The new policies on speech and advocacy were debated and subsequently approved at the Tuesday April 29th meeting of the Faculty Senate. The policies were formulated by an ad hoc committee of the Senate chosen early in the Fall quarter. The committee of six was made up of three students, two faculty and one administrative representative.

The decision to form an ad hoc committee was made late in the Spring of last year when it became evident that the Senate could come to no agreements on a free speech policy written by two standing committees of the Senate.

The document proposed jointly by the Lectures and Public Affairs Committee and the Student Affairs Committee met with heated resistance in the Senate and proved to be unsuitable to the Senate and the Student Body.

The current document compiles some six pages of prose regulating the conditions under which students, faculty and staff will exercise the rights of Speech and Advocacy.

Several members of the committee were present at the Senate deliberations to provide a source of reference and to clarify those points which caused some uneasiness among those present.

The only other successful attempt at amendment occurred when Dr. Gerald Scherba moved to amend the wording of the section dealing with the establishment of special areas for impromptu use. After a rapid interchange between Scherba and Dr. Jesse Hiroaka and Nick Pencoff, student Chairman of the committee, Senate chairman Ronald E. Barnes called the Senate to a vote of the document. Dr. James Crum, Senator from the Natural Science Division to propose its deletion from the document.

Have You Ever Heard the Old Adage About "Reaping What You Sow?"

Well, for weeks now the Pawprint has been crying for help, and no one has responded .... So, fellow students, you shall get out of a newspaper exactly what you put into it.

If NOTHING is what you want to give, then NOTHING you shall receive.

Ambivalence

Obviously, the Pawprint has problems. If you've read this far, it may be safe to assume that you have noticed the front page concerning the total VOID in response from students. There is no way to put the matter more simply: we are a newspaper of students, and when there are no students willing to put the paper together, then ... you guessed it, no paper.

Out of the writing staff that we had as of last quarter, five have proven to be dependable, as far as completing assignments. Worse yet, our repeated efforts to recruit students to work for the Pawprint have gone completely unwarranted. Still, many armchair experts feel justified in siding on their fat asses and criticizing the hell out of this paper attacking the quality, size and content of material. How can the Pawprint be expected to adequately cover this campus if there is no one willing to do the reporting? the layout? the captions? help with the proofreading? photography? recruit advertising? cover club events and activities? It still remains hard to believe that out of 1330 students here, only a handful volunteer to do the work.

The Pawprint owes a special dept of gratitude to our new ASB vice-president, Cy Smith. When he learned that we were in our last depths of drowning depression, he rounded up students from far and wide to submit articles for this issue. In fact, he did the job too well, for we were so swamped with copy that we could not print for lack of space. The meaning of ambivalence can be clarified in this point: although it is wonderful to have people come through with help when you're down and out, it still did not alter the significant problem of the Pawprint. Unfortunately, those whom Cy rounded up — thankful as we are for their response in a pinch — are those 8% of the student body who are already involved in campus activities and government. The net situation remains that the Pawprint does not possess the necessary and adequate personnel staff to properly run a college newspaper. If the Pawprint is to become an autonomous, efficiently functioning unit, it must acquire its own dependable staff, and not be forced to rely on the already over-burdened minority of workers. In essence, we need the reliability of turned-on wallflowers, and not the crisis-provoked extravaganza of a rose parade. Cy, we're none-the-less forever grateful for your help.

Next week, the Pawprint will put out a six page edition. We're sticking our necks on the block, and the fate is up to YOU. Yes, you, right there, holding this paper in your hands. You're reading this now, and I bet you can write too. Can you write about the plays at the Kinetic Art? the Cultural Affairs? the Faculty Senate? The AS government? sports? Weekend Magazine (yechh!!) higher education? the Community U.? or how about a nasty letter to the editor on his yellow, slanted journalism? Try it. P-32, any time.

PREPARING TO RIDE off into the distant, smog-bound sunset, our out-going ASB President, Jerry Rohde, uttered these immortal words as a parting farewell: " Twas brillig, and the stithy toves Did gyre and out-going ASB President, Jerry Rohde, uttered these immortal words as Chickens or Eggs?

Most students forget who their representatives are within a few weeks after elections are over. Why? If apathy is an inherent quality of students, then we'll never get close to what education is all about. Are apathetic students responsible for sluggish student government, or has our student government been responsible for apathetic students?

There has never been a lack of issues or concerns on this campus but there has been much misinformation and distortion of the rule rather than the exception. Why?

Student government has not done much this year for the students and too few students have done much for student government. There have been some encouraging signs of progress however: The community U., a Student Directory, a Faculty Directory offering general information about the teaching staff of this school, expansion of the Cultural Affairs Committee and a major constitutional revision.

Most new programs and activities on campus did not come from our student government but from interested students working many hours on their own time. Why?

I realize that it has been the function of student government to originate programs or develop ideas of their own, but must we be content with such a lowly notion? It is hard to understand why it has been so easy to forget student government when it has failed to come up with even one substantive program in nine months?

We have taken steps in the right direction. Let's keep walking.

Concerning the A.S. Budget

By ALAN COFFEEN

In last weeks edition of the Pawprint, some students expressed concern as to how their student body fee is being spent by A.S. Government. Students everywhere have specific areas in which they feel A.S. expenditures should be increased or decreased. This is a problem which, I, as A.S. Treasurer will have to face in the coming year.

It is my belief that A.S. Gov't, has the responsibility to represent the widest possible segment of the student body both in policy-making and in budgetary allocations. It is for this reason that the A.S. budget is set up to provide services to students everywhere who have specific areas in which they feel A.S. expenditures should be increased or decreased. This is a problem which, I, as A.S. Treasurer will have to face in the coming year.

In conclusion, I would like to emphasize the fact that student government should be meaningful as you the student make it. This done by involvement and that is exactly where CSCSB is lacking.

Book Store

While walking around campus, I have noticed some posters by a sophomore candidate for senator stating "the books are overbooked prices. Since the bookstore's prices are of great concern please clarify this situation.

The bookstore does not set its prices, the publisher does. For example a book cost $12.50, the book store pays $11.00 for it. To exclude transportation, postage, paper work, etc. By now he has made very little profit from this book and he still has to pay his hired help. Next you think why not buy directly from the publisher? Go ahead, he'll charge you $12.50 plus $1.00 mailing charges. The Bookstore will charge you $13.50 and the publisher $13.50. Who would you rather buy it from? Tell me this, how do you plan to lower its bookstores' price?

Editor's Note:

Retraction

In last week's editorial, it was stated that Mike Clark was one of eight CSCSB students who attended interviews with the State Legislature. Again, during this CSCSPA conference in Sacramento. We apologize for the error since Mr. Clark was not present during these interviews, but en route to Sacramento at that time.
... Pay toilets will be next," Clem S. Donkey, Chancellor of the California State Colleges, proclaimed this week.

In a letter responding to last week's "As I See It," Chancellor Donkey wrote that the Legislature has passed a bill "making pay toilets an integral part of state policy on each of the 18 campuses."

"Cost-operated locks will be attached to the toilet facilities by June" the Chancellor stated. Donkey estimates that the "pay-as-you-go system" will provide at least an additional $2.5 million in revenue, "thus increasing the overall quality of education in California ... making the State Colleges more competitive.

"Although students may argue that the use of lavatories facilities is included in the ASB Fee, we contend that it is not," Donkey observed.

As I See It...

Pay Potty' Proposal Passed

"Indeed, by June 1 both students and faculty should carry plenty of change," he advised.

Regarding the suggestion of the Governor's Office that College administrators grow their own seed that which is the athletic field," the Chancellor was specific: "While this might seem a dire attempt to achieve greater economic efficiency within the State College System, its application would lead to a very unhealthy situation." "Giving student six credits for 30 hours of field work, as your administrators proposed, would constitute the creation of a communal farm ... which is not an American institution," Donkey explained.

He added that "the Governor was extremely upset" when he learned that the ASB Government was preparing a pamphlet "to accompany his program" entitled THE SAYINGS OF CHAIRMAN PEAU.

The Chancellor consequently noted that "the program has been cancelled and the field will therefore remain in its present condition."

Concerned Chancellor Donkey, "If the financial situation which now exists within the State College System is further critical ... that is, if funds become even more difficult to appropriate ... the students and faculty may find it necessary to supply their own toilet paper. This is the great tragedy of higher education in California."
SIGN UP FOR THE FIRST CSCSB swimming pentathlon are being taken at the P.E. Building equipment issue window. All persons eligible for intramurals are being taken at the P.E. Building will be determined on the basis of performance in all five events.

Dr. Al Egge and Mr. Clark Mayo have been appointed as the faculty representatives. Vice President Gerald Schebera is the sole administrator on the committee. Student reps are Joe McKee, Al Coheen and Nick Pencoff. The meeting will take place at three p.m. in the Social Science Division Conference room.

The recently formed Ad-Hoc Committee to Study Student-Faculty Policy-Making Relationships has set Friday May 9 as the date for its first meeting. the moral questions involved. Contraception is the third method utilizing numerous modes and devices which is a successful solution if accompanied by an educating process. The fourth method is sterilization which is practiced in India. The main drawback to this method is that unless a person is sterilized there is only a fifty per cent chance that, if that person decides to have children later, the operation can be undone.

Dr. Guttmachener closed by saying the population problem is growing more serious every day and that no ready solution seems to be available but research is continuing to search for a solution.
