The International Club dinner speaker Debra Denker shows slides on Afghanistan.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB SPEAKER

A speech by Ms. Debra Denker, an acknowledged expert on Central and South Asia, highlighted the International Club dinner held last Friday, April 6. Students, faculty and staff of Cal State, along with members of the San Bernardino Mayor's International Council of Members, were held last Friday, April 6. The students whose names appear on this petition hereby request that 60% of the A.S. fees paid by members of underrepresented groups be set aside for cultural, ethnic, and special interest activities. It is proposed that these funds be appropriated by a committee which will consist of appointed members of underrepresented student groups.

This proposal has been deemed necessary for the following reasons:

1) Consistent lack of sensitivity and support to the needs of underrepresented groups by the Associated Students Board.
2) Underrepresented groups are excluded from fair and equal treatment in the implementation of Associated Student's Board programs.
3) The overall philosophical views of the Associated Students' Board members appear to be inconsistent with the mission of the college.

This petition was a cooperative effort between the Black Student Union (BSU) and Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan (MEChA) located on this campus. Ms. Bridget Copeland, an undergraduate biology major, President of the BSU, and presently a candidate for A.S. President, agreed to discuss with the Chronicle the reasons for her unhappiness and why the petition became a reality. "The Associated Students' Board Members are not representing minorities, therefore the problems and issues of the minorities are not being discussed," she claims.

Minors in Pub Questioned

by Kathryn C. Yount

Whether minors will continue to be allowed in the Student Union Pub on Thursday nights will be discussed at the Student Union Board meeting on Wednesday, April 11 at 3:00 p.m. Since fall quarter, Thursday nights have been punctuated by fights involving, for the most part, intoxicated minors. The company that holds the liquor licence, Professional Food Management (PFM), is asking the SU Board for the policy change.

According to Bill Fennell, PFM manager, "the Pub is getting the blame (for the intoxicated minors) even though students get drunk in the dorms or in their cars before coming up to the Pub. These problems with minors have endangered our liquor licence. If we ever lost the licence, chances are that it will never be renewed. We are only trying to keep our licence and thereby serve students."

Associated Students Activities Chair Dexter Wash coordinated Thursday night A.S. activities. Wash charges that "the views of students, especially the younger under 21 students, are not being taken into account. Many of them (the minors) go into the Pub to socialize—not to drink. The blame for the incidents being put on them because they are the easiest target. Further research on the part of PFM may show that minors in the Pub are the problem, but further research must be done before a solution is found."

Fennell stated that, "if you stop and look and analyze the Public Safety department's reports, the problems are with the minors who are intoxicated."

Earlier this year the SU Board adopted tighter security measures and charging of non-students on Thursday nights hoping to stop the fights.
Loans Repaid in Exchange for Teaching

The California Teacher Shortage Loan Assumption Program is an incentive program to attract and retain qualified teachers in designated critical shortage areas, such as math and the sciences, should be operational by this summer according to the Program's Advisory Council.

Council members and other interested parties have outlined the steps needed to fully implement the program. More specific plans are presented, the advisory group is seeking to clarify parts of the legislation creating the program. The program's main components will begin accepting applications from qualified persons during the summer.

 Portions of GSL, NDSL, and other Commission-approved loan programs would be assumed by the State of California in exchange for teaching in a designated shortage area. A borrower who fulfills the consecutive years in a critical shortage area in a designated school district may have up to $8,000 in loans assumed. The State Superintendent of Public Instruction will identify and supply to the Commission a list of school districts where shortages exist.

State Senator Gary Hart and State Assemblyman Teresa Hughes sponsored the original bill creating the Loan Assumption Program. The Student Aid Commission is the agency designated to administer the new program.

A more detailed outline of the California Teacher Shortage Loan Assumption Program is included in the Commission's 1984-85 Counselor's Guide.

Scholarship Winners

The Uni Phi Club awarded three $100 scholarships to deserving students. The presentations were made at the Valentine's Day luncheon which the club hosted. The recipients were: Gail Fitch, a senior in Psychology; Suzanne Hill, a freshman in Sociology. These three students have demonstrated excellent academic performance. They all promise to have a very bright future.

The selection committee was pleased with the high quality of the Winter Quarter applicants. If you are a student who applied, but did not receive a scholarship, you may have your application reconsidered for the Spring Quarter awards. Please notify the SSD Office if you would like the selection committee to retain and reconsider your application. New applications for the Spring Quarter scholarships will be available early during Spring Quarter. Specific information will be sent to all dues-paying members.

International Club
by Susan Shotthafer

How large is your world? If your interests extend beyond Cal State, or even beyond San Bernardino, or the United States, you might enjoy being a member of the campus International Club.

The objective of the Club is to increase students' understanding of the culture, history, and politics of other nations.

Lee Ann Overstreet, the club's president, said, "The International Club was organized especially for students taking courses in international relations and international affairs, but any member of the college community having an interest in the objectives and activities of the club is encouraged to join."

A major fundraising event was held last Friday night. The Internation Club Dinner was held on April 12, in Sacramento. Some past activities sponsored by the Club were an acupressure demonstration by Dr. James Sun, a licensed acupressurist, at the Winter Carnival and a slide presentation by Dr. Robert Stein of the Math Department of Cal State who recently visited the Soviet Union.

The International Club was organized in 1969 and now has approximately 20 members. In the spring quarter, the members tentatively plan to meet twice a month. Meetings are held noon in the Student Union Senate Chambers. Dr. Brig Kharre of the Political Science Department and Dr. Rauf Khan, Professor of Administration are the Club's faculty sponsors.

While the main objective of the event is to provide an enjoyable evening, Overstreet said, "the club also hopes the dinner will serve to promote a closer relationship between the community and Cal State."

Additionally, the dinner is to be a primary fundraiser. The club hopes to raise $200 to send some of its members to the model United Nations Conference, which will be held on April 12 in Sacramento. Some past activities sponsored by the Club were an acupressure demonstration by Dr. James Sun, a licensed acupressurist, at the Winter Carnival and a slide presentation by Dr. Robert Stein of the Math Department of Cal State who recently visited the Soviet Union.

Experience a "Seder"

by Carol Leish

In celebration of Passover and to assist in this great event with Jewish customs and practices, Shalom Club (the Jewish community) is sponsoring a Model Seder with the Newman Club (the Catholic Community) on campus. The Seder will begin at sundown on April 22nd and end at sundown on April 23rd, lasting 7 days.

Food practices during Passover started at sundown on April 16 and will conclude at sundown on April 23.

The Seder is held annually for the Exodus of the Jewish people from enslavement in Egypt around the same time the Passover calendar was written. It is a time for Jews to remember the hardship and sacrifice their ancestors endured during this period.

The Seder meal is a significant part of the celebration and includes various symbolic foods.

- Matzah (unleavened bread): Represents the haste with which the Jews left Egypt and the lack of time to let their bread rise.
- Parsley (bitter herbs): Represents the bitterness of slavery.
- Haroset (apples, nuts, and raisins): Symbolizes the mortar that the Jewish people were forced to make and use to build Egyptian cities.
- Seder Plate: Includes various types of food associated with the Passover story.
- Lamb Bone: Represents the shankbone symbolizes offerings which were done when Temple was in Jerusalem.

The Seder meal is a tradition that involves storytelling and reflection on the events of the Exodus.

International Club Hosts Speaker

International club for the opportunity to come and make a presentation on the plight of the Afghan refugees. Ms. Denker is a writer, photo-journalist, and film maker. She has been in Afghanistan most of the last five years in Pakistan, Afghanistan and Japan involved in fundraising activities for the Afghan refugees. She was born in Los Angeles, but characterized herself as a "citizen of the world," whose heart lies west of the legendary Khyber Pass.

Some of her many credits include articles published in the L.A. Times and the Portland Oregonian. Selections of her photographic view of the Asian subcontinent were included in the recent Silk Route Exhibition in Los Angeles which subsequently went to the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C. She was featured in the October 81 issue of National Geographic with an article on the Kalash Tribe who live in several of Pakistan's mountain valleys. An upcoming work on the Kirgiz tribe of Afghanistan is to be published and is scheduled for a book about the Central Asian Survey out of Oxford University. She is currently working on University Status, a fundamentally important issue. She is currently working on the Board of Directors to decide who gets what.

In this touchy and controversial issue one can easily hear rumors laced with controversy. Whether she is "right" or "left," one thing is certain. Her work has been characterized as "Genocide by emigration" no matter what the issue is. She is a "citizen of the world," whose heart lies west of the legendary Khyber Pass.

After the question and answer period which followed, Ms. Denker did conclude on an optimistic note, however. She was asked if she believed the Soviets were ready to stay indefinitely. While she did not believe they were as yet ready to negotiate seriously, they were in much the same position as previous invaders of the area and had been eventually come to the realization that they could not possibly defeat the Afghan people, who themselves see the ongoing conflict as basically religious in nature.

HEALTH CORNER

This is a weekly column. If you have any health-related questions that you would like answered, drop your questions in the box in the Health Center lobby.

I've read a little about anorexia nervosa, but I still don't feel that I understand what it's all about. Can you give some general information?

The individual with anorexia is usually someone of normal or near normal weight who starts on an innocent diet and actively begins suppressing hunger sensations to the point of self-starvation. Classic anorectics starve themselves to skeletal thinness, often losing up to 25% of their original body weight. This dramatic weight loss is usually accompanied by an intense fear of becoming obese that does not diminish as weight loss progresses. Other characteristics of the disorder include a distorted self-image, and a refusal to maintain body weight over minimum normal weight for age and height. Although the illness is most common among teenage or young adult women with perfectionist tendencies, it can also affect men and older patients.

"...it can affect men and older patients."

Family and friends can be alerted to the illness by several other behavioral patterns. Anorectics develop an exaggerated interest in food, but at the same time deny hunger and stop eating, often saying they do not need to eat. They often prepare elaborate meals for their family but never eat with them, preferring to eat alone and unobserved. Most anorectics develop unusual eating habits, restricting their diet to certain kinds of foods. They may also undertake a program of unrelenting exercise, show excessive devotion to schoolwork, begin to withdraw socially, become depressed and develop sleep problems, sometimes no more than 3-4 hours per night. Despite their malnourished condition, anorectics stubbornly resist help, claiming they do not need it, and insisting on their right to be as thin as they want to be.

Early detection of the disease is vital because the health consequences of the illness can be so severe. Anorectic women usually stop menstruating. Other complications include edema (fluid accumulation in the legs) and potential cardiac problems such as arrhythmia (an abnormal heart rhythm) which can lead to sudden death. It is also common for anorectics to have a lower blood pressure, lower body temperature, high cholesterol levels, anemia, and to begin to lose their hair.

The causes of anorexia nervosa are unknown. The widespread emphasis on diets and the desirability of being thin in our society certainly contribute to the incidence of anorexia. Psychological factors play an important role in the development of the illness as well. Often anorectics are "...as they mature, they develop a lack of self-confidence ...

Anorexia is a complex condition for which treatment varies according to the specific physical and psychological needs of the person. Successful management of anorexia usually requires not only treating malnutrition but also examining dietary habits, stress situations in the patient's life, underlying sources of depression, attitudes about weight loss, and other interfering mental and physical factors. If not recognized and treated in time, the illness can lead to life-long health problems or death.

There is a non-profit organization, the National Association of Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders (ANAD), which provides information about anorexia and eating disorders. You can write to them at Box 271, Highland Park, Illinois 60035. If you have any other questions, please stop by the Health Center.

The next issue will be devoted to the topic of bulimia, so stay tuned.

ONE OF THE OLDEST WAYS
TO BECOME AN ARMY OFFICER IS STILL ONE OF THE BEST.

The Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) offers college students nationwide an exciting, challenging opportunity to become Army officers. ROTC is a volunteer program that requires a commitment of four years. However, ROTC also provides students with leadership training and life skills that can be applied to all aspects of their future endeavors.

The Army ROTC program is designed for both men and women. There are two distinct paths for students to choose from: the Commissioned Officers' Training Program (COTP) and the Advanced Course (AC). The COTP provides a structured environment for students to learn and develop leadership skills. The AC allows students to continue their academic and professional pursuits while still receiving leadership training.

The Army ROTC program is open to all majors, and students can earn credit toward their degree while participating. ROTC students receive a monthly stipend and have access to a variety of scholarships and loan programs.

If you are interested in learning more about the Army ROTC program, please contact your local ROTC unit or visit the official website at ROTC.army.mil. You can also call 1-800-ROTC-ARMY for more information.

EDWARDS MANSION—A TOUCH OF THE PAST

Travelling down the curved road through acres of orange groves, a Victorian relic of the past, Edwards Mansion presents not only an elegance of the Victorian period, but also a fine restaurant of today. The 1890 Monte Cristo; The 1890's are represented in the Mansion's history, manager Herman Martin says, and their curiosity of the past brings them here, as well as our fine food and service.

The Mansion was purchased in 1973 for the minute sum of one dollar by a group of developers headed by Don Wilcott. The thought that this classic exhibit of Victorian architecture should be moved and restored was in the plan. Too large to move in one piece, the landmark, located on the hilly Redlands landscape, was split in half and moved to where it now stands. The Redlands Daily Facts covered the story on July 12, 1973.

"Crowds gathered in a carnival-like atmosphere to see the large segments, heavily braced and cable, ride the better part of five miles without cracking plaster or breaking a window. Telephone and power lines were temporarily removed from the path of this gigantic undertaking."

After the move the $100,000 renewal project shifted into high gear with the renovating of the future restaurant's classic interior. The Mansion has developed many facilities which are available to its patrons, including: a greenhouse reminiscent of the Mansion's past Victorian conservatory, set for dining; the Orange Tree Chapel, built in 1904, with services available for weddings; a gazebo amidst the scenic orange groves of the old Barton Ranch; an open-air balcony, providing dining with a romantic view of the fertile and picturesque estate; and intimate alcoves for two.

The Edwards Mansion complex is located adjacent to the San Bernardino County Museum at 2064 Orange Tree Lane, in Redlands. Take the California Street Exit off Interstate 10 and proceed north to Orange Tree Lane.

Edwards Mansion is open for lunch Monday through Saturday, dinner, offering a medium-priced menu, is served Tuesday through Sunday. Sunday also features a champagne brunch. Hours vary, so make a telephone call, and reservations are a good idea (793-2031). If you'd like a truly memorable outing, ask for an open-air balcony.

The Conversation

Across the table I felt the words well-hidden in her pockets. Too bad, too bad no new grass green or sky blue allowed. We prefer bloodied lamb red monotone sacrificial gray and flat winter white as far as the heart can see.

So, she said, I sent them food, hugs, kisses and prayers in legal sized envelopes.

How can you fly? The dirges need singing. Sing, sing until you fall. See, how easy the trick is in not thinking, not thinking, not thinking...

So, she said, I gave her a newsreel of my big heart. Naturally projecting affection on the silver screen of the holy woods.

Well then, even with our four percent investment you will keep your rainbow. Surely not that golden eyed lion with the soft paws? All but our kind are beasts. He'll kill you with the laughter. Predestined, we like smooth stones worn slowly down by dripping water, she said, you'll get none from me. You must first die of thirst then sing dirges of red and gray and off white and receive prayers in legal sized envelopes.

Poem

Performance Poem

My claim on art is in the sad galvanized rings of my multi-tracked eyes; I do everything I can in these general media.

I work towards appearance as do those silvery screens—slow bands of illumination which also pull themselves as my eyes do on cloudy days, the false transposition of an androgynous moonlight, along the round ridges of hills under the white sky where there must be blue gaps behind my vision from which this mimicked sunshine passes.

My manner makes thoughtfulness seem from the slightest over-dub lines on my face in the direction of my eyes—their color adjusting in due course to lighting and decorum. Bordered hazel brown, holding an integrated green with gold centerings; my eyes could be any eyes, but I have lowered my body temperature to compliment them.

Sonnet On Her Season

Diversity—the season flood the plain between and all the years Flow coursing across the lea—his winter has come, Her summer has barely seen its amber grapes upon the vine; His harvest stored, his life fermenting wine. The days grow shorter, fields lie fallow and the grave— Like rain clouds beckons before the storm is made. To choose to stay, or choose to go; To face the cold, or flee the falling snow? A blazing fire can warm the frozen trace— She need but glance upon his fearful face, Her tinder memory fan and fire ignites surrendering her season So in it he might prevail against the summoning of a winter’s night. Two hands across the flow can reach To smooth the waves and men the ancient breach.
Living Wind

The stirring of the warm wind that blows through the month of Hallow’s Eve is as eerie as it contradicts.

This warm October wind stirs the things that eventually died for the heat of summer. As I walked through the trees tonight the sepia browns of the orchard brought to mind antiques that must lie in attic trunks or deep in ground. The mulberry leaves of the fruitless trees lie attached to the dead branches that have broken, fallen, and lie dying.

This wind that is blowing, along with the heat that propels it, prods the part of me that deals with dying, for the wind, again, stirs all that is dry and light with death, but the warmth is the sense of things living. So that I wonder what it is, what sort of life is it that flows and steers its’ warm breath through the trees?

I have places
Tuned, sanded and I have vanished often,
a habit recent, becoming easy.

Beside a shell,
a path.
A tail
attached to a sphere,
hushing.
Hanging breezeless,
twisting in the ebb,
straightening in the return roll.

Wingless,
I arrive quickly.
Reappearing often, quite no so new. Yet
How am I here,
open-eyed, warm, and half of my self.

I have your tulips in my book,
Your wisteria crawling up the four pillars of the three-floored house you made.

It hangs like moss on the bricks, looks alive as it did in nineteen fifty-four.
You were sixty-seven then.

On a page
you loom above your family of six sons and one daughter.

You stand behind with a bright white shirt,
your too-small tie and buried eyes
beneath brows rolled to moustache.
The bricks are fine.
Your knickered sons stand in line,
palms pressed to spindle thighs, squinting
against the sun,
Besides the tulips,
Under the wisteria. You were forty-nine, then.
I hear stories from one of your sons:
how the clouds of your storms rained whiskey,
The mad dashes for the rifle kept loaded
in the downstairs closet,
The nights he crawled under a bed in the attic with brothers who eyed the iron shaft
while it nosed through the bedskirts.
Their mouths, smiling, are here too.
You, standing tall and sure;
Your hands belonged to the steel mill.

I couldn’t visit you anymore when I was eight.
I looked up the side of the hospital to see an illuminated window, a white square amongst many, a brick.
I thought it was your room and sent you a line.
Something like the time my older sister nudged me in the livingroom you made.
You were on the couch, a widower and eighty-nine beside a basin spattered with dark vomit.
A couch over which the wedding picture hung:
you, sitting in your rock Hungarian way and she standing behind the chair, her white skirts trailing around the side.
(I’d drag the thing out of my closet to see but I’ve done it often; it’s begun to crumble with fingering,
part of her face missing
but neatly bagged at the bottom of the box.)

Becoming Americanized by way of the U.S. Army

by Susan Shotthafer

Dr. J.C. Robinson, Associate Vice President for Academic Personnel at Cal State, describes his two years of service in the United States Army as one of the most delightful experiences.

And just how does a Columbian national become a drafted recruit in the U.S. Army? Dr. Robinson has an interesting explanation.

He said that it was traditional for Colombians of middle and upper class to send their children to college in Europe or the United States, however, Dr. Robinson said that his parents had a second reason for sending him abroad.

About nine percent of the Columbian population are Catholics and all worthwhile schools are operated by the Catholic Church. Dr. Robinson's family was Protestant. He said that his parents hoped to get him away from the school and Catholic influence by sending him to college in the United States.

While trying to decide which graduate school to attend, he changed his student visa to a permanent visa. With this new classification, said Dr. Robinson, he came to report for service in the United States.

"The Army," said Dr. Robinson, "is where I learned what the United States is all about. Prior to that time, in Latin America, I became associated with anyone other than a college educated person."

"All of a sudden I was sleeping in a bunk next to a guy who said he had never before seen an indoor toilet."

"I became familiar with the real folks - people from the woods of Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, and the Oloes from Oklahoma. I acquired a colloquial accent; I became Americanized."

Dr. Robinson said that after finishing his time in the Army he returned to Columbia for several extended visits, but felt somewhat like a stranger - even with his own family. His Americanization resulted in a culture gap which made readjustment very difficult.

He said that he chose to study history as his major in the Ohio State University because he always enjoyed it and believes that "history can help us understand contemporary developments." He hopes we will learn the lessons of history.

Dr. Robinson teaches about history courses a year and enjoys both his jobs at Cal State but said that he wishes he had time to write about and find solutions to United States-Latin American problems.

It is Dr. Robinson's belief that the United States governments have made their greatest mistakes in their relations with Latin America because of a failure to understand the problems of these southern countries in their historical context.

The Administration, whether it is Republican or Democrat, has always viewed our neighbors to the south in the context of this country's relationship with Europe or the Soviet Union," said Dr. Robinson. "When England, Spain, and then Germany were our adversaries, Latin America was regarded in terms of the conflict between great world powers."

"For several decades, the United States has only regarded Latin America in terms of the conflict between the Western and the Communist world, when in the process, the United States and Latin America have nothing to do with the United States-Soviet conflict. The problems of Latin America were produced by local conditions which existed before the United States emerged onto the world scene."

"Many of the problems we face today, whether they be economic or social, are the same problems that existed when I was in the United States, such as the Sandinistas, would not see a need for change. "They are radical only in relationship to the particular conditions of their own society. They would like economic and social conditions in their own society to be similar to what we have here," he said.

A printmaking exhibit is open through Wednesday, April 11 in Gallery 2 of the Visual Arts Building. Featuring students Rebecca Raliegh and Tim Reynolds, and graduate student Gianna Pirelli, the show runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Decorative Arts Show Opens Friday in Gallery

Decorative arts from the 16th to 18th centuries will be shown in the Art Gallery beginning Friday, April 13. A reception, free and open to the public, will preview the exhibit at 7 p.m. that day. A lecture, "The Last Extraordinary Engravings in America by artists of the 18th Century," by Susan Caroselli, associate curator, Los Angeles County Museum of Art, will follow at 8 p.m. in VA 110.

Furniture, paintings, drawings, and ceramics by New England artists, many of whom were part of the Edward-Dean Museum of Decorative Arts in Cherry Valley, will be included in the show. The major portion of the year for the Art Gallery. The 50-piece show is partially funded by a $1500 grant from the California Arts Council.

A second lecture on curatorial practice will be given at noon Monday, April 30, also in VA 110 by Janice Queener-Shaw, former curator of collections at the Edward-Dean Museum.

Paintings, Drawings & Clay 1974-1984 by Frank Romero on Exhibit at Arco Center for Visual Art, April 17- May 26

A mini-retrospective featuring paintings, drawings, and clay created over a 10-year period by Los Angeles artist Frank Romero goes on exhibit at the ARCO Center for Visual Art on April 17 and runs through May 26.

The 42-year-old Romero, a Los Angeles native, exhibits approximately 50 pieces dating from 1974 to the present. For this exhibition he is creating a 24 feet long mural titled "Mexico, Mexico!" painted with brooms of various sizes and which will occupy one entire wall of the gallery.

Located on the B level of Atlantic Richfield Plaza, 505 S. Flower St., the ARCO Center for Visual Art is open Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free and validated parking is available on weekdays at 400 S. Flower St. and in the ARCO Tower parking facility at Fifth and Flower Street on Saturday. For more information contact Fritz Frauchiger, (213) 488-0038.

Dr. J.C. Robinson

Agreat need, besagets, is for the United States to separate out essential need for security in the Western Hemisphere from the social and economic changes in South America.

"For example," he said, "if the United States could persuade the Sandinista government in Nicaragua to detach itself from Cuba and the Soviet Union, but also accept continuation of internal economic and the social reorganization in Nicaragua, that would be ideal."

"If tripped up into our own society, Dr. Robinson believes that revolutionary groups of Latin America, such as the Sandinistas, would not see a need for change. "They are radical only in relationship to the particular conditions of their own society. They would like economic and social conditions in their own society to be similar to what we have here," he said.

Home Computers

by Milton Laurent

The advent of low priced home computers has brought about the explosion of the ownership of home computers. There is now a great need for the novice computer owner to find a source of information on computer operation, programming assistance, trouble shooting and especially a source of low cost software programs. Few computer owners are aware of the existence of Public Domain software programs that are available for less than $10 per program. These low cost programs are available through user's clubs and the number of programs are in the thousands. Subjects range from games to college level education. The great number of utility programs will make novice owners better able to enjoy and use their computers. User groups are individuals banded together to share expertise, knowledge, the latest research trends, new equipment and programs, all related computer information and to make this knowledge available to members. A complete "public domain" library is maintained and members may make copies of this library to build their own personal program library. Meetings are held twice monthly and the general public is invited to two meetings free. For more information call 884-7584 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. daily.

Record Rack: The Scorpions

by Greg Timpany
Album: "Love At First Sting" by the Scorpions

The Teutonic madmen have made yet another trek across the Atlantic, bringing with them another blistering piece of vinyl. "Love At First Sting" has got to be the Scorpions most well rounded effort to date. It has been well received across the Atlantic, bringing the band their most well rounded album effort yet.

The lead guitar work of Matthias Jabs has never been sharper. He approaches his solo work with the tenacity of a shark in a feeding frenzy. He is backed by an incredibly strong rhythm section consisting of Herman Rarebell on percussion, and Francis Buchholz on bass.

Take Charge At 22.

In most jobs, at 22, you're near the bottom of the ladder. In the Navy, at 22 you can be a leader. After just 16 weeks of leadership training, you're an officer. You'll have the kind of job your education and training prepared you for, and the decision-making authority you need to make the most of it.

As a college graduate and officer candidate, your Navy training is geared to making you a leader. There is no boot camp. Instead, you receive professional training to help you build the technical and management skills you'll need as a Navy officer.

This training is designed to instill confidence by first-hand experience. You learn by doing. On your first sea tour, you're responsible for managing the work of up to 30 men and the care of sophisticated equipment worth millions of dollars.

It's a bigger challenge and a lot more responsibility than most corporations give you at 22. The rewards are bigger, too. There's a comprehensive package of benefits, including special duty pay. The starting salary is $17,000—more than most companies would pay you right out of college.

After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, your salary will have increased to as much as $31,000.

As a Navy officer, you grow, through new challenges, new tests of your skills, and new opportunities to advance your education, including the possibility of attending graduate school while you're in the Navy.

Don't just take a job, become a Navy officer, and take charge. Even at 22.
A Tribute To Marvin Gaye

by Greg Timpany

I have oftentimes wondered what possesses a person to take someone's life. For some reason it seems to be happening with greater frequency nowadays. On April 1 in Los Angeles, the singer-extraordinaire Marvin Gaye Jr. was shot in an altercation with his father.

Gaye's career began in the 1960's with a vocal group entitled the Rainbows. He then moved on to become a drummer for Motown Records. In 1962 his first album "Stubborn Kind of Fellow" was released. In 1963 and 1964 he recorded with Smokey Robinson to record "Ain't That Peculiar."

In 1971 Gaye resurfaced with the funk influenced album "What's Going On" in 1973 he scored again with "Let's Get It On." After this album he again withdrew from the limelight and entered a period of personal turmoil. A divorce from Anna Gordy, sister of Motown's Barry Gordy, cost Marvin $600,000 in royalties. He released another album in 1977 entitled "Got to Give it Up." This was followed by another bout of personal problems which almost drove him to suicide.

In 1979 he released "Here, My Dear." This was an emotional album dealing with his second divorce. During 1980 he released "In Our Lifetime." This was Gaye's attempt at creating a concept album. It dealt with his feelings about love, art and death.

In 1981 he signed a $2 million contract with Columbia Records. This deal produced "Midnight Love," and "Sexual Healing." Both albums went platinum, and the latter secured Gaye a Grammy Award. One thing is for certain, whether you liked Gaye's music, the music industry, and the world as a whole, has lost a singer with truly unique talents.

Cal State's Orchestra

by Linda Riddell

Perhaps many of you are not aware that Cal State has the only training orchestra in the entire San Bernardino community. And, perhaps many of you won't hear much sleep over this fact!

This orchestra functions with our volunteer musicians and volunteer musicians from the outlying community. Since our college does not have students studying in all the necessary music disciplines to complete an orchestra, it is necessary to incorporate these musicians from the outside. Fortunately for Cal State, these volunteer musicians do it out of their love for the art and their desire to see students progress from the theory and technical aspect in the classroom to the application of their craft in the orchestra.

In the past, the College/Community Orchestra solicited minimal funding from students and the community in order to merely donate "gas money" to the volunteer musicians," said Dr. Saylor, Music Professor. He states that this is a very small amount to pay considering the value their services offer.

However, the administration has terminated the soliciting of funds for those musicians and the Dean of Students, Dr. Peter Wilson, is out of town and unable to respond to the issue at this time.

"This is an embarrassing situation."

L.A. Puppet Company

The Family Performance Series at Cal State continues Friday, April 13, with a colorful and creative program, "An Asian Fable: Tien Lee and the Fish of Gold." Presented by the L.A. Moving Van and Puppet Company, the stories stress the importance and accessibility of the imagination. This performance begins at 7:15 in the Creative Arts Recital Hall.

The artist mix the magic of puppetry with the excitement of storytelling in three parts.

The show begins with "Martians," in which a flying saucer crashes lands and deposits six aliens on earth. Four explorers search for gold and jewels beyond their wildest dreams in "Boxes," the second tale.

The Chinese fable "Tien Lee and the Fish of Gold," which concludes the program, is the story of an old fisherman and his search for a magic, golden fish.

Dr. Saylor, Music Professor, is the conductor of the Cal State Orchestra.

Car-Rallye Tonight

WHAT?
Coyote 500 Car Rallye

WHEN?
Wed. April 11, 6:00 p.m.

WHERE?
Starts at dorm parking lot

WHO?
CSCSB Students, Faculty, & Staff

HOW?
Bring your car (with gas), a navigator, & sign up at 6 p.m.

HOW MUCH?
Free -- Sponsored by A.S.

WHY?
To test your skill as a driver/navigator team

WHAT ELSE?
THIS IS NOT A RACE!

You and your partner are about to enter a Car-Rallye. One of you will read the directions and the other will drive. You will be directed to follow a certain course at a given average speed.

You will be expected to finish the course in a specific, but specified time. If you come in before or after the set time, your error will be computed in seconds and minutes. Lowest margin of error wins.

Follow each direction, in order, and complete it before moving on to the next one. When directed onto a road, stay on it, until directed differently.

Obey all speed limits. Some of the roads are narrow -- so slow down. There are some food roads which you can make up time, but that should not be necessary.

Dirt roads, alleys, driveways, one way roads going against you, and roads marked not a through street do not count as "Opportunities."

The results will be announced in the Pub one-half hour after the last car finishes.

THIS IS NOT A SPEED CONTEST — YOU ARE DRIVING A Lethal WEAPON.

AT FORD, QUALITY IS JOB #1!

"Get off to a great start with Ford" situation," states Dr. Saylor, "it's an insult to go to these people and ask them to donate their time when they already receive such a miniscule fee."

Dr. Saylor wonders about the value to the college itself. "The cultural health of this campus depends on the interest in the humanities," he adds that "numbers show nursing to be a priority on this campus. Do we throw business administration, because no one has checked books out of the library the sciences." He believes that donating a small fee to the orchestra gives the music experience afforded by performing in this orchestra. He states, "it's very difficult to get a position in an orchestra, but almost impossible without first having played orchestral works in an authentic orchestra environment which this college offers."

Victoria Shapiro, a music graduate of Juillard College in New York and now a part-time lecturer for violin and viola in the Music Department here at Cal State, is one of those musicians who volunteers her time to the college orchestra. Ms. Shapiro states, "I do it because it's my responsibility as an instructor but also for the gratification I receive watching the students progress." She added that "just as you advance in chemistry or physics, the orchestra gives the music students the opportunity to advance in their field." When asked about the difference of orchestral experience from classroom learning of music literature, she said, "I guarantee there is no comparison between classroom training and that of the orchestra itself. For example, no classroom instruction can teach the students the feeling they get when they learn how to blend their violin with the brass."

"The donations are no problem to accumulate," Dr. Saylor said, "the students and the community contribute with enthusiasm and from their love for the art. The problem is that no one seems to be aware of the funding issue and it needs to be addressed!"

THE ARMY ROTC 2-YEAR PROGRAM.
UP TO $1,000 A YEAR PLUS A COMMISSION.

If you passed up Army ROTC during your first two years of college, you can enroll in our 2-year program before your last two years.

Your training will start the summer after your sophomore year at a six-week Army ROTC Basic Camp.

It'll pay off, too. You'll be paid for attending Basic Camp and earn up to $1,000 a year for your last two years of college.

But more important, you'll be on your way to earning a commission in today's Army—which includes the Army Reserve and Army National Guard—while you're earning a college degree.

For more information, call extension 7273 or 7274 or collect to (714) 887-9545. Or visit Capt. Lyon or Capt. Heynen in SS 124. Veterans do not attend the summer camp.

Lack of Organization Causes Problems

The petition currently being circulated by MECUA and BSU charging Associated Students of funding discrimination is a manifestation of the clubs' lack of organization and the lack of communication that exists between the clubs and A.S.

It is the responsibility of the organization requesting funds from A.S. to ask to be put on the Board of Directors' agenda. It is not the responsibility of A.S. to approach the clubs. Both BSU and MECUA have charged that they were unaware of this procedure or the budget presentation process. If they had been organized enough and willing enough to communicate with A.S. or their advisors— who are supposed to know the procedure—they would not be feeling so slighted or discriminated against.

BSU and MECUA have also charged lack of representation in A.S. and on the Board of Directors. Many appointed positions have been filled by minority students. As for the Board of Directors, there was only one racial minority that even ran for a BOD position last year.

If these clubs want minority representation on the Board, they should get involved and run for an A.S. office.

Restrictions on Minors Will Protect Privileges

Given that the majority of fights at the Student Union Pub have involved intoxicated minors and that the pub is being blamed for the intoxicated minors, the privilege to have liquor on this campus is in jeopardy.

We are concerned that the immaturity of a few have jeopardized the privileges of the majority of students on this campus. If restricting minors from the Pub are of the Student Union Board on Thursday nights will help alleviate the fights, then the Student Union Board should vote to restrict minors from the Pub on Thursday nights.

Guest Answer

Language and Society in America

by Dennis Hatcher

The most common form of language manipulation comes from journalists whose job it is to report to the public on issues concerning everyone's daily life. Often, in an effort to personize, or even to anesthetize certain unpleasant situations, writers will distort certain points of view for the reader. If one is left unsure about what has actually been said or meant, then the problem has been solved. In the right circumstance, this method of obscuring truth is known as journalists' logic. By being in a position to try for account of the expanding use of journalese in our society, He lays part of the blame for its popularity on the English language, of all things.

Most of the difficulty in mastering journalese, he wrote, "comes from its slight awkwardness, its impositional, for instance, when used to describe a male, retains its slant in its English meaning, but when used in reference to a female, it always means boilie-aas. Feisty refers to a female journalist as though it is never too short and too easily enraged..."

No journalists groups by the Associated Students is one that I have great concern for. To address this concern I must state that as a member of the A.S. Board of Directors, a petition will not grant the Black Student Union and Mecha a solution. If indeed the board in which I participate on has violated the A.S. Constitution in the area of discriminatory funding I do believe that the review board has the power to enforce legislated penalties. The review board is responsible for interpreting not only the constitution but as well as bylaws, other governing documents, policies and procedures of the Associated Students and has the power to declare as void acts found to be in violation or in conflict with the aforementioned.

I would suggest to any student who has or has not attended a campus dance, took out an emergency loan, used the Book Co-op, played in intramurals, or used any of the other A.S. services or A.S. subsidized services. We have tried in the past and will continue in the future to work fairly with all campus organizations.
