Frances Berdan named Outstanding professor

Dr. Frances F. Berdan, an anthropologist recognized worldwide for her studies on the Aztecs, has been selected as the outstanding professor at Cal State, San Bernardino for 1983. A professor of anthropology and chair of the department, Dr. Berdan will represent the college in the California State University Board of Trustees’ Outstanding Professor Awards. Each year, the CSU honors two distinguished faculty members selected from the 19 CSU campuses.

Helga Scovel (BA 1979) was the alumni representative on the eight-member selection committee.

The primary criterion for selection for this honor is teaching ability. A traditional teacher who believes in structured classes and hard work, Dr. Berdan has consistently scored in the top percentile on student evaluations of her teaching since she joined the college in 1973.

Among her most recent projects have been the development of a videotaped course in anthropology designed for self-paced learning and a new museum.

Outstanding alumni Nominations sought

Members of the Alumni Association will receive through the mail during February forms for nominating graduates for the distinguished alumni awards. The forms should be returned to the Alumni Affairs Office by March 15.

Any individual who has received a degree, credential or certificate from Cal State, San Bernardino is eligible for nomination. Recipients of the award are honored for their significant contributions to their profession, community and the college.

The outstanding alumni, including one designated as alumnus of the year, will be revealed at the fourth annual alumni brunch Sunday, April 24. Last year, more than 120 graduates and friends of the association attended the affair. At this year’s event, alumni will have the opportunity to meet President and Mrs. Anthony H. Evans.

New President Believes

Cal State should be regional university

Cal State, San Bernardino should take its rightful place as a regional university noted for service throughout the Inland Empire, President Anthony Evans declared in his first college-wide convocation Jan. 13.

Dr. Evans outlined his dreams, his goals and his priorities to a standing-room-only crowd of faculty, staff and students which jammed the Recital Hall and overflowed into the adjoining patio.

“This goal (of a regional university) did not originate with me, but was the mandate for the college’s creation.”

The goal can be reached only by effective mobilization of the entire college community, he said in urging each employee of the college to set a personal goal of recruiting one student annually and helping to retain at least one other.

Dr. Evans, who became Cal State’s second president Nov. 1, 1982, outlined four immediate priorities for the institution. They are: to intensify the admissions outreach effort, to diversify the academic programs, to make the campus a more vital place in which to study, live and work, and to dramatically expand the college/community relations program.

Describing past outreach efforts to both students and the public as passive, Dr. Evans promised both a more aggressive posture and extension of community relations efforts into a broader geographic effort.

“I believe our college’s future is unalterably linked to its ability to establish ties with communities such as Barstow, Victorville, Fontana, Hemet, Riverside, Palm Springs, Indio and Palm Desert,” he said.

Creating a distinctive community outreach, he added, may require that the college provide state-supported degree programs off campus in areas such as the Coachella Valley and Barstow.

President Evans described his initial impressions of the college as very positive. He commended his predecessor and others who established the college on a strong foundation. The strengths he cited included an outlook...
Board approves Dues increases

The Alumni Board of Directors approved dues increases to become effective June 30.

Single membership, which will include the option of joining the alumni chapter, will be $18 per year. Membership, including the chapter option, for two graduates from the same family will be $27 per year.

Life membership will remain the same: $100 for one alumnus, $150 for two alumni from the same family.

Currently, single membership costs $10 annually and joint membership $15. Additional membership in one of the chapters is $5.

"The additional money collected from the dues increase will enable the association to expand its publication, The Panorama, aid in the development of additional chapters and increase benefits to the general membership," said Kathy Fortner, president of the association.

The board is exploring the possibilities of offering members a complete insurance benefits package, increasing circulation of The Panorama and providing for alumni participation in intramural sports programs.

History is theme Of library exhibits

Italian woodcut blocks dating from the 15th to the 19th centuries, memorabilia from five presidential elections and chromolithographs from the late 1800s are the subjects of three displays in the Pfau Library during winter quarter.

Currently on exhibit through Feb. 18 are woodcut blocks, remnants of printers' stocks of illustrations and ornaments found in the Palazzo Pio in Capri, Italy.

Prints made from the blocks also are exhibited, as are a number of rare 15th through 17th century volumes containing examples of woodcut illustration. The exhibit is on loan from the Frank V. de Bellis Collection housed at San Francisco State University.

Also on display are political memorabilia from five critical elections: Thomas Jefferson in 1800; Andrew Jackson, 1828; Abraham Lincoln, 1860; William McKinley, 1896; and Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1936. This Smithsonian Institution exhibit closes Feb. 18.

Chromolithographs by Louis Prang will be displayed Feb. 12 through March 13. Occupying a unique spot in the history of American printing, they were used as illustrations for the bird and mammal volumes of Selmah Hess' book "Our Living World," published in 1885.

School of Administration Announces reorganization

To better serve the growing enrollment, specializations developing within the business field and community projects, the School of Administration is undergoing reorganization.

Effective fall 1983, the school will be called the School of Business and Public Administration. It will be divided into four departments: Public Administration, Accounting and Finance, Management, and Marketing and Management. Science.

Currently there are two departments, Business Administration and Public Administration. The three new department chairs will be selected by June 1983.

Students working toward degrees in administration total 1,363, or 27 percent of the student population. Ten years ago, 277 students, or 10.5 percent, were administration majors.

This rapid growth, particularly in the areas of marketing and accounting, has created a need to provide specialized departments, according to Dr. Hal Hoverland, dean of the School of Administration.

The school's division is expected to facilitate student access to faculty advisors and to enable faculty within each department to work more closely together to develop curricula and to conduct research projects, including local studies in such areas as community growth and industrial development.

The change also will increase the opportunities for direct contact between a department chair and a specialized business operation, such as a CPA firm or marketing division, Dr. Hoverland said.

"The college is firmly committed to a close working relationship with business and public agencies and the community colleges in the area," Dr. Hoverland said.

Manuscripts sought for New literary magazine

Alumni are invited to submit their prose fiction and poetry for the inaugural issue of The Pacific Review, a new campus literary magazine.

The editorial staff is planning to publish the first edition in May. The magazine primarily will feature works by alumni and students of Cal State, San Bernardino. A few items by nationally known artists also will be included.

Alumni wishing to submit manuscripts should send their typed work to: English Department, California State College, San Bernardino, 5500 State College Parkway, San Bernardino, CA 92407. The deadline for manuscripts is Wednesday, March 16.

Alumni meet Evanses; discuss college future

About 30 alumni gathered at the home of Larry and Marilyn (BA 1981) Glick in San Bernardino Dec. 9 to meet Dr. Anthony H. Evans, new president of Cal State, San Bernardino, and his wife, Lois.

After meeting alumni individually, Dr. Evans had an informal chat with the group about the future of the college and the alumni's role in it.

"I think the single most important contribution a graduate can make is to be a warm, loyal supporter who will speak on behalf of the college in terms of referring students and who will look for opportunities to help us get involved in activities they are involved in the community," Dr. Evans said.

Involvement in the community was uppermost in the minds of the alumni that evening. Among the college needs that they pointed out were a stronger image, better community identification, increased communication with high school counselors outside the San Bernardino area and new ways to attract people to the campus.

President Evans said alumni can help by referring prospective students, identifying students who may need financial aid and serving on special committees. Examples of such committees would be those formed to bring community groups to the college and to stimulate faculty and staff to get more involved off campus.

"I'm hopeful that we can encourage the college community to move into the community. We probably can survive without close association with the community, but we will never thrive and prosper in that type of environment. We need the community and the community needs us," he said.

"We put enough graduates into the community," commented Al Twine, president of the Education Chapter. "I think we should be able to get something back from the community."

"The college has a solid foundation in terms of physical plant, faculty and curriculum, and now it's time to move on," said Lawrence Daniels, past president of the Alumni Association.

One of the appeals of Cal State, San Bernardino, Dr. Evans said, is its regional mandate. Built to serve the Inland Empire, the college should extend its service area beyond to the low and high deserts and Riverside.

"I would hope we'd be considered distinctive because of that regional service out in the community. I believe in the next five to 10 years the college will take on a certain stature it has not had as yet."

standing faculty and staff, a serious, hard-working student body, the value of shared governance, many student support programs and "a widespread commitment to educational quality."

Listed as key areas which need improvement are the image of the college and its programs throughout the Inland Empire, a conservatism which leads to fear of taking risks and little sense of urgency.

To rise to his challenge of becoming aggressively competitive will require new leadership, a new mind-set, additional personnel and more resources, Dr. Evans outlined.

"We must use our alumni more effectively to help us gain a good reception in the various high schools. We must bring prospective students by the thousands to our campus each year as our special guests. We must work more closely with educators at both the high schools and the community college. We must identify target populations and develop specific programs and strategies to reach these groups. Above all, we need a sense of mission to serve our region well."

Association seeks 500 new members

Tom Miller, vice president and membership chair of the Alumni Association, has outlined an aggressive membership drive with a goal of 500 new members by June 30.

"There is no reason why our membership should not be at least 1,000 strong," Miller said. Current membership is 428.

The drive will include updating current mailing lists, adding additional benefits to the current package for association members, and encouraging alumni to take part and pride in the continued development of Cal State, San Bernardino.
College to celebrate Black History Week

A drama show by the Shades of Black, an acting troupe from UC, Riverside, will be the first in a series of Black History Week events planned by the Black Student Union at Cal State, San Bernardino Monday through Thursday, Feb. 14 through 20.

During the program, which will begin at 7 p.m., Feb. 14, in the Recital Hall, pianist Althea Waites, assistant professor of music at Cal State, will give a brief program on Margaret Bonds, an influential black composer.

"Memories" is the theme for a program at 5:30 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 15 in the Multipurpose Room of the Student Union.

The Rev. Billy G. Williams of Redlands Missionary Baptist Church will portray Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

A dance is scheduled from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., Thursday, Feb. 17, in the Multi-purpose Room of the Student Union.

Concluding the week's activities, various gospel groups from the area will join voices at 3 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 20, in the Recital Hall. The Upward Bound Program at Cal State is co-sponsoring this event.

Also as part of the celebration of black history, an exhibit of paintings by black artists will be displayed Feb. 10 through March 27 on the fourth floor of the Pfau Library.

Admission is free to all events except the dance. Dance admission is $1 for students with Cal State, San Bernardino identification cards and $1.50 general. Donations will be accepted for refreshments during other events.

'Equus' is winter Theatre production

"Equus," the Tony award-winning play by Peter Shaffer, will begin Feb. 24 in the Theatre at Cal State, San Bernardino.

Performances are scheduled at 8:15 p.m., Thursday through Saturday, Feb. 24 through 26, and Tuesday through Saturday, March 1 through 5.

Playwright and actor Harry Cauley, a Cherry Valley resident, will be guest artist in the role of Martin Dysart, a psychiatrist who explores the tortured psyche of a 17-year-old stable boy. The play contains nudity and is recommended for mature audiences.

Last year, Cauley's play "Next Time for Real" premiered on campus.

Earlier, Cal State produced his "Sleeping with the Enemy." In 1973, he was a guest artist at the college and had the lead role in two Moliere plays presented on campus.

Cauley has written plays that have appeared on Broadway, and most recently wrote for television. As an actor, he has performed on the New York stage, in summer theatre back East and on television. Cauley was producer-director of his own summer theatre in the East for many years.

Members of the Alumni Association are given a special admission fee of $2, which is the charge for students. In order to purchase tickets at the reduced rate, alumni must present their current Alumni Association membership card. Information on availability of seating may be secured from the Theatre Arts Department, (714) 887-7452.

Assistance offered for Area chapter development

Alumni interested in forming area chapters may secure assistance in the recruiting task from the Alumni Association.

The association will provide chapter organizers with mailing lists, envelopes, letterheads and other materials.

Many alumni reside in the same area, such as San Diego, Orange County, Los Angeles, San Fernando Valley, San Francisco, Sacramento, Fresno, San Jose and the high and low deserts. Forming local chapters would help them keep in touch with each other and the college.

As members of these college support groups, alumni can develop projects that would be of great assistance, such as meeting with prospective students from their area and helping current Cal State students locate employment, said Richard Bennecke, alumni affairs coordinator.

"The area chapter concept is a program that can have a tremendous impact on promoting Cal State, San Bernardino, as well as provide for a meaningful relationship with the Alumni Association and its programs," Bennecke said.

studies track within the anthropology major. She also is an advisor for liberal studies majors and freshmen.

Beyond her teaching record, Dr. Berdan is a noted researcher and scholar in the field of anthropology, according to Dr. J. Cordell Robinson, associate vice president for academic affairs.

"She has written what is considered to be the basic work on Aztec society and her expertise in Nahua, the language of the Aztecs, is rare," Dr. Robinson said, adding that she is one of about 50 people in the world who have that expertise.

Her book, titled "The Aztecs of Central Mexico: An Imperial Society," is part of a series on cultural anthropology. She also has published numerous other articles and co-authored two published works. She currently is writing a book under contract, co-writing two books, and co-editing another.

Dr. Berdan has been a consultant for the National Geographic Society and is a member of many professional organizations in anthropology and archeology.

She holds a B.A. in geography and an M.A. in anthropology from the University of Texas. Dr. Berdan earned her Ph.D. in anthropology from the University of Texas at Austin.

Spotlight Corner

Education leads alumna to fulfilling career in politics

Marilyn Glick had thought about going to college for years. In 1976, her husband, Lawrence, helped her make the decision by submitting her application to Cal State, San Bernardino.

The daughter of a native Texan and a Jewish Russian woman who immigrated to Texas in 1922 to escape persecution, Marilyn graduated from a Corpus Christi high school in 1953.

That year, she married Lawrence Glick, who was finishing a stint in the Coast Guard. He now is director of personnel services for San Bernardino City Unified School District. After their marriage, Marilyn worked as a secretary, first in Texas to help Lawrence through college, then after they moved to California. She also raised their two daughters.

Out of the classroom for so long, Marilyn agonized about her ability to succeed in college.

"My first class was with Carol Goss in that huge lecture hall in the Physical Sciences Building. I was terrified. I sat in one seat at the front and never changed seats the whole time," Marilyn said.

But, the subject, political science, fascinated her and she earned her first A. Then a series of events occurred that led to her current role as staff assistant to Congressman Jerry Lewis.

In 1978, she landed an internship with Lewis, then an assemblyman. After three months, he asked Marilyn to join his staff.

"I'm a firm believer in internships. They're a good way to get very valuable experience, to build connections and to know what you want to do when you get out in the field," she said.

"Jerry said he would hire me on the one condition that I promise him I would not quit school, that I'd finish," she said. Marilyn worked on his campaign for Congress and became his assistant in January 1979. In 1981, she graduated with honors and a degree in political science.

Today, Marilyn is a liaison between individuals who call or visit Lewis' Redlands office and the myriad of federal agencies dealing with matters ranging from social security and veterans benefits to small business loans and transportation.

"I'm very fortunate in that I like to help people and this is a very good way to fulfill that need. The people in Washington are very important because they make policy. But, they can write legislation and by the time it passes, it's completely different.

"We are able to see results. When someone comes in with a problem and a couple hours later it is resolved, it's a terrific feeling," she said.

Marilyn said she also feels fortunate in her work assisting the public because "I feel an obligation. This country has been very good to me and my family."

She thanks her college education, which she is continuing through postgraduate work at Cal State, San Bernardino, for providing an avenue to her career and for helping her gain independence of thought.

"So often, especially for women, we accept what we are told. I think it's important to learn to think critically. That's what is so important about education," she said, adding that this independence she tries to encourage in her daughters, Carey, 21, and Lori, 18, both now in college.

To remind herself of the value of independent decision, Marilyn carries in her purse a quote she discovered in class two years ago. The quote by philosopher Immanuel Kant reads:

"Enlightenment is man's emergence from his self-imposed nonage. Nonage lies not in lack of understanding, but in indecision and lack of courage to use one's own mind without another's guidance. DARE TO KNOW. Have the courage to use your own understanding."
