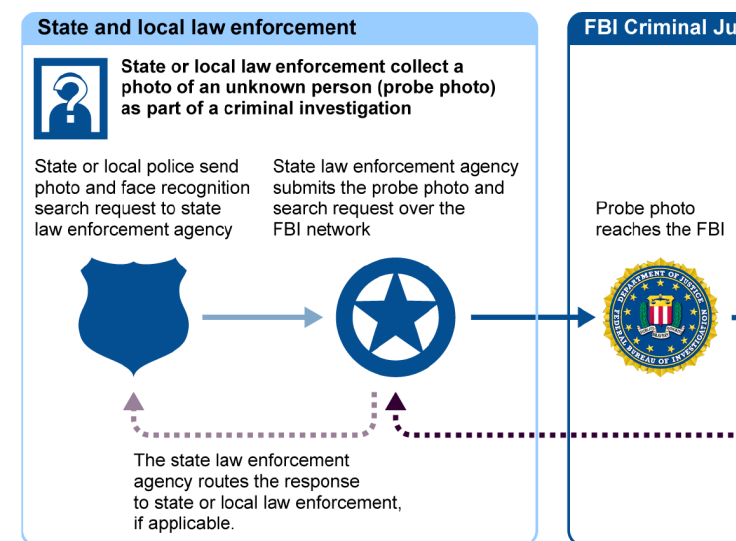

When this reporter questioned the FBI about its role in the Iris Pilot and why the pilot is still ongoing two years beyond its scheduled completion of September 2014, Chief Stephen Fischer Jr., Multimedia Productions, FBI Criminal Justice Information System (CJIS) Division replied, "The FBI Iris Pilot was initially scheduled for approximately 12 to 18 months to offer iris enrollment and identification services to select criminal justice partners." He added, "The CJIS Division has decided to continue this Iris Pilot for an estimated two to three years."

Fischer stressed, "The pilot allows the FBI to evaluate iris technologies. Participating agencies are able to enroll images with booking transactions and perform related searches." Also, according to Fischer, the FBI's Biometric Center of Excellence (BCOE) began the iris recognition pilot to provide iris biometric search services to participating criminal justice agencies.

Beyond Riverside and San Bernardino Counties, other criminal justice agencies identified by Fischer as having also signed Memorandums of Understanding to participate and/or are providing iris images to the FBI's iris pilot include, "U. S. Border Patrol, Texas Department of Public Safety, California Department of Justice, Missouri State Highway Patrol, Rhode Island State Police, U. S. Probation, Department of Defense, and the U. S. Marshals Service."

San Bernardino and Riverside Counties' Sheriff Departments have a Regional Cal-ID program that oversees the biometric technology for each county respectively and together as a region. As a part of that regional partnership, each county participates in the collection of biometrics at the time of arrest. The biometrics collected include mugshots (facial scans), fingerprints, and of course, iris images.

According to both Lieutenant Daniel D. Anne of Riverside County Sheriff Department's Cal-ID / Biometric Identification Network and Lieutenant Noel Wilterding, San Bernardino County Sheriff Department's Cal-ID / Biometric Identification Network, in 2013 the Riverside/San Bernardino Cal-ID embarked on a program to evaluate the use of the iris as another biometric modality to identify arrestees booked into county jails. “New mugshot cameras were installed in Riverside and San Bernardino County jails that were capable of taking not only traditional mugshot photos, but also high-resolution images of an arrestees’ irises,” they confirmed.

Anne and Wilterding were asked about a previously unconfirmed comment regarding how their counties actually started using their iris scan programs before the FBI Iris Pilot began in September 2013. Their response, “Several years ago, multiple law enforcement

On average, based on the number of arrestees between the two counties, they collect about 388 iris scans daily. As of December 31, 2015, Riverside/San Bernardino Cal-ID had collected iris images from approximately 285,310 arrestees.

During the exchange the lieutenants also confirmed their counties use of facial recognition software—technology they have admittedly used much longer than iris scans. “Riverside County began using mugshot photos for facial recognition purposes in 2010 when facial recognition software was purchased; however, Riverside County is able to use all mugshot images collected since 2005. Mugshots taken in San Bernardino County jails as far back as 2002 can be searched using facial recognition software.” Riverside/San Bernardino Cal-ID has approximately 2.5 million mugshot images available for search through its regional facial recognition program.

Iris and facial scans of individuals arrested and not charged or charged and not convicted remain in the counties’ Cal-ID database indefinitely—this includes mugshots (facial scans), iris imaging and fingerprinting.

When Anne and Wilterding were asked why Riverside and San Bernardino Counties never announced the implementation of the iris and facial scan programs they responded, “While we are proud of our history regarding the use of cutting edge technologies to help law enforcement officers keep the public safe, announcing or publicizing specific crime fighting capabilities can be counterproductive to their success.”

However, even as Riverside and San Bernardino Counties help the FBI build its Next Generation Identification (NGI) database—at the national level, privacy and accuracy concerns are growing. The FBI’s NGI database will reportedly contain not only iris and facial scans in addition to finger and palm prints but voice data as well; but, courts have yet to address whether biometric data can be collected without a person’s knowledge or authorization.

A Government Accountability Office (GAO) report released in June confirmed that although the FBI’s facial recognition database contained 411 million criminal and civilian photos—it had not been tested for accuracy and the agency had failed to observe privacy safeguards.

In a statement to the media about the report Senator Al Franken, the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Privacy, Technology and the Law Committee on the Judiciary of the United States Senate declared, “This GAO report raises some very serious concerns, and reveals that the FBI’s use of facial recognition technology is far greater than had previously been understood.” Franken continued, “This is especially concerning because the report shows that the FBI hasn’t done enough to audit its own use of facial recognition technology or that of other law enforcement agencies that partner with the FBI, nor has it taken adequate steps to ensure the technology’s accuracy.” To view the GAO report in full visit www.gao.gov/assets/680/677098.pdf.

Laws in America have failed to keep pace with technology. There appears to be few protections of citizens’ privacy rights in regard to the use of biometrics. Black Americans and other minorities are so disproportionately impacted by anything related to the criminal justice system—they are the ones most grievously at risk. The Voice/Black Voice News was unable to ferret out any pending legislation sponsored by any member of the Congressional Black Caucus that speaks specifically to concerns about the criminal justice system’s use of biometrics.

agencies in the country were reporting the benefits of using the iris biometric to identify arrestees and also as a means to account for jail inmates as they were moved from different locations inside and outside of the jail. Several iris-capable mugshot cameras were installed in Riverside and San Bernardino County jails, prior to our participation in the FBI Iris Pilot.”

That report, released on December 4th, found that Cleveland police officers routinely used unjustifiable force against not only suspects, but also victims of crimes. And that structural and systemic deficiencies and practices, insufficient accountability, inadequate training, ineffective policies, and inadequate engagement with the community have contributed to the use of unreasonable force. Much like the City of Riverside after the Miller shooting, the Department of Justice and the city have announced plans to develop a court-enforceable agreement that would impose an independent monitor on the Cleveland Division of Police.

But unlike other cities, after the Miller shooting in Riverside citizen groups banned together and organized to stop police brutality. After the four officers were placed on administrative leave, and the District Attorney's office said there was no basis for criminal charges against the officers, they admitted "mistakes were made" but did not find the actions to be criminal, the NAACP, Urban League, and most of the Black faith leaders in the city held community meetings and called for the creation of a civilian review board. The group was told that the Law Enforcement Policy Advisory Committee of the city's Human Relations Commission was the police accountability mechanism, but at that point they didn't have the Miller shooting on their agenda. The Miller family created the Tyisha Miller Steering Committee and the community organizations formed the Riverside Coalition for Police Accountability. The groups led large marches; small weekly marches, and worked closely with state and federal investigators and sent representatives to Washington to discuss the Miller case with the Department of Justice.

The group brought experts to Riverside to help draft the template for the Community Review Board. They educated like-minded appointees of the city's official Use of Force Panel and because of their persistence they indirectly influenced the final report, which included ten recommendations, including calling for police accountability. The panel, which remained active to monitor the city's progress, stressed the need for community trust and the Coalition continued a community education campaign.

It's unfortunate that cities across our nation are not learning from the egregious errors and incidents of the past. While the relationship between the police and the Black community in Riverside is not perfect, it is better. The current Riverside Police Chief Sergio Diaz is accessible, community-minded, and he respects the constituency he serves.

The Riverside Coalition for Police Accountability includes numerous organizations: The Group, The Riverside NAACP, Latino Network, Green Party, Riverside County, Inland Valley of the Society of Friends, Democratic Party Central Committee, Jeffery Owens Community Center, and the Universalist Unitarian Church of Riverside's Social Action Committee. And while the RCPA continues to recognize law enforcement officers and community members for promoting police accountability annually, its lasting legacy is the Community Police Review Commission, which reviews and investigates complaints, makes policy and procedure recommendations to the police department and City Council and acts as a bridge between the community and the police.

Perhaps the cities across this country experiencing the same pain and anger can learn from the citizens of Riverside - organize, become educated, and demand accountability.
