Shop Local During National Small Business Week...And Beyond

This week is National Small Business Week, an opportunity to celebrate and support the almost 28 million small businesses that are the economic engines of our country. They employ 60 percent of the nation's workforce. They pay 44 percent of the country's payrolls. They have generated over 65 percent of the new jobs since 1995.

A survey released this week by Biz2Credit, an online lending platform for small business, listed our region, the Riverside-San Bernardino metro area, as the number one best small business city in America.

The annual Best Small Business Cities in America Study is based on a weighed average of data on Biz2Credit customers across the country. The survey looks at the health of small businesses in each metro area, the rate of small business creation and the economic ecosystem for entrepreneurs, including the cost of doing business, tax climate and the pool of local talent.

"The Riverside-San Bernardino area is a hub for IT, advanced manufacturing, food processing, health and medicine and professional services. The ecosystem for growth companies is strong, since it has such resources as incubators, accelerators and co-working spaces, as well as a Shop Riverside campaign to promote local businesses," Biz2credit said in a press release.

According to the survey, small businesses in Riverside-San Bernardino had average annual revenues of $1,400,960, ahead of the No. 2 city, New York, where average annual revenues were $1,269,859. San Francisco-Oakland placed third, with average annual revenues of $671,000.

Here at the VOICE we want to do our part to support the small business community in our region. We are developing a special issue highlighting small businesses in Riverside and the surrounding communities, if you would like to nominate a deserving small business, please contact us: paulette@bpcmediaworks.com. And do your part to support the small businesses in your city by shopping local.

RCFD to Participate in the Pink on Parade Breast Cancer Awareness Walk

Riverside

On Saturday, May 16th the Riverside Fire Department will sponsor a team of fifteen women to participate in the Pink on Parade event. All proceeds will go to The Pink Ribbon Place, an organization that assists neighbors and families living with breast cancer. The participants are all women from the department. They represent the operations, administration, prevention divisions and the emergency operations center.

The fifteen-member team has raised and donated money on their own time while gearing up for the event. Additionally, the Riverside Firefighters Association has donated $500 in support of the department team.

Fire Chief Michael Moore is in full support of the event and authorized a fire engine to be decorated and wrapped in a pink ribbon. Battalion Chief Jennifer McDowell stated, "This is our fourth year participating in this event. It is a great way for the fire department to continue to build relationships within the community and support a noble program."

If you would like to make a donation, or for more information, contact Battalion Chief Jennifer McDowell at jmcdowell@riversideca.gov or (951)-351-6120.

City To Host Community Workshops For Trail Plan

Fontana

The City of Fontana was awarded grant funds by the California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) to complete a planning process that will result in the completion of the San Sevaine Trail Connectivity Plan.

The San Sevaine Trail is a 2-mile long walking and cycling pathway that currently poses significant connectivity challenges as the system is fragmented and forces trail crossings to occur at controlled intersections by means of existing sidewalks. The plan will extend the San Sevaine Trail 11.5 miles and will identify a pedestrian and cyclist friendly network that will seamlessly connect the City of Fontana and the surrounding area. The planning process will also help identify key connections for the residents to commute to local jobs, schools and shopping areas and will address air quality, health and safety concerns.

Information about the project is available at Fontana.org/TrailPlan.

"1493" – A Book Worth Carrying Around the Globe

Book Review by Laura L. Klure
Special to the Voice News

The book "1493: Uncovering the New World Columbus Created," by Charles C. Mann, is a very admirable effort to discuss some of the changes in the world that happened after Christopher Columbus and other Europeans crossed the Atlantic. It is guaranteed to teach readers a variety of new things, and that even applies to college graduates. But it's a LONGGGG, difficult book! However, to even briefly outline all the impacts of 500 years of global migrations would take much more than one book, so the author had to choose which changes and locations he was going to talk about. Some readers' choices might have been different.

This book looks at shifts in population, the spread of diseases, the impacts of farming, and other social and environmental issues that arose when humanity started moving all around the planet. For example, it tells how diseases introduced from Europe impacted Native Americans and Africans who had not been exposed to them before, and therefore had not become resistant to those disease organisms. Conversely, diseases from Africa did not sicken African slaves as much as they did Europeans or Native Americans (in both North and South America).

For anyone interested in slavery, the coverage of the types of slavery that we have already known the most about, which happened in the United States, is fairly limited. What was more surprising to this reader was the coverage of other types of slavery: enslavement of Native Americans; Europeans converted from indebted workers to slaves; and even the transporting of Asians eastward to the Americas, where they labored as slaves. The book also talks about African slaves in Mexico, the Caribbean, and other places in Latin America.

Mann points out that, "Textbooks commonly present American history in terms of Europeans moving into a lightly settled hemisphere. In fact, the hemisphere was full of Indians—tens of millions of them. And most of the movement into the Americas was by Africans, who soon became the majority population in almost every place that wasn't controlled by Indians." He states that, "Slavery was the foundational institution of the modern Americas."

Sometimes called "The Columbian Exchange," the global movements of people, ships, plants, animals, diseases, and practices had a tremendous impact. Some food plants are taken for granted everywhere today, but the author points out how corn, potatoes, tomatoes, and many other plants were transplanted from their origins in the Americas both to Europe and to Asia. Food plants were moved in other directions also, such as bananas being widely planted in Africa, Central America, and South America, far from their origins in Southeast Asia. The native plants and animals were removed from many places in the world, replaced by farms with imported plants and animals, which were often productive for only a limited time.

As unpublicized as some of the Trans-Atlantic migrations were, most Americans may have been taught more about those Atlantic movements than they were about the similar eastward and westward ship traffic in the Pacific. Mann describes the role of the Philippines in the trade of silver and tobacco westward from the Americas to China, and the eastward movement of silk, laborers, rice, and other items.

Mann does not present any firm solutions to most of the problems pointed out in the book. Some might view population control as an effective approach. Mann sees human desires as being hard to change. He states: "Complicating all is the welter of mixed emotions. On the one hand, people want the wash of goods and services that the world-wide market provides.On the other hand, the same people who want to satisfy their desires also resist the consequences of satisfaction. They want to have what everyone else has, but still be aggressively themselves – a contradictory enterprise."

The main text is 509 pages, followed by an interesting Appendix, plus over 150 pages of notes and an index. The factual material is generally very well researched, but with so many topics mentioned, it's likely someone more knowledgeable about a specific small topic might pick bones with Mann. The book is well worth trying to wade through, at some point when the reader has a lot of free time available. An earlier book by Mann is titled "1491: New Revelations of the Americas Before Columbus."

"1493" is available in paperback, from Vintage Books.

SBCCD Available to Assist Students of Closed Corinthian Colleges

San Bernardino

The Chancellor of the San Bernardino Community College District (SBCCD) encouraged students stranded by the closure of Corinthian Colleges to consider working with counselors at both San Bernardino Valley College and Crafton Hills College in order to avoid losing momentum in completing their education and to make the best of a challenging situation.

SBCCD Chancellor Bruce Baron said, "We, like the other California Community Colleges, stand ready to assist students whose education was so unexpectedly interrupted. We encourage those in the Inland Empire to contact our counseling, financial aid, and admissions offices, as well as other offices that support student success at San Bernardino Valley College (valleycollege.edu) and Crafton Hills College (craftonhills.edu) for guidance. We offer dozens of programs that we believe Corinthian students will find appropriate for the completion of their education."

The California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office issued the following statement on the closure of Corinthian Colleges:

"The California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office, in conjunction with other state and federal agencies, is working to assist students who have been affected by the recent regulatory actions involving Corinthian Colleges. Our 112 colleges, which serve 2.1 million students, are ready to help students who wish to pursue their educational goals at community college. Students can find resources on financial aid, enrollment, student performance outcomes and career orientation at <http://californiacommunitycolleges.cccco.edu/> as well as at the following link at the California Department of Justice website: www.oag.ca.gov/Corinthian."

Caring For Aging Parents

Dear Dr. Levister: My family has been caring for our frail aging parents. We feel lost, angry, guilty and overwhelmed. Where can we go for help? B.E.

Dear B.E.: Caring for our parents as they age is a job most of us shoulder willingly, yet with warring emotions. Despite our desire to repay the love they showed in raising us, the shifting dynamic of the parent-child relationship can spark feelings for which we are unprepared. For both generations, this is a complex passage—a time of burden and reward, of conflict and reconciliation, of frustration, fulfillment, and finality.

First, contact your county agency on aging. Arrange for a face-to-face discussion on caring for your parents. Caring for an aging parent is a responsibility few people ever expect or envision. We avoid thinking about our parents falling ill or growing weak. We don't feel equipped to handle the welfare of those who raised us. Confusion, sadness, helplessness jar us during this unsettling transition.

As baby boomers live longer, healthier lives, any assistance that is required typically becomes the children's responsibility. For many families, the discussion about who will take care of mom and dad comes on the heels of a crisis. As a result, most families find themselves unprepared to handle their parents' increased dependency.

More than 20 million in the U.S. alone provide care for an aging parent or in-law. What's more, families rather than institutions provide 80 percent of long-term care. Learn to deal with the inevitable challenges that accompany this life transition?

Begin by openly discussing each person's role and responsibilities within the family structure. While care giving can be extremely stressful, sharing duties is a guaranteed way to ease the tension. Whatever distance family members live from one another devise a care plan so everyone can be involved.

Addressing the sensitive topic of finances is also a must, as is compiling important personal and financial documents. Finally, take the time to evaluate how to build unity among siblings—in spite of the high potential for tension.

There's no question that many caregivers only find frustration and exhaustion. But with solid support and communication, caring for an aging parent can bring a renewed sense of love, compassion and tenderness into any family.

No More, No Less – Justice

Hardy L. Brown

It has been my opinion that the citizens in White communities have control over the police while in Black communities, the police have control over the citizens. All we want, which is not too much to ask, is the same justice for everyone. No more no less.

This was the response given last week by a young Black man to a CNN reporter's question when asked what do you want in Baltimore? He summed up in this one statement what so many Black Americans want -- no more no less, justice -- and the same respect and fair treatment from law enforcement officials.

He is correct that police respond differently to White citizens unless they believe no one is watching as in the recent case last month in the San Bernardino County desert community of Apple Valley. Nine deputies in that incident thought it was impossible for them to be caught on a camera out in the desert so their mentality was to teach (in this case) a citizen you cannot run from law enforcement without being abused and taught some respect for authority.

We have known but are now learning more from each of these incidents that police leak reports to selected newspapers or reporters they have relationships with to sway public opinion and poison the jury pool just in case they are taken to trial. It is a police strategy to smear the name of the victim that they abuse or kill; I call it police officer strategy class protection 101. I saw it with Rodney King, Tyisha Miller and countless others. In the case of Tyisha Miller, they (officers) attempted to smear Miller's family members going as far as her first cousins in the Butler family who would not give up the fight for justice.

Now we have 24/7 talk show hosts on cable television who now take their microphones into the Black community and act like attorneys as they interview uncoached witnesses. That same interview is later used against them in court as in Trayvon Martin's killing. Maybe Black community members should keep their mouths shut like police officers and only talk with federal agents with a lawyer present or local NAACP officials. Have you noticed after each police officer involved shooting the police keep their mouth shut and don't even talk with the chief or their supervisor? And in Baltimore they did not even have to do anything until after ten days. In other words, time to get their stories straight and on paper with the concurrence of any other officers that were at the crime scene. We clearly saw that in the recent North Charleston case. I know you are thinking this is contrary to what we have been told to do but we cannot continue to tell them

"who saw" what so they can get their story to counter what you have seen or recorded on camera.

We must remember the White owned media does not see justice from the Black experience with the police departments. I am not saying that they cannot report in an unbiased manner but their coverage is different and does not capture the true feelings and living experience of what we are saying.

I have also noticed that all of the cities experience the same issue of police not living in the community they are protecting and serving, which is one of the major problems in America. I have pointed out for several years in the City of San Bernardino for example: San Bernardino was listed as having 240 police officers in June 2014 with only 18 living in the city limits. They had 150 non-sworn employees with only 32 of them living in the city.

That means only 50 out of a total of 390 police department employees live within the city limits that pay their salaries. Just like we have been hearing in Ferguson, New York and now Baltimore those police departments are an occupying force with guns on their sides, armor gear and tanks. We must reform this unjust law enforcement system as soon as possible before we lose all confidence from our citizens.

Getting Medical: Signing Up and the Benefits

By Manny Otiko / CBM

When LaRita Reed graduated from the University of California, Los Angeles, she was excited about earning her degree and all the possibilities that lay ahead. But soon she found herself facing a new challenge. The mother of two young children who had previously been covered under the college's insurance program was suddenly uninsured, still unemployed, and being phased out of her UCLA health care coverage.

Worried mostly about the welfare of her kids, she reached out to her local social services office. While applying for health coverage for her children there, Reed discovered she was eligible for Medi-Cal, a health insurance program for low-income families that she hadn't heard about before. With Medi-Cal, her health insurance problem was resolved. But for new applicants to the program, she says, the application process can be confusing. In addition to doing the research to find out if she was eligible or not, waiting through the four-week approval period was a time of high anxiety.

The California Department of Health Care Services has taken a number of steps to ease the anxiety and uncertainty felt by many Californians like Reed who apply. Medi-Cal is providing much more information online about the application process, benefits and who gets covered. It is also expanding its reach to cover more people. A number of health advocacy organizations across the state, like the Root Community Health Center in Oakland, are also helping people to navigate the application process and determine if they are eligible or not.

Adam Weintraub, a spokesman for the California Department of Health Care Services (DHCS), says the most common reason new applicants are rejected is because they make too much money. Another reason is that applicants may not be able to prove their place of residency.

DHCS says Medi-Cal is now available to low-income families and individuals of all ages who are eligible. Also, the enactment of the federal Affordable Care Act – commonly called “Obamacare” – means more people qualify for Medi-Cal. To be eligible for the program, families have to make a certain amount of money every year based on poverty levels set by the DHCS and informed by guidelines given by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Weintraub said that works out to be $32,913 or less in annual income for a family of four. For an individual that number is $16,105 and $21,708 for a family of two.

Having family members with disabilities can also be a factor that helps with Medi-Cal qualification, he added.

Reed says once she was approved, she received a California Medi-Cal card in the mail and she had to choose from three programs: LA Care, Blue Cross or Health Net.

“If you don't choose, they choose for you,” Reed said. She also advises applicants to do their research before selecting a plan, so they can choose a program that best fits their needs.

Reed says Medi-Cal has been a huge benefit for her because she doesn't have to pay a monthly premium. If you are employed, Medi-Cal fees are set on a sliding scale based on income. Reed said another major benefit to Medi-Cal is not having to pay for prescription medications at participating pharmacies. People who are approved are often enrolled in the managed care program, Reed said. A Medi-Cal Managed Health Care plan offers all the same benefits as a standard Medi-Cal plan. The main difference is that the enrollee in the managed care program is assigned a primary doctor who coordinates care for that patient within a network of doctors to ensure the patient stays healthy. The plan is designed for patients who are aged, blind, disabled and receiving Social Security Income (SSI) or State Supplementary Payments (SSP) or other state-provided financial assistance.

According to Weintraub, there are some steps applicants can take to speed up the application process. He recommends:

- Applicants have certain paperwork, such as their social security card and household income and tax information, ready when they are filing applications.

Theresa Jenkins, 49, of Los Angeles is being treated by Dr. Derrick Butler at a Southern California medical center (T.H.E. La Brea Center)

- Applicants should also ensure they fill in the forms as accurately as possible and use the correct contact information. Weintraub added applicants should make sure the name used on the forms matches the name on the applicant's social security card.

“The more information on the application, the less likely it is to be kicked out,” Weintraub said.

Reed says applying for Medi-Cal can be frustrating, but there are some ways to speed up the process. If applicants run into roadblocks, they can request a hearing, which usually speeds things up.

Rialto Woman Teaches Foster Youth To Let Their Light Shine

By Rory O'Sullivan
Staff Writer

Because of an undying passion for young people achieving their dreams, Lea Michelle Cash had a plan. That plan, starting off as Cash's own personal dream, became reality when she founded The Brightest Star (TBS), a non-profit advocacy organization that supports abused and neglected foster youth in the Inland Region. And since that beginning in 2007, Cash has helped more than 3,000 young people through TBS.

"Every child has a desire to be successful and our role is to get in there and find out what it is," said Cash.

According to Cash, TBS gives foster children hope and motivation through one-on-one mentoring, self-esteem building workshops, behavioral and cultural enrichment activities, and field trips.

"They [foster youth] are invisible, they suffer inside because they feel worthless," states Cash.

She said a few of the foster youth have trouble fitting in because they have parents or immediate family members nearby which could lead to them feeling disconnected causing behavioral issues.

"All of the things that make them feel worthy to succeed to be successful in school to do

Body Cam Bill Allows Cops to Review

By McKenzie Jackson
CBM

A piece of legislation establishing guidelines for the use of body-worn cameras by law enforcement officers is one step closer to becoming law. Even though some of the state's top cops dealt a blow to the bill last week, Assembly Bill 66 still managed to limp out of the Assembly Privacy and Consumer Protection Committee on April 30.

The bill in its original form barred police officers from reviewing footage from body cameras before writing reports. But leaders in law enforcement from across the state insisted they would not support the bill unless lawmakers changed that provision.

Assemblymember Shirley Weber (D-San Diego), the bill's author, told California Black Media AB-66 would not have made it out of committee without that concession. She said the committee's Democratic members would not vote for the bill without giving police officers the right to watch video recorded by body-cameras before writing their reports.

"We didn't want it voted down because that starts us back at square one," she said.

Supporters of body camera use are excited about the prospect of the bill becoming law soon. Yet many of them feel allowing cops to see the footage their body cameras record before writing police reports leaves room for officers to manipulate accounts of what happened between them and citizens.

Attorney Randy Perry, a representative of the California Association of Highway Patrolmen, takes the opposite position. He said not allowing officers to see video before writing reports would cause liabilities and compromise accuracy.

After much debate, six Assembly

Democrats voted in favor of AB-66. One Democrat, Jim Cooper of Elk Grove, a former Sacramento Sheriff's captain, and four Republicans did not vote.

If signed into law, Weber said the bill would give the state a broad policy for body camera use but the details of how it is implemented will be left up to local or state police departments.

"Now, if it is a death or a violent act, they have the opportunity to look at the footage before they write the report," she said. "If a jurisdiction has different a policy, they can maintain that policy. Individual jurisdictions can have their own policy as to whether they can review [the video footage] or not."

For example, the Oakland police department currently requires officers to write reports before they can watch body camera footage. That policy will not have to change if AB-66 becomes law.

Oakland Police Chief, Sean Whent, spoke in favor of not allowing cops to review body cam video footage at the committee hearing. He said no police officer in his department has ever been disciplined if his or her report did not match what happened on camera word-for-word. He said discrepancies happen sometimes.

Currently, the Assembly's Appropriations Committee is reviewing the enactment to see if it makes financial sense. After that, it will go to the assembly floor for a vote.

Meanwhile, Weber continues to share information about the bill. It is not an "I got your story," she explains.

"I just want accuracy as far as what is taking place," she said. "We have people with their own cellphones recording all kinds of stuff. So it's not that we don't have footage. The question then becomes, whose footage is the best footage and most credible?"

As the body camera bill moves closer to reality in California, the debate on how police officers interact with Black men rages across the country.

Since the February 2012 shooting of unarmed, 17-year-old Trayvon Martin by a neighbor and community watchman in Sanford, Fla., there have been several fatal incidents involving police and African-American boys or men. Those deaths include: 43-year-old Eric Garner in Staten Island, N.Y.; 12-year-old Tamir Rice in Cleveland; 18-year-old Michael Brown in Ferguson, Mo.; 50-year-old Walter Scott in North Charleston, S.C.; and 25-year-old Freddie Gray in Baltimore. Gray's death from a spinal injury he allegedly received while in the custody of law enforcement officers sparked fiery protests and rioting that fixed the nation's eyes on Maryland's largest city. With a history of brewing tensions between the police and African Americans, the unrest in Baltimore quickly erupted into looting of businesses; violent clashes between citizens and law enforcement officers; and the burning of several buildings.

Baltimore State Attorney Marilyn Mosby announced May 1 that her office ruled Gray's death a homicide. An investigation done in conjunction with Baltimore city police found probable cause to charge the six police officers involved in Gray's arrest with crimes, including two of them with murder and manslaughter respectively.

That same day, the U.S. Department of Justice said the administration of President Barack Obama will provide $20 million in grants to dozens of local police departments as part of a body camera pilot program. Three days earlier, the Los Angeles Police Commission approved a policy clearing the way for widespread use of body cameras by patrol officers.

Several Golden State municipalities - including Rialto, Union City, and Pleasanton - already have law enforcement agencies that use body cameras..

Weber said the body camera bill is critical in light of what is happening across the U.S.

"The data shows California has one highest rate or numbers of murders by police officers in the nation," she said. "Maybe ours hasn't reached to the point of a Baltimore or something like that but we have had similar things."

5 Facts About Body Cameras in California

- 1 All around the world, people look to Rialto, California's police department body camera program as a respected model.
- 2 Since Rialto, California's police department body camera program launched in February 2012, police officer use of excessive force has dropped by 60% and complaints about police officers decreased by a whopping 88 percent.
- 3 If California Assemblyman Reginald Jones-Sawyer (D-Los Angeles) gets his way, the state will give the California Highway Patrol $5 million to launch a body camera program. Jones-Sawyer, who is chairman of the California Legislative Black Caucus has already asked Gov. Jerry Brown for the money.
- 4 The United States Justice department has launched a $20 million program to provide police forces across the country with body camera's and training. The generous federal grants will not help the local agencies pay for video storage, though.
- 5 California's Attorney General, Kamala Harris, announced that the Golden State's Justice Department will be the first statewide agency to adapt a body camera program for its officers and agents.

homework to do all the necessary things to be successful in school,” said Cash.

Forty-five percent of foster youth completed high school, compared to 79 percent of the general student population and 41 percent of the foster youth who enrolled in college remained enrolled in community college for a second year, compared with 62 percent of the general student population according to a report done by The Stuart Foundation.

Cash is dedicated to changing the trend and has spent the last five years working with Rialto Unified School District connecting foster youth to resources and giving them help to graduate high school.

“We are dedicated to helping young hearts and young minds to gain the skills, knowledge and self-esteem essential to dream, achieve and empower their lives,” states Cash. “We are dedicated and committed to enhancing their self-confidence, educational journeys and cultural enrichment activities to establish and maintain a healthy self-worth.

“It begins with an action plan to heal broken hearts to believe in their success, and their greatness, despite the difficult circumstances that make so many in our Foster Care system not succeed academically, or as productive individuals in our communities. We are somewhat unique in that our approach, by operating with a “whatever it takes” attitude within each anchor, helps us to think outside of the box to make an impact on

“Her contributions are invaluable,” said Bob Murphy Continuation School Principal George Bowser. “She helps them (the youth) with changing their outlook, basically giving them hope.”

She builds relationships with children and earns their trust, finding out what barriers are keeping them from having success in school. Some students struggle with academics and other students struggle with behavioral issues, but most according to Cash, just need to know someone cares about them.

“It’s amazing to see a child’s heart turn around,” said Cash.

Students she has worked with have been in music videos featuring Enrique Iglesias, gone to wrestling camps, spent a day with a celebrity and had a motivational pep talk by actress Tatyana Ali.

Cash said one girl who was abandoned by her mom broke down during a behavioral and cultural enrichment activity on the set of American Idol.

“All of the counselors, the therapists, the social workers, and the judges couldn’t get through to her. But having her go to another environment it all just came out.”

Cash said after that experience she was able to reach the girl and begin the healing process. She said the girl opened up to her in a way she never had before and the two of them sat on Hollywood Blvd. and cried and started dealing with her abandonment issues.

“There’s tears when you’re breaking down walls they’re holding in joy, laughter, fears, aspirations and then it all comes out.”

Cash said more than anything it helps foster youth just knowing she is a constant in their lives and she cares about their welfare. She has spent time crying in bathrooms with foster youth and received calls late into the night from desperate youth.

Karri Lauritzen, 26, a foster youth who moved around Southern California a total of 29 times, credits Cash with helping her see the light inside herself.

“You have to decide how it affects you,” said Lauritzen. “Even though I’ve been through so much, I look for the good in everything.”

Lauritzen said with the help of Cash she began sharing her story to help other youth overcome their struggles. She said she has been through “every type of abuse you can imagine.”

Now a professional model, Lauritzen received her Bachelor of Arts degree from California State University, San Bernardino and is getting her master’s degree in social work to become a social worker in a public defender’s office, working in child welfare to add her own experience of being in the foster care system.

“We must teach our foster youth to seize opportunities, open themselves up to change and the beauty of having fulfilled dreams and attainable goals that they consider out of reach,” said Cash. “Everyone who has achieved their goals and ambitions have been great dreamers. There is a special light that is dim in foster youth, and when they discover the power of their self worth that light begins to shine like a bright star in the universe.”

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Note: Because the Beneficiary reserves the right to bid less than the total debt owed, it is possible that at the time of the sale the opening bid may be less than the total debt. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (855) 427-2204, visit this Internet Web site <http://www.altisource.com/MortgageServices/DefaultManagement/TrusteeServices/Sales.aspx> using the file number assigned to this case 2013-0425. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Date: 4/7/2015

All right, title, and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described as:
Street Address or other common designation of real property: 56-485 Legends Circle, La Quinta, CA 92253

The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address or other common designation, if any, shown above.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

Note: Because the Beneficiary reserves the right to bid less than the total debt owed, it is possible that at the time of the sale the opening bid may be less than the total debt NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299 or visit this Internet Web site <http://www.altisource.com/MortgageServices/DefaultManagement/TrusteeServices.aspx>

using the file number assigned to this case 2014-04210-CA. Introducing Rafik Mohamed, Incoming Dean of Social & Behavioral Sciences, CSUSB

Cal State San Bernardino has named veteran educator, administrator and author Rafik Mohamed as the dean of the university's College of Social and Behavioral Sciences.

Mohamed, who is currently chair of the department of social sciences at Clayton State University, will start his new position in mid-summer 2015, said CSUSB Provost Andy Bodman. Mohamed will take over for outgoing dean Jamal Nassar, who will retire at the end of the school year. Nassar has led the college since 2008.

"We're delighted that Dr. Mohamed will be joining our university to lead the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences," Bodman said. "Rafik has a substantial record of accomplishment in teaching, research service as a faculty member, in addition to his excellent record as an academic administrator."

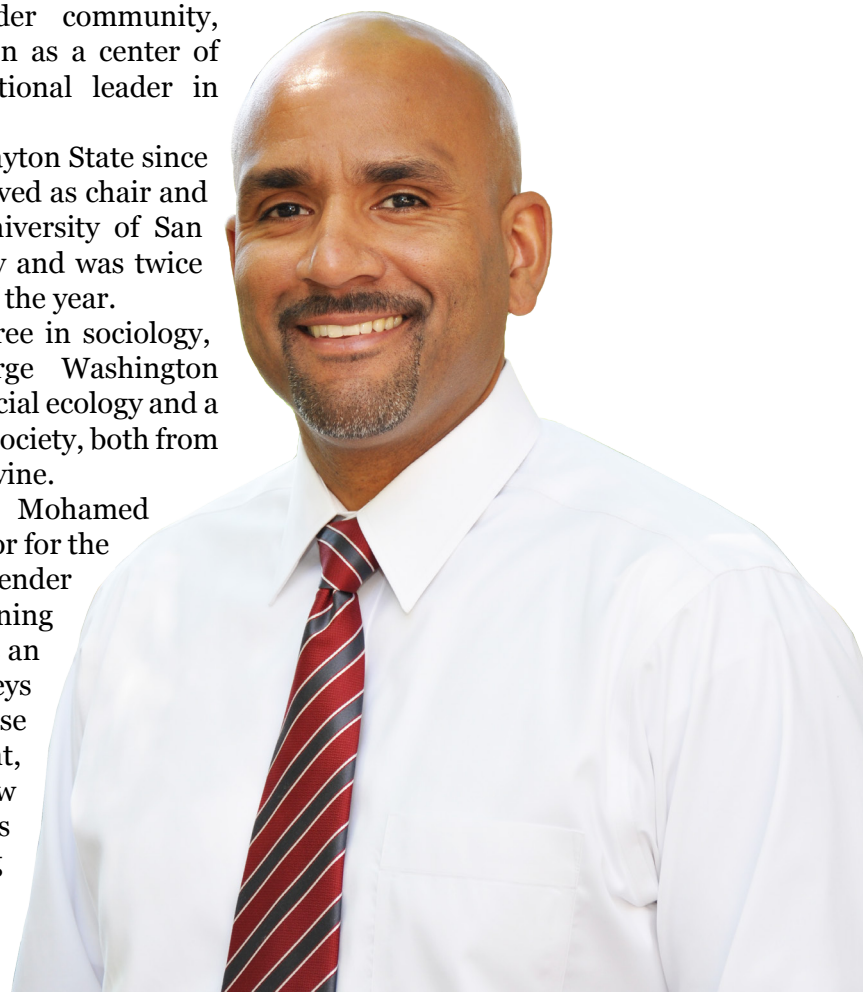

"It is a great honor to have been selected as dean of College of Social and Behavioral Sciences at CSUSB, and I am excited by the opportunity to join the college's wonderful community of faculty, staff, students, and alumni," Mohamed said. "Because of the efforts of Dean Nassar and the faculty, the College rests on an excellent foundation. I look forward to continuing their work in serving the broader community, and gaining further distinction as a center of academic excellence and national leader in transforming student lives."

Mohamed has served at Clayton State since July 2009. Prior to that he served as chair and associate professor at the University of San Diego department of sociology and was twice voted outstanding professor of the year.

He holds a bachelor's degree in sociology, criminal justice from George Washington University and a master's in social ecology and a Ph.D. in criminology, law and society, both from the University of California, Irvine.

As an undergraduate, Mohamed worked as an intern investigator for the Washington, D.C. Public Defender Service. Prior to beginning graduate studies, he worked as an investigator for private attorneys handling felony criminal defense cases. As a graduate student, Mohamed worked with the Law Offices of Milton C. Grimes during the Rodney G. King police brutality lawsuit against the city of Los Angeles.
