The tragedy "Antigone" (Teri Giannotti) is that she hasn't a thing to wear. It may not be the play as Sophocles wrote it, but won't you have pity on our tragic heroine and donate your tired, used and broken jewelry, bracelets, belt buckles and other things to the Players of the Pear Garden so "Antigone" can be a beautiful person? Drop whatever you can in the box outside the Cafeteria or bring it to C-110. Our costume and prop crews will rework them into delights for "Antigone" to wear. See "Antigone" at the Little Theatre in May and try to identify your jewelry on stage. (Photo by Bubbles Squire)

'69 - '70 ASB ELECTIONS HERE

KEN HARPER President

KEN HARPER President

Experience. Currently A.S.B. Vice President, member of College foundation board, chairman of the Orientation Committee 1967- 3 years involvement in campus affairs. Platform - A Responsible and Responsive government, one that considers as much student opinion as possible when action is taken. I support more fiscal responsibility and have formed an appropriations committee within the Senate to check all requests for funding. I support new programs that benefit students such as the experimental college concept, military service information. I think the main force of A.S.B. should be directed toward better student-faculty-administration relations. Currently I have been serving as A.S.B. Treasurer. In 67-68 I was I.C.C. President; in 66-67 I was the chapter President of the Motor Enthusiast Club. This year I was also the President of the State College Bowling League. 2. To have effective government, you must have effective leadership. I plan to bring to the office the type of leadership that can respond quickly and efficiently to the needs of the campus. In the past, Student Government has been too slow in recognizing and reacting to these needs. I would hope to correct this.

1. I chose the presidency because it is the office that offers the most possibilities to carry out the changes that I feel are necessary.

4. In general, getting more services to the students — all students. For example, a Student Telephone Directory; better lounge facilities, a nursery school program. Draft Information. Besides services, I see the need for more, and more varied activities. Also, I hope to add through the Community University and the Cultural Affairs Committee the individual student might have a chance to enrich his living experiences.

5. I can add to the quality of the A.S.B. by providing the type of leadership that will be most effective — by working towards a more student-faculty-administration relationship where all shall work together.

As A.S.B. President, I will work for a stimulating environment where the students will have more control of curriculum matters, retention and hiring practices, speech and advocacy, and other issues which relate to self determination. In the community I will work for an expanded tutoring program. legalizations of marijuana, and improved interaction between the college and the community. Through all of our work these things can be achieved — and my campaign is the only one which is oriented towards this end. Help me!

AB elections are here and the competition for high-ranking offices is sharpening. To support or not to support—what is the question—at least it is for the editor of this paper.

At work here are two issues or interpretations, not necessarily imposed, but which may conflict. If a Pawprint editorial were to openly support one candidate, the opposition might feasibly jump on his righteous hobby-horse, gallop into his indignant sunset, whooping war cries of “Militarism!!! Military Mania!!!” That would be a bummer.

Yet, on the other hand, we have hundreds of years of journalistic ethics which insures the editor his right to express his views on any subject, as long as it is clearly defined as editorial opinion.

Well, the Pawprint has come under fire before, so the threat of another accusation will have to wait its turn in line. As someone, somewhat scholarly, subversive, authoritative journalism gets read (at least, ornithologically). With the lofty legal leverage of the journalistic code backing our editor, we are not the ones who will be considering whether or not the support of THIS editor would, in fact, help or hinder the chances of the candidates supported. An editor’s self-confidence is one thing, but the acceptance of his views among his readership is quite another. It won’t be happening. If my favorite society of apathetic slugs stole their stepping stone on the ballot of the candidates I supported instead of of the reactions in a letter-to-the-editor.

All factors considered, here is the editor’s final synthesis in support of the candidates best capable of creating a dynamic, progressive ASB government.

The editors of all the open road demands that we BARRY the issue for president. Any further attempts towards a regressive apathetic takeover should be met with a THOMPSON machinegun. When the votes are in for V.P., we can breathe a CY of relief. New ideas in an academic crucible should be forged by a new SMITH. Of course, the financial director of this new political drama must be an All-American, good man, specifically so that the ASB funds don’t wind up in a fiscal COFFEEEN.

At any rate, this is your school, your government... Run it. Get out there and vote. (It’s FREE).

Town Meeting

By BEN JACQUES

Campaigning planners have called a “town meeting” for Monday at 7 p.m. in P.S. 10 with all leaders and members interested in taking or not taking courses in planning the development of the Community University. According to Tom McBride, co-ordinator of the experimental college scheduled to begin April 21.

Hopefully, said McBride, by meeting with community members, new resources and interest can be found.

Leaders of classes already planned will discuss their courses, deciding with those who take each course its place and time. Two sections of folk guitar, the poetry of Max Jacob, Oriental mysticism and philosophy, Draft studies, and a course in sensitivity have so-far been planned.

Field Credit

Arguments regarding the question of granting credit to veterans for military or cracker-barrel philosophy, art, business, cartooning, politics explain away a number of widespread practice of granting basic training and selected skill courses credit.

Likewise, there exists the unwarranted practice of granting credit to veterans for military basic training and selected military vocational training. Why should other voluntary associations or groups, or activities not be creditable?

The word EDUCATE is rooted in the word EDUCUM, meaning, “to draw out something hidden, latent or preserved.” In other words, the student is not expected to be a mindless athlete designed to help a student to do better his or her own thing. The student judging formal classroom instruction with productive, voluntary field work is more recognition and some college credit for it.

Drago on Art

By ERIC ROMSTAD

Tuesday I attended a lecture by the studio artist Ross Drago, on the contemporary developments in the field of Art and Technology and how it relates to my reactions. My knowledge of “Art” has been and is very slight, accompanied by the typical attitude of not don’t know much about art, but I know what I like” cop-out of society. Tuesday, listening first to William Haney and then Ross Drago, I grasped some of the implications and relevance to contemporary art forms which have been so confusing to me. Ross Drago spoke on only one aspect or movement within mainstream Art but which seems to exemplify the spirit underlying much of Modern Art; that is the development of a new inter-relationship between Art and technology.

The need for new modes of expression in art is not a recent development but the situation has changed drastically in the last decade. William Haney described the position of the artist living in a world of unbelievable rapid technological advance, limited to the traditional forms of clay, ink, paint, canvas, and Rembrandt. How does the artist make his work relevant to a world of rocket and space exploration if he demurs or is unaware of the medium of his Art?

Technology? That this Technology utilized to produce everything from toilet seats to Apollo Spacecrafts, could be the medium or of connected with Art, never occurred to me. The implication of a whole new world of possibilities in Art, a bottomless pit of aesthetic forms and means of expression which need to be utilized all right in Bell Laboratories.

Drago followed in the narrow, box I subtly created, that filters and judges a world that I’ve never looked into. Which, no voice saying “all these modern artists are trying to bullshit me into believing that this crap, obviously thrown together at the last minute, is Art! Who are you trying to kid? I encapulated it, put it on the nearest conspicuous shelf, contemptuous, dusted off occasionally a’ and from time to time discuss my artistic experiences to other involved people.

Ross Drago and William Haney pointed to the World and said its all around you and all 42 people present clapped. An additional project being planned by the Community University is the setting up of a state-licensed co-operative nursery school to stimulate the apathetic student.

Playing with Fire Quakes

On April 21, a community university, or experimental college, will open at CSCSB. The courses offered are those of this college’s curriculum, carry no exams or credit, are open to anyone interested, and will be taught by community or college members. This question was raised by a student: “What would you expect, or want, an experimental college to do for CSCSB?”

Students Speak Out:

Tom Hayes

Opinion . . . Exp. College

Kris Sellers: (Freshman, Math) This would offer courses which aren’t included in our present curriculum, and would offer more diversification. It’s a very good thing. It presents a greater opportunity to learn things other than just facts and figures. It would offer more contemporary ideas that relate to the world.

Pamela Paulsen: (Senior, History) I would expect it to involve disciplines that are taught on campus, but it wouldn’t be a series of survey courses. This won’t be something that you are generally expected to take an college curriculum to give you. You would attain a general knowledge of something of interest to you, to find out if you wish to explore it further. It is an opportunity for those teaching to be creative, to fulfill a desire in them. Those teaching participate more fully in the process of learning.

Edward Courtney: (Senior, Business) An experimental college would help fill the time of those students who presently feel that they don’t have enough to do. However, any educational need of the student could be fulfilled by this college as it stand given an adequate budget and a flexible administration.

Tom Hayes: (Senior, History) The experimental college should offer education in areas not offered on campus. It should not be complicated with course credit but present opportunities for further expansion of an individual’s mind. It can offer much in arts and crafts type of courses, but more important, I hope to see controversial subjects to stimulate the apathetic student mind.

Conscription Can Be Fun

"... Do I enjoy my job? Yes, immensely..."

Ralph W. Wilks, Vice-President

Q. What are you running for: What is your platform?
A. I seek the office of A.S.B. Vice-President. I was a member of the Interorganizational Council at S.B. Valley College and I am an appointed advisor to the Academic Assembly. What is your platform?
A. I am deeply concerned with the poor public image of college students and life as your Vice-President, I will seek to improve public confidence and pride in our academic community.
Q. Why did you choose this office? I won't go so far as to recommend a career within the System to any college student. The Senate President warned, however, that a job with the System "does up and down..."
Miss Hershey explained: "Business was very poor between 1940 and 1941. At best, the job was routine..."
Q. What can you personally add to the A.S.B. (government)?
A. I am a serious student of politics. I am a listener, a talker, a pragmatist and a mature young man. I take citizenship seriously and I am concerned with my community, and I plan to build our society up rather than tear it down..."

SCRIVEN TO LECTURE

"The Obligation to Revolution" will be the title of a Tuesday morning lecture at Cal State, San Bernardino to be given by a professor of Philosophy at the University of California, Berkeley.

Dr. Michael Scriven will draw upon both the violent events on the Berkeley campus and the situations in society in general for his lecture, which is open to the public.

The speech, sponsored by the Lectures and Public Affairs Committee, will be at 11:30 a.m. in the Lecture Hall of the Physical Sciences Building Tuesday, April 22.

Dr. Scriven, who classifies himself as a philosopher of science, is described as a strong advocate of the position opposite to that taken by the Students for a Democratic Society. He has championed the position of the military, industry and technology, according to William Haney, associate professor of art and chairman of the Lectures and Public Affairs Committee which is sponsoring the philosopher's visit.

Prior to joining the UC Berkeley faculty 3½ years ago, the philosopher taught at Indiana University and the University of Minnesota. He also spent a year at the Center for the Study of Behavioral Sciences in Palo Alto. Dr. Scriven has published three books. The best known is "Primary Philosophy," a treatment of the comprehensible problems of philosophy.

Minority Careers

Careers in advertising will open to approximately 25 Afro-American and Mexican-American undergraduates this summer. The Southern California Council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies has convinced Los Angeles advertising agencies to support a program for Career Preparation in Advertising, and Sales to be offered at the University of Southern California.

Each student will receive $850 of which $350 will go toward tuition, books, and supplies, and $500 will go toward salary for a two months on-the-job internship at one of the supporting agencies. Enrolled students will be excused from their agency internship positions at 8:00 p.m. on the two school days to participate in field trips and to prepare for class. USC's School of Business Administration has scheduled the classes from 9:00-10:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. They will be taught by Dr. Burton H. Marcus, a regular faculty member and consultant on ethnic group education and ghetto marketing practices. Four units of credit will be given.

It is not expected that all the students in the program will end up, or even want to end up, in advertising or marketing. But it is hoped that some will develop a strong interest in the field and pursue further training and positions in the industry.

All interested students are urged to pick up a brochure describing the program at their School newspaper office, their Placement office, or their Dean's office. Or call Dr. Burton H. Marcus for information at (213) 746-2448.

There will be a poetry reading today at 12:30 in B-101. Students will be reciting their original works around a theme entitled "The Pregnant Whale," "God, Any Minute Now." All students, faculty and staff are invited to attend this event. Admission is free.

My concern is for this campus and its students. I have put life into the check cating service, and have sponsored financial responsibility. I have also supported constitutional reform and will continue to back this and other services for the student.
