As the world moves into the 1980s, changes will come and they will go, with very few things remaining the same. One of the few things that will remain the same is the need for information. Society has in the past, and will continue, to thrive on information. Information of all types is needed daily by business, government, and the general public to make necessary decisions.

The need for information will remain, but the methods of gathering and preparing information are changing. According to Business Week Magazine in 1980, there was one electronic workstation for every 23 white collar workers employed in the economy. It is projected that by 1989 there will be one electronic workstation for every two white collar employees. This will create a tremendous demand for employees who have at least some knowledge about computers and their peripheral devices.

To prepare students for this onslaught of information, the School of Business and Public Administration has developed a new concentration. The Information Management Concentration was developed by Dr. C.E. Tapie Rohm, Jr. The curriculum was designed to prepare students in the methods of using mainframe and microcomputers for decision making purposes.

The concentration will be offered at three levels. At the Bachelor of Arts level there will be four required and two elective courses. At the Bachelor of Science level there will be six required and three elective courses. Three courses will be required at the M.B.A. level. Courses cover topics such as Information Systems Planning (Admn 471), Information Forecasting (Admn 473), Decision Support Systems (Admn 477), and other areas.

The concentration will fall under the auspices of the Marketing and Management Science Department. At present there are two full-time faculty designated to teach the courses. If you have any questions, phone or stop by the Marketing and Management Science Department in Administration 135.

In a related story, the School of Business and Public Administration has received 24 IBM Personal Computers. The PC Lab will be open during the fall quarter. Currently the

Media Commission Seeking Editors For New Publications

Along with a new designation as a university this fall, Cal State, San Bernardino, will see in action a new organization on campus with the beginning of the 1984-85 school year. During a meeting in May of the Cal State Publications Board, it was unanimously decided to change the name of the board to bring it into line with some of the new roles it would be undertaking in the forthcoming year. The new Media Commission will have the administrative responsibility for all student publications and broadcast activities under its own code.

The commission anticipates winning the years ahead, with the establishment of the new Collegian and the establishment of a University radio and/or TV station.

Both entities, of course, will provide greater service to the School's area of responsibility. The communications department is also chaired by the newest faculty member of the Commission, Dr. Fred Jandt. Two other new members were selected from the several students who filled out applications in the Spring Quarter. Those new members are Carol Leish and Jose Benavides. In addition, along with Dr. Jandt, will serve 2 year terms.

At the last meeting of the Spring Quarter the outgoing Commission voted to approve the publication of a summer newspaper of up to six issues. This will enable the students to reap some further benefits from the Associated Student fees they pay.

During the last meeting an excellent presentation was made by the Jolsten organization on preparing a yearbook. Such a yearbook is imperative for the fall. Jolsten's have indicated that they are prepared to render every assistance in the delivery of a quality product to the students. The difference will probably be in the lateness, to be determined in the Spring Quarter the outgoing Commission voted to approve the publication of a summer newspaper of up to six issues. This will enable the students to reap some further benefits from the Associated Student fees they pay.

EDITORIALS

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

I am writing in regards to the June 6, 1984 issue of the Cal State Chronicle. My specific concern is the articles discussing gay right.

Although I am a “straight” person, I believe there could have been a certain amount of validity in the argument for gay rights, had some evidence been presented to back it up. For example, in the section entitled “Straight Talk”, the following figure was given: “1 out of 10 men and women are gay or lesbian.” Where did this come from? The United States Census Bureau? I sincerely doubt if there has been a nationwide study which has confirmed that statistic. If there is, prove it.

Question 3 discusses the changing of sexuality. One respondent answered to the change of sex by saying: “No, I wouldn’t. I am not proud to be gay per se, anymore than a straight person is proud to be a heterosexual.” This reflection is clearly a contradiction to the other references in the article which describe the “flaunting of heterosexuality.”

In the section on religion and homosexuality, the writer quotes the following passage from the Bible: “Thou shalt not lie with a man as thou would with a woman”, and goes on to refer to the other prohibitions; eg. no pork, no lobster, etc. Do these other prohibitions make the earlier one less effective? If so, how?

I have never “seduced” anyone into heterosexuality, as the article accuses, and I do not appreciate being included in this gross generalization or the paranoid conclusion that non-gays are the oppressive majority.

Perhaps if all the inconsistencies and contradictions were cleared up, a case could be made for gay rights, but as it stands, I am to remain a closed minded heterosexual.
