Chief Johnson Quits Job; Kadyk Named New Director

By Don Lannon

"Carl Johnson, campus Security Chief, has officially given me his resignation, effective the last day of this month," announced Kenton L. Monroe, Dean of Students, early this week.

Wayne Kadyk, a CRCSB graduate, will replace Johnson as the new Director of Campus Security, a title which, according to Dean Monroe, is "more consistent with the environment of a college."

Kadyk is an outstanding young man. He has been a security officer here for the past year. Prior to this, he had more than two years of part-time experience in law enforcement," Monroe observed.

The Dean noted that at the present time the campus security force consists of six officers and two student assistants.

"The assistants," Monroe stated, "are equipped with two-way radios and have hook-ups with the full-time security officers. They (the assistants) patrol the parking lots."

Explained the Dean, "We need somebody in the parking for the maximum number of hours possible to prevent... or decrease the likelihood of... theft and vandalism."

"We need more men," Monroe complained. "Most of the time we have only one man on duty."

"Purses, wallets and the like are being constantly stolen," he added. "And vandalism is common. But, with only one man on duty, there is no way that we can prevent these things from happening."

Monroe said that provisions were made in the July 1968 budget for two additional positions, but that they were rejected by state officials.

"Not only did the request for two additional officers fail, but we lose one regular man as well," the Dean remarked.

Despite last year's setback, the college will request two additional officers in the 1969 budget.

Monroe believes that if we get the two additional men, we will be in a much stronger position to do a better job.

The Dean emphasized that "members of the campus police force are sworn-officers," and that "they have the same legal authority as any other police officer in this country."

Stated Dean Monroe, "Campus police officers use the authority to arrest, however, only as a last resort."

According to Monroe, only one arrest has been made by the security force since 1965, and "that person was not a student."

"The officers must be able to distinguish a prank from a crime... and they must be capable of dealing with behavior in an educational sense," he added. "This demands some college education."

Observed the Dean, "Each officer is required to successfully complete two months of full-time training at a police academy. During this time, the officer learns what the law is, how to handle weapons, and how to handle yourself."

Campus security officers carry weapons only after sunset, on weekends, and on holidays. These are times," Monroe stated, "when there are special dangers present on campus." He cited as examples frequent night visitations by groups at the Bell's Angels, and Diablos.

"Security officers have not yet found it necessary to use their weapons," Monroe asserted.

Dean Monroe concluded, "Within the next two years, we hope to have at least two men on duty throughout the day and night. This should strengthen our position."

Jobs Open

Students who are still seeking part-time jobs are invited to register or reregister with the Counseling Placement Center, L-116, according to Doyle J. Stanel, Placement Director.

"At this time a number of good part-time job opportunities are available and we need to know that many students are actively seeking jobs," says Stanel. However, many jobs have special requirements as to experience and hours.

Those who are interested in vacation employment during the Christmas holidays should begin their search as soon as possible.

Stanel reports that very few vacation job opportunities have been listed with his office. Most students will find employment during this break between quarters by an open door-door to-door job hunt, he suggests.

Nagy Indicts Russians for European Imperialism

Speaking on "The Fight of Intellectuals for Freedom in East-central Europe," Dr. Ferenc Nagy, former prime minister of Hungary, last Tuesday traced the development of the struggle in communist-block countries for "freedom of thought."

With the recent Soviet Union armed invasion of Czechoslovakia has come "open imperialism," he said. "Russi invaded Czechoslovakia because if she could not defeat the efforts of liberal party members and intellectuals there, she could not do so at home. The East-central European countries are no longer individual members of a socialist block, but are, Nagy said, members of a "socialist commonwealth."

During his address, Nagy spoke briefly of the Moscow trials of several Russians who demonstrated against the Russian invasion and of the efforts for free expression by intellectuals and artists in the Soviet Union, noting that not since 1917 the revolution had there been any period of creativity.

Turning to the peace talks presently going on in Paris, Nagy hoped the United States would not overlock the new Soviet threat to Europe in its desire to effect a peace in Southeast Asia, and said that if the West did, it would be a "bigger mistake than Munich." He called on Western students and intellectuals to make known their support for the 100-million people in East-central Europe in efforts to influence Western diplomacy.

In comments after the address Nagy spoke of Hungary, stating that the population increase in Hungary was the lowest in the world because of the low birth rate and the high abortion rate. The main problem, he said, is the "survival of Hungary." People do not think it is worthwhile to have children, he stated. This "sad philosophy" was the result of the cruel and repressive treatment of Hungary by the Soviet Union.

"As in Russia under Stalin when the Soviet people found they were not being ruled by a socialist dictatorship of the people, but rather by a selfish regime intent as required by their distinctive cultural and historical background," Nagy said.

Apathy Revisited

It seems truly incredible that out of the 1,100 plus students that were affected by the passage or failure of the Student Union Proposal, only 434 bothered to vote on it. Certainly it sounds horribly redundant to classify this very disappointing voter response under the heading of general student apathy, but no other term really fits the situation. Where else could we lay the blame? The election certainly was no secret!

It has been suggested that the placement of the polls was discriminatory in that it would have been more logical to set them up in the patio of the Biological Sciences Building. This objection, however, seems terribly superfluous. If people couldn’t be bothered to walk the short distance from the sciences area to the student union then they certainly weren't very concerned with the outcome of the election.

The lack of voter interest in the Union Proposal is a particularly valid indicator of the minimal regard that students on this campus have toward things that directly affect their lives. In the Union Proposal we were confronted by a specific question. It was a question that had raised a large amount of controversy. It had elicited a substantial amount of both pro and anti-proposal activity. This was an issue that directly affected the students of this campus in an area that most consider crucial; namely the financial realm.

Yet, only 40 percent of the student body was sufficiently aroused into two-minutes of painless action. How all this can be true is inconceivable. The extent that student non-interest played in the failure of last Tuesday’s S.D.S. sponsored boycott of classes is not as aroused into two-minutes of painless action. It seems the best way they could reaffirm their relevancy to this amount of both pro and anti-proposal activity. This was an S.D.S.’s function at CSCSB. This organization has played a clear cut as the affect it had on the Union election. However, it had elicited a substantial affect their lives. In the Union Proposal we were confronted with an intensity. The anti-union plan vote shows that a mammoth piece not connected to the cause.

I pity the poor president of the U.S.A. About five continents Time’s Flight he cannot stay

No longer will be the tides of change

As on that fateful day He announced to a weary waiting world
What he dared not tell Carlin Leman: So ends his tenure on this. No more will he have his say No longer shall he versus change And his voice all bluer and gray

How long? He steered the ship of state And though millions him did obey He followed the course of statesmen true He sought consensus to get his way

But when reason failed to charm He was not averse to the death-deal For when one truly fights for peace Any weapon is okay

I pity our poor president Chide him as I may He steered the ship of state, to a bankrupt’s grave With only the comfort of a prince, a meager buy.

Union Failure

Editor: I was amused (and pleased) to see that the few anti-union posters helped to defeat a blitzkrieg of pro-union propaganda issued by the A.S. Government in the form of posters, mail circulars, and Pawprint advertising, and at a cost of some $200. The time and materials supplied in making the anti-union plan posters were donated to the cause.

Another interesting point is the fact that 200 names were on the pro-union petition in the Pawprint, and only 229 people voted yes on the proposition.

Perhaps the anti-union plan posters showed to the student body that there existed, however small, organized resistance to having matters pushed through the student union without the consent of the elected government. Even if there had been no anti-union posters, the blitzkrieg would probably have failed under its own integrity. The anti-union plan vote shows that a mammoth amount of propaganda will not work, and that having meaningful dialogues would be a more effective method of convincing the student body of the merits of any plan.

Paean: President Johnson

Poor Vote

Why didn't the student body vote for a proposed student union? Is it that they do not feel that they can do anything in this world? Is it that they find the problems so insurmountable that nothing they do will change the world? Or do they find themselves enraged when they think about the problems and dilemma involved? Or do we just have simple apathy? I do not know. One cannot help but be efficiently enraged (look at some of the New Leftists) nor can one think back and mumble about how "they" ought to do something about "them" as privileged in the New Right. There is only one solution for those of us who are unable to cope with the problems at hand and are nible at the little ones which are important and which can be solved. For every time one feels politics at the local level, helping where we can. For some students, it may mean only learning — but learning also means beginning to be responsible. I congratulate all those who worked for and against the proposal for a student union and those who thought seriously about what it meant to the college to have one, and who acted by voting. Let us hear from those who did not wish to participate in the vote. In these columns.

Dr. James O. Lewis, past consultant to the United States Office of Education has been invited to speak to those who are interested in the issues of the New York City Teacher’s strike. Dr. Lewis was to attend an “in-person observation” analysis of that nationally and internationally publicized conflict.

This subject will be of interest to the entire student body, but of especial concern to those students pursuing an educational position of employment. Should you be considering a career in the educational field you will want to attend this dialogue for an insight to the profession of teachers and administrators and their interaction.

Dr. Lewis is now the Human Relations Executive for California Teacher’s Association. To place a man in this position of prominence you may be assured that he was selected on a basis of his extensive qualifications. Not only has Dr. Lewis been consultant to the U.S. gov’t but in addition, he has prior experience as public school teacher, guidance counselor, and a college professor.

The program will offer a period of time for a question and answer session where you may take advantage of Dr. Lewis’ knowledge and find answers to you. This is the “Strike” and its latent and obvious effects.

If you are curious, or if you would like another viewpoint, please by all means come to this dialogue. This is just one of the many events you can be held to be brought by the CSCSB chapter of Student California Teachers Association in an effort to get you involved now, rather than later. So something — attend this dialogue!!!

November 12 at 10:30 in room BS 101 . . . do not be late there is a staggered capacity!!!

Financial Aids

Aid for Needy Students

By Tim Murphy

If you are worried about being able to stay in school because of monetary hang-ups, Mr. Doyle J. Stansel, Director of Placement and Financial Aid, would like to help you. "Federal and State aid programs are available if students have genuine need," Mr. Stansel stated. He then went on to describe the programs his office offers.

The Placement and Financial Aid office offers various scholarships such as the Educational Opportunity Grant Program, as well as the Work Study Plan. In using these various aid programs, the office of Financial Aids can help students individual "financial aid package." Stansel emphasized.

Stansel went on to say that Citizens students are entitled to financial aid and continue to enjoy very good receptions and reputations in the business and recreation communities. "The employers have described people well prepared for work." Mr. Johnson stressed concern that there may be students on campus who need help in career choice and advice but are unaware that the Placement and Financial Aid office can serve that purpose. "We urge any student to come in early and have an initial interview."

In order to determine the responsibilities of a student, Mr. Stansel and Mr. Johnson will consider the wages a student may have to earn, his savings, and parental contributions.

‘Citizen’ Wins Tonight

By MARK TREMAN

Tonight, the Lectures and Public Affairs Committee is presenting "Citizen Kane" in PF 10 at 8:00 p.m. Directed by and starring Orson Welles, this 1941 release also features Joseph Cotten, Agnes Moorehead, and Everett Sloane.

This film is best copped by the description, "Orson Welles' first and most famous film, it is a devastating biography of a newspaper publisher, Sunset Strip. In his expressionist film techniques were employed to depict and develop character and story . . . 'Citizen Kane' is one of the critical American cinema." It has been emphasized.

In 1941, "Citizen Kane" won both the Academy Award for Best Original Screenplay and the New York Critics' Award for Best Motion Picture. These qualities in themselves make this picture worth seeing. And besides, the price is right: admission is FREE.

So go see the book-tube and the drive-in for a couple of hours tonight (you can always neck in the drive-in) and liberate yourself from annoying little people, forke the endless procession of Ralph Williams commercials, and avoid people who drop popcorn in your ear. Culture is infinitely more than an old movie seen in a cold, drive-in parking lot! Culture is an old movie seen in PF 10!

"Our problem is that we don't understand Communion." This was David Crane's conclusion. He went on to say that when he spoke to some 60 people last Thursday evening on Poland, Hungary and Czechorzakia today.

"Accompanying his lecture was a film shown in two parts entitled "Penetrating the Satellites." The film, he said, was about the "sharp line between outside and inside" but unaware that the Placement and Financial Aid office can serve that purpose. "We urge any student to come in early and have an initial interview."

"Citizen Kane" was exhibited in the Student Lounge at 12:30.

The difference between these two figures can be met by using the aid programs. All this information combines to form the students individual "financial aid package." Mr. Johnson indicated that about 15 per cent of the student body this year is receiving some aid. He stated further that last year he was able to help 99 per cent of the students who were in financial trouble.

For the student who has no emergency money programs but who may want a part time job to earn pocket money, Mr. Stansel's office can also be helpful. In addition to this, career guidance is available.

Stansel also's office has many career positions available. "Most companies, as many industrial firms and government agencies work through this office," Stansel emphasized.

College Times

The Pasadena Art Museum is being visited by the late Marcel Duchamp with a special exhibit of his works drawn from the Museum's collection.

Over fifty years ago Duchamp was the object of public ridicule when he painted "Nude Descending a Staircase," was exhibited in the now famous 1913 Armory Show in New York. He was a key figure in both the Dada and Surrealist movements and is considered one of the more influential of the twentieth century.

"Life is a sickness unto death," (Kierkegaard.)

To evaluate Kierkegaard or any genius, a person must remember that works and persons often express themselves not in ordinary terms, but rather in intuitive terms resulting from the creator's supreme cognition of himself. And when that cognition is lost — as it has been in our society — then passion is lost, the capacity for suffering is lost, and the tranquility of happiness envelopes the mind like a light fog but wet fog.

College Info Center Opens

The brochure of the College Information Center states that the Center "offers information and counseling services to all who wish to learn about college admissions programs, college financial aid opportunities, or college student life in general. This is only part of the story, however. The Center's primary job, according to Mr. Larry Johnson of CSCSB's Placement and Financial Aid offices, is to pass this information concerning higher education on to those members of the community who would not normally receive it."

Mr. Johnson stresses that the Center can be of help to many people who mistakenly believe that a college education is beyond their reach due to scholastic or financial requirements. There is no fee, no obligation for any service of the Center. Anyone, regardless of age or educational background, with questions about any college is invited to use the Center's service.

College Information Center personnel are available to discuss opportunities and programs at all institutions, including junior colleges, California State Colleges, the University of California, private schools and colleges, and out of state schools. The Center has a library of catalog, pamphlets, and application forms from the various schools. Center personnel will be happy to assist in obtaining any other information not immediately available.

The C.I.C. is located in the Home of Neighborly Service at 859 North Mt. Vernon Avenue in San Bernardino's West Side. It is staffed by students and college specialists from CSCSB.

The Center is open from 2 to 5 weekday afternoons as well as Monday and Wednesday evenings 6 to 9 and Saturdays 9 to 1. The telephone number is TU 5-3491.
