Bond Issue Would Build Social Sciences

by Cynthia Pringle
public affairs director

A general obligation bond issue, Proposition 1A, on the Nov. 3 ballot, which has more than $60 million in appropriations for CSUSB, including a $32.4 million building to house the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences at Cal State. Currently serving one-fifth of the declared majors at the university, the school has academic departments housed throughout the campus.

The new building will add 12 classrooms, ranging from 25 to 150 seats, and 13 teaching laboratories with 267 computer stations. Another computer lab will be self-instructional with 24 stations in which students can complete class projects. Additional graduate research laboratories will support the growing programs in criminal justice, social work and psychology.

The expanded instructional space is "a major need on the growing campus," notes school dean, John Conley, indicating that school faculty are scattered across campus in three separate buildings. With the new building, all but 25 faculty will be housed together giving students more opportunities to interact with faculty across disciplines.

Construction plans call for 138,700 gross-square feet in new space and the renovation of some existing space, particularly for laboratories on campus. The increase in lecture and lab space would help the university serve nearly 1,500 more students and expand faculty offices by 53.

The classroom complex is just one Cal State project that would be funded by passage of the bond issue that would build facilities for K-12, the community colleges and the UC. A renovation of the Biology and Physical Sciences buildings, both built in 1967, and funding for telecommunications facilities also is provided for Cal State.

Project Should Open Up Research, Economic Roads

The Inland Empire's need to galvanize educational, economic and cultural development efforts is one of the key reasons for the recent appointment of Klaus Brasch as executive director of research development and technology transfer at Cal State.

"This position," says Brasch, a professor of biology at CSUSB, "is a timely new development for CSUSB and very much in line with similar trends both regionally and nationally, not just at major research institutions, but also at comprehensive universities like ours."

Brasch's duties include supporting, defining and building on the role of campus research, as well as overseeing the development of contracts, grants and the practical transfer of technology from the lab to the world of business. One of the ways he hopes to support new research, he says, is to "establish and maintain a strong, ongoing CSUSB presence" at state and national funding agencies, such as the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health.

He also will serve as a representative to CORE21 (Connecting Research and Economic Development for the 21st century), which is a partnership between local universities, colleges and the business community, and as a representative to other research, transfer technology and industry-linked organizations. Better educational links, cooperative research and internships could be launched from these relationships, he says. And with the university's Institute for Applied Research and Policy Analysis, Brasch plans to do area surveys and construct industry databases that will give professors and their students an idea of what the job market looks like locally.

The university has many first-rate students and many faculty with national and international reputations in their fields, Brasch says. "The opportunity to further develop and utilize these intellectual resources should not be missed," he adds. "Why not combine these elements into a common effort?"

Music of the Night (and other Spooktacular tunes)

The fun, frightful and even cultured sounds of Halloween are coming to the university Oct. 30 and 31 when the university's Concert Choir, Chamber Singers and Symphonic Band perform "Down among the Dead Men" by Ralph Vaughan Williams and their rendition of "The Monster Mash."

Children in costume get in free on both nights and on both nights kids also will be treated to "Strange Rain" by Tom Paxton, selections from Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" and highlights from "Phantom of the Opera" by Andrew Lloyd Webber. A costume contest also will take place both nights for all interested.

Following the Oct. 30, 7:30 p.m. concert will be the fourth annual Halloween Fright Night party hosted by the Amadeus Club. A DJ, games and food will be featured. Cost is $2 with a costume and $3 without.

And after the Oct 31, 4 p.m. concert children will have the chance to trick-or-treat in the Creative Arts Building "neighborhood" and visit the "Fright Room" of games and booths hosted by CSUSB clubs and organizations. The post-concert events are sponsored by the Amadeus Club.

Conductors for the two concerts, which will be held in the Creative Arts Building Recital Hall, are Rob Dunham and Tamara Harsh Craver.

Trick-or-Treat off the Street

The film "Casper" and a grand goodies hunt are in store for children at "Casper's Trick-or-Treat Adventure" taking place Friday, Oct. 30.

"As a safe alternative to trick-or-treating," says Beth Person, the Student Union Program Board's public affairs coordinator for the event, "children will have the opportunity to roam throughout the Student Union." Games, she adds, will be sponsored by the different clubs, fraternities, sororities and other organizations on campus, and will include a costume contest, face painting, a cakewalk, a hunt for treasures and an apple bob. The free evening runs from 6-9 p.m. in the Student Union area. For more information call Ext. 5940.

'Shoo Flu, Don't Bother Me'

Flu vaccine clinics will be held at the Health Center on Fridays from now through Nov. 20. You can get a shot from 9:30-11 a.m. and 2-3:30 p.m. It's free to students and $5 for faculty and staff. The Health Center requires that everyone wait 15-20 minutes after the injection, so plan ahead. If you're unable to come in during the regularly scheduled hours you can make an appointment. Call the Health Center at Ext. 5241 for more details.

Big-time Volleyball

Coyote Athletics and the Coussoulis Arena have teamed up to bring you an international volleyball match between the U.S.A. men and Brazil. This contest begins at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 3. Sales to the general public begin Monday, Oct. 19. Come early and get the best seats as well as a special discount. The prices are $10 for reserved seating ($8 for CSUSB faculty, staff and students with I.D.); $8 for general admission ($6 for CSUSB students and children 12-and-under). A $1 service charge applies to phone and credit card orders. Show your Coyote One-Card and receive your discount while seats last. For more information call the Coussoulis Arena at Ext. 7360 or stop by to purchase your tickets at HP-121.

Young 'Researchers'

CSUSB Behavioral Health Institute is looking for 16-year-olds (both males and females) for a research project. These are paid positions, and are short-term. Research assistants must be 16 by Nov. 11 and not turn 17 until January 1, 1999. For further details, call Robin Campbell at Ext. 5567.
