SHAW'S "ARMS AND THE MAN" OPENS THREE-NIGHT RUN

The anti-romantic comedy, "Arms and the Man" by George Bernard Shaw, opened last night in the College's Little Theatre.

Starring Don Blair as the dashing Swiss mercenary soldier, Captain Bluntschli, and Marilyn Petric as Raina, the charmingly confused heroine, the second performance will be at 8:15 this evening.

Dr. Ronald E. Barnes of the College Drama Department is directing the play, which is a satire in the best Shavian manner.

Diane Blair plays the role of Raina's mother, Catherine Petkoff, and Robert Squire plays the role of her father, Major Petkoff.

The role of the sassy, opportunistic maid, Louka, is acted by Mary Barnes and Nick Pencoff plays Major Sergius Saranoff, who is torn between maid and mistress. George Iwanaga is cast as Nicola, the family servant, and Jerry Rohde as the Russian Officer.

Performances include tonight's and the final showing Saturday. Tickets are 75 cents for students, faculty and staff and $1.50 for the public. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Division of Humanities Office or at the door prior to showtime, 8:15 p.m.

CONTEMPORARY ART FILM TO BE SHOWN TODAY AT 12:30

New technologies in the visual arts will be featured in the film, "Light and Motion in Contemporary Art," showing at 12:30 today in PS-10.

Professor William Haney, who was active in its making, has two pieces of work featured and is shown in a short scene in the film. He will give a talk and conduct a question and answer period following the showing, which is open to all College personnel.

To illustrate how to inject color into vacuum cast plastic and introduce new lighting systems were the two primary reasons behind the film's making. Both color and black and white film were used in the photography of the film, which was a recent entry in the Venice Film Festival. Admission is free.
